Then to his conqueror he spake—
"My brother is a king;
Undo this necklace from my neck,
And take this bracelet ring.
And send me where my brother reigns,
And I will fill thy hands
With store of ivery from the plains,
And gold-dust from the sands." "Not for thy ivory nor thy gold
Will I unbind thy chain;
That bloody hand shall never hold
The battle spear again.
A price thy nation never gave shall yet be paid for theo;
For thou shalt be a Christian's slave,
In lands beyond the sea."

Then wept the warrior chief and bade
To shred his locks away;
and one by one each heavy braid
Before the victor lay.
Thick were the plated locks, and long,
And closely hidden there
Shone many a wedge of gold among
The dark and crisped hair. "Look, feast thy greedy eye with gold Long kept for sorest need:
Take it—thou askest sums untold,
And say that I am freed.
Take it—my wife, the long, long day,
Weeps by the cocos-tree,
And my young children leave their play,
And ask in vain for me."

"I take thy gold—but I have made
Thy letters fast and strong,
And ween that by the cocoa shade,
Thy wife shall wait thee long."
Strong was the agony that shook
The captive's frame to hear,
And the proud meaning of his look
Was changed to mortal fear. His heart was broken—crazed his brain:
At once his eye grew wild;
He struggled fiercely with his chain,
Whispered, and wept, and smiled:
Yet wore not long those fatal bands
And once, at shut of day,
They drew him forth upon the sands,
The foul hyena's prey.

Joe Flanagan was the chief. Flanagan has long been known as one of the bitter enemies of the great political parties, from both of which he has repeatedly been expelled, under aggravating circumstances. Writing under this disgrace, he resolved to ruin them both, that his own small party might spring suddenly into power. Various plans were suggested; throwing vast quantities of strychnine into the lakes and rivers was thought of, but religied as it was known that the Dam.

VICTORIA'S COULTSHIP.

Tressubject of this poem was a warrior of majestic stature, the brother of Yarradee, king of the Solima nation. He had been taken in battle, and was brought in chains for sale to the Rio Pongas, where he was stilluted in the market place, his ankles still sidored with the massy rings of gold which he wore when captured. The refusal of the captor to listen to his oders of rancom drove him mad, and he died a manisa.—

"Since that moment Victoria does whatever she fandles I should wish or like, and we talk together a great deal about our future life, which she promises me to make as happy as possible. Oh, the future! does it not bring with it the moment when I shall have to take leave of my dear, dear home, and of you! I cannot think of that Victoria made me this declaration, and I have to take me this declaration, and I have to take not better!"

This is very charming and quite in character with the man. The next is still better, wherein Victoria tells her uncle, the King of Belgium, all about it:

"Mr Dearsst Ucter: This letter will, I am sure, give you pleasure, for you have always shown and taken so warm an interest in all that concerns me. My mind is quite made up, and I told Albert this morning of it. The warm affection he showed me on learning this gave me great pieasure. He seems perfection, and I think, that I have the prospect of very great; happiness before me. I love him more than I can say, and shall do everything in his position. These last few days have passed like a dream to me, and I that I know hardly how to write; but I do feel very happy. It is absolutely necessary that this determination of mine should be known to no one but yourself and to Uncle Erneat until after the meeting of it. Lord Melbourne has acted in this business "Mr. Wade was born at Feeding Hills, Massachusetts, in 1800, and is, therefore, sixty-seven years of age; and he can still shoot a rifle with almost any man in the State. as he has always done towards me, with the greatest kindness and affection. letters to Uncle Ernest, to whom I beg you will enjoin strict secresy, and explain these details which I have not time to do, and to faithful Stockmar. I think you might tell Louise of it, but none of her family.

I wish to keep the dear young gentleman here until the end of next month. Ernest's Col. J. W. Forney, in his Parls letter in the Parss of Saturday, July 27, describes a visit to the Catacombs: sincere pleasure gives me great delight. He does so adore dearest Albert. Ever, dearest visit to the Catacombs:

"The catacombs are only opened for exhibition twice a month, and the anxiety to see them is so great that the authorities issue only a limited number of tickets to prevent a crowd. Placing ourselves in a line like the crowd. Placing ourselves in a line like the voters on election day, only in couples instead of singly, each of us armed with half of a sperm candle, costing three sous, to light our way, we began to descend into the vast charnel-house. The downward stair of ninety steps seemed to be endless; and as the French are the noisiest, though apparently the politest people in the world, their ridiculous laughter and curious cries seemed hideous mockery to our untrained ears. When we reached the last step we found ourselves at the beginning of a sories of galleries, cut through the solid earth, like the galleries in our collieries, and supported by huge stone pillars or abutments. Following our guide, we passed through the main gallery for at last a mile and finally cape to the octagonal. least a mile, and finally came to the octagonal vestibule of the catacombs. This vestibule introduced us into rooms lined from floor to roof with the bones of three millions of human beings. The arm, leg and thigh bones are in front, as closely and regularly arranged together as the best masonry, their uniformity being relieved by long rows of skulls at equal distances, the skulls sometimes assuming the shape of crosses, and always acting as if to relieve the otherwise hideous monotperienced military men to organize and dis-cipline the vast bodies of her citizens, flocking around the national banner—General Von Schrader was among the first to tender his sword. Almost totally unknown, and natur-ally of an unobtrusive disposition, he would, ony. Behind this outer fortress of bones are in corruling, intended to increase their appetites. A few weeks of this practice was followed by such an alarming rise in the price of food in Philadelphis, that the conspirators were obliged to desist for want of founds, and compelled to strike the blow. They left Philadelphis, the price of provisions immediately fell, and went to Washington, where it immediately arose.

Their scheme was to ask the President to appoint them to office. That done, the fate of the nation would be sealed. They had obtained, by peeping through the key-hole of the Agricultural Bureau, the knowledge that the wheat crop would be 200,000,000 bushels; the oist crop, 200,000,000 bushels; the oist crop, 200,000,000 bushels; the oist crop, 200,000,000 bushels; the rice, barley, rye and other crops, 500,000,000 bushels, and these statistics filled them with gratitude to Providence. Joseph decided that each of the five conspirators should hold as many offices as he could get; that the crops should be divided into five rations, to be equally distributed, he being responsible for the consumption of the rye-based of distilled, as personal ildosyntrasies should be straight the country.
