JUDGE SHARSWOOD ON LEGAL Extract from His Opinion in the Case of .. Boric vs. Trott.

lingtown—John Fenstermacher Tamagua—Geo: W. Cole. Port Clinton—C. B. Bertelette.

on the whole, then, I am of opinion that the provision of the act of Congress of February 25th, 1-2, declaring the notes lessed in pursuance of that act to be lawful money, and a legal tender, is that act to be lawful money, and a legal tenaer; is inconstitutional.

This renders it unecessary that I should consider the other question which has been made, as to the effect of the special agreement to pay in lawful silver money of the United States. I am in favor of entering judgment for the plaintiff, but as the majority of the court are of a different opinion, judgment for the defendant."—Copied from the Philadelphia Age of 28d of February, is it, where the opinion is published in full. It may also be found in the Legal Intelligencer of March 18, 1864, page 92. It may also be found in the Legal Intelligencer of March 13, 1864, page 92.

In the same copy of the Age is a carefully prepared enlogy of the judge and this opinion, in which is the following:

Judge Sharswood reasons upon and decides the case as if he were some lofty spirit sitting far shave and out of the contentions and strifes of the world."

Will not the holders of greenbacks and Government bonds consider the judge as quite too elevated and etherial for such earthly honors as a seat on the Supreme Bench?

We raise the above Banner, and intend fighting it at on this line. We propose in the Constitution, increasing the number of Representatives to 400, and Senators 100, limitant he session to 40 days with pay at $6 aday. The Representatives to be elected from single districts Representatives to be elected from single districts incombont the State.

Pass a general law for all corporations beyond the rath of individual enterprise, and no special laws. All corporations with an income not exceeding $25,000, to be granted by the courts. For the balance of the business of the State, 40, and in fact, 30 days, would be sufficient for all the legislation the people require. This is the only plan to break up the present corrupt system, because large bodies in short sessions are not so liable to be corrupted.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SIRBURTON, REAR LONDON, July, 1867. DEAR JOURNAL:—After spending six very quiet days at Baden Baden, where I had a good rest and partook retty freely of hot mineral water as it came from the Spring, I felt greatly recruited and left for Heidelberg, where we visited the rules of the most extensive castie in Europe. They are on the side of the mountain, overlooking the town of Heidelberg, and are among the first objects that attract attention as the town is approached. It took us full two hours to go through hese ruins. In the cellar is the great tune or wine cask, the largest in the world. Its length is about thirty feet, and its heighth about twenty feet, and it is made of wood. The chapel in the castle is in a good state of preservation, and services have been held in it within twenty years, while large trees have grown up n other portions of the ruins. In one portion which has not suffered so much from the ravages of time here is a gallery of paintings to attract the attention of visitors. The castle was formerly the residence of the Electors-Palatine, and they must have been fond of good living, judging from the size of the culinary department which was of extraordinary dimensions, and the chimnies two in number, leading from this deartment measured at least five feet in the clear.-From the castle we ascended to the top of the countain where we found a very soug little cafe, and s very interesting German female attendant, who spoke Ruglish. She pointed out all the beauties of the sur ntry, and took much pains to interest us and also to praise the qualities of the sparkling Neckar, which grew upon the mountain's sides of the beau tiful stream of that name and which laved the foot o the mountain on which we stood. Of course we coul not regist the temptation of testing the quality of this wine, backed by the praises of so interesting a damsel, and some of the party wno professed to be indges pro-nounced it to be superior to any they had tasted in Europe. We were repaid for our trip up this mountain by the magnificent view which presented itself. Below were the rules of the castle and the town of Heidelberg and in the distance lies the valley of the Rhine which spreads out as far as the eye can reach, and which here is almost as level as a floor covered with variegated crop ripening for the husbandman. Through this magnifucent valley, both the rivers Rhine and the Neckar wind a serpentine course until they finally unite their waters at Manheim, which could be seen in the distance Finding that we were almost entranced with this view our beautiful 'Maid of the Mountains," furnished us with glasses of different colors to look through, and the effect was grand beyond description. Many prefer the scenery of the mountains, covered with beautiful foliage, and so do we, but we do admire a beautiful agricultural district, teeming with bountiful crops, just ripening into maturity, although it may be stripped of the green foliage of trees, for in all the vast extent o garden culture, there was scarcely a tree to be seen and no dividing line separating the numerous farms from each other. It is true that such scenes will soon made when it first burst upon our view from the position we occupied. We spent Sunday evening in Heidelberg, and tool strolithrough the streets to witness the town at night. We were surprised to find a regular ball in prorees at one of the principal hotels, which appeared to be attended by fashionable people, as many arrived in eir carraiges; and nearly all the places of business and particularly the numerous beer houses, were open the same as on week days. In this respect there is not much difference between France and those parts of Germany which we have visited, and accounts for the lisposition manifested by so many Germans to break down our Sabbath laws, which is one of the marked ng men here. features of our country, and a great safeguard in protecting the rights of the working classes of all grades. I have extended this letter too much already, and herefore, I will bid my readers adieu for the present. to this day of rest guaranteed to them by the laws of God and man.

for relief: but we shall never forget the impression if

From Heidelberg we took the cars via Manheim and the celebrated town of Worms to Mayence, where we took the steamer down the Rhine to Cologue.— From all that has been written about the Rhine and its views, we certainly expected a great treat, and provi ded ourselves with Panarama's Book of Legends, &c but we must confess, although it may be very unfash. ionable to do so, that we met with a greater disappoint ment here than in any part of Europe through which we traveled. The scenery on the Hudson River beween New York and Albany is certainly more beauti ful, and as to the rulned castler, &c., with the excepion of two or three that have been restored by th King of Prussia they might nearly all be stowed away Americans who were on the steamer expressed the same disappointment, and just as we were taking Pottsville, who was en route to meet her son of the TO AMEND THE STATE CONSTITUTION Navy, who had just arrived in Europe, to whom we ex seed our disappoin ment. She replied that the either by steamer or car, passing down the river, bu must be seen from different points on the mountain and other positions, and they will then grow upon you the longer you view them. This we presume, is the case, and therefore, but few tourists from the Uni ted States, who merely take a trip on steamer or rail secome so enraptured as those who have so graphically portraved them. The fairy tale, German legends, o course attracts an interest to these views and the river n which they are located, which could not be felt under other circumsances-except so far as they speak as it were, the history of the dark ages in which they originated. What attracted our attention the most war tain sides. This was most wonderful. In many places the of feet the hill sides were covered with the vine grow ing quite luxuriantly; and in order to keep up the ground very few feet a stone wall was built from, say two to three feet high, to support from three to six eet of soil from washing away, in order to plant the vines. In some places the cultivated ground was so steep that we could not realize from below how any erson could stand without slipping down. It can only Rhine wine is produce. We had intended taking part of two days to view Rhine, by stopping at Coblentz, where the King of Prussia has a small palace, but the disappointmen vas so great to the whole party of seven American whom I met on board, that we proceeded at once to ologne, where we tarried a day. This is the place which furnishes the celebrated Farini's Ran de Cologne mantity for domestic consumption, as it is decidedly equire a considerable quantity to purify the gutters, We determined to find out the original firm if possible because in every street you are met with signs announ cing themselves as the genuine manufacturers, which we did through the aid of a zuide, and purchased a bottle for where,) and we were really paid for our trouble, beiful woman in every sense of the word, we had seen in Germany, and gentle reader we should like to know who is not fo nd of looking at beautiful women? Cologne has a population of about 105,100, and the believe, and is still unfinished, but progressing, is the great attraction. It is the third at present in point of size, in Europe. St. Peters at Rome, and St. Pauls at London, only cover more ground. This Cathedral is 532 feet in length, 223 broad, and the two towers (on which they are now at work,) when completed, are to be 532 feet high. The nave is 160, and the aisles 86 feet high. There is a steeple on the building finished over 800 feet high from the ground. We seconded it to the heighth of 250 feet, the highest ridge of the roof, which gave us a magnificent view of the city, the country around, and the valley of the Rhine. Work was sus pended about 400 hundred years ago on these towers, and the crane by which the stones were hoisted up a that period still stands on a part of the tower. As a piece of mechanism it is quite simple but answered the purpose. On the top of this tower we observed plants doubt carried there, and grew in the soil produced by the other tower they are at work, and they suppose that in about 25 or 30 years the Cathedral will be completed. A portion of the old work, however, has decayed a nuch, since it was commenced, that it will have to be estored, before it can be fully finished. It is certainly one of the finest cathedrals in Europe, and it would con-The house in which Rubens was born and Maria of Having been buried in a trance of pulsation having ceased, she recovered and burst the coffin, and made her way to the dwelling of her hus band in the night, knocked at the door and requested ad the husband declared it impossible, that he had buried his wife that afternoon. On the steamer down the Rhine we met four gentlemen from Cincinnati, who had just returned from a is Principal, will begin on the 18th and 19th visit to Rome. They arrived at Rome about the time instant. Among the candidates for the Baci the extreme heat at Marsellles compelled us to retrace calaura, we observe the name of Miss Clara our steps, much to our regret. But their experience ing through Italy and the Roman States, they were populed to submit to the process of famigation nine an address. The fear of the spread of the cholers, which had broken out at Rome should remember that Wm. M. Randall, or Funigated Yankee," was the result of one of the unfortunates, warning his fellow tourists to beware of the fumigating boxes. We, of course, left rejoiced that we escaped, because in our state of health, if subjected to the Poor at private sale, about three acres of up individual, and our readers—well we'll just stop the choicest part of the Poor House farm at a here, and give them time to reflect upon such an awful less price than they would nave commanded at public eale, and that he showed his gratiof Belgium." It is a very neat city, resembling Parison tude for the favor by having a law passed increasing the pay of the Directors to four mail way is the city. There is nothing very attractive furniture in both houses are arranged in a similar man er to those in the Capital in Washington. The build g also contains the library, and the walls of the antimbers, &c., are decorated with many valuable pain igs by distinguished artists. We noticed a singu fountain in one of the public streets, representing a fine looking little boy in the natural state, which co titutes the fountain. We were rather struck with its saturalness, when riding past in company with several iadies, but we were informed that this fountain has a great many admirers, and is frequently decorated with flowers and evergreens. The people in Bruseels, and particularly the ladies we presume, have a great deal of curiosity, as many of the dwellings have mirrors attached to the windows, and so arranged with corresponding mirrors inside, by which they can observe all passers by, without being seen themselves. This seen be a peculiarity here and in Antwern, which we also visited for the purpose of seeing the great master-piece of Rubens, the descent of our Saviour from the cross which adorns the Cathedral in that city. This paint ing was carried to France by the first Napoleon, but restored again in 1815. The French fixed the value of his painting at a million and a half of france, which would be $300.000 in our currency, consequently it is Belgium resembles England in the aspect of the ountry. The landscape is dotted with trees, and the great hedge rows also make their appearance. The anulacturing towns also appear to be nearly as nuerous as in England, but not so extensive of course s yet, but the country has prospered to an unexampled extent under her protective policy, which dates back not over afteen or twenty years. In many articles Belgium now undersells England in her own markets, while labor is better rewarded new than under the free rade policy which formerly prevailed. It is the introduction of machinery, which is never introduced in any country except under protection to do the labor of man, which cheapens products and increases consumption, by making what were formally considered inxuries onsamed by the few. within the reach of all, and of ourse, benefits all classes by increasing consumption The crops in Belgium appeared to be heavy, but the wheat was nearly all beaten down in the fields by the frequent rains, which was likely to injure the quality.

At this writing all the information from both England and the continent, does not promise more than an average crop if that is reached, and so far prices have not r ceded, but have been firmly maintained. The weather now is very favorable for the gathering of the crops, and if it should continue will enrich England many After returning to England from the continent I must confess that England is the most bean iful and ire the eye, and we turn to the mountain scenery again hoped that all the Gulf States will follow her example.
The extra session of Congress ought to have impeached
Andrew Johnson, and removed him. The moral effect of such a proceeding in Europe would be tremendous, in strengthening the feeling in favor of the permanency of our republican institutions. Many intelligent men here do not believe that our " paper laws." would bear such pressure without causing an outbreak, but the crushing of such a fremendous rebellion, the impeachment and removal of a traitorous Presilent, under the constitution, without impeding the wheels of government one iota, would entirely disal-the Rebellion he often by his dash and bravery, snatched victory from what seemed inevitable defeat, and revivified not only his soldiers but the nation. Can we ever forget how when in 1864, Grant's forces were pounding at the rebel stronghold at Petersburg, Early's veteran troops, the flower of the rebel army, came aweeping down the Virginian valley threatening the capture of Washington, invasion of Pennsylvania and defeat of Grant's plan? Can we forget the painful apprehension which filled the public mind, of great, impending disaster to the National cause? At that critical period in the history of the war, Sheridan met and beat back the rebel forces-swent them ultimately from the valley, horse, foot and dragoon, and they never returned as an organized army.-The effect of Sheridan's presence upon his brave boys was electric. They never fought o well as under the eye of "Little Phil."-Our gallant Ninety-sixth which was in that campaign under him, knows this. One of the finest episodes was Sheridan's ride to the front on the day that his army had been forced back by an unexpected and impétuous attack of the enemy. The third anniversary of that daywill be on Thursday next, September 19. The event is so graphically described in T. Buchanan Reed's celebratrated poem, that we republish it: Up from the South at break of day, Bringing to Wiuchester fresh dismay,

The afficiated nir with a shadder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door,
The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away. And wider still those billows of war Thundered along the horizon's bar; And londer yet into Winchester rolled The roar of that red sea uncontrolled, Making the blood of the listener cold. As he thought of the stake in that flery fray, But there is a road from Winchester town,

But there is a roa from wincheser town.
A good broad highway leading down:
And there, through the flush of the morning light,
A steed as black as the steeds of night,
Was seen to pass, as with esgle flight,
As it he knew the terrible need;
He stretched away with his nimost speed;
Hills rose and fell; but his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away. Still sprung from those swift hoofs, thundering soul The dust, like smoke from the cannon's mouth; Or the trail of a comet, sweeping faster and faster, Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster. The heart of the steed, and the heart of thermaster Were heart in the prisoners assaulting their walls. Impatient to be where the battle-field calls: Rvery nerve of the charger was strained to full play with Sheridan only ten miles away.

Under his spurning feet the road Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed, And the landscare sped away behind Like an ocean fiving before the wind, And the steed, like a bark fed with furnace ire Swept on, with his wild eye full of fire. But lo! he is nearing his heart's desire; He is smulfing the smoke of the roaring fray, With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the General saw were the groups Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops, What was done? what to do? a glance told him both Then striking his spurs, with a terrible oath, He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas And the wave of retreat checked its course there,' And the wave of recursions and the wave of recursions and the master compolled it to pause.

The sight of the master compolled it to pause.

With foam and with dust the black charger was gray:
By the flash of his eye, and the red nosiril's play.

He seemed to the whole great army to say,
I have brought you Sheridan all the way.

From Winchester, down to save the day!

Hurrah! hurrah for Sheridan! Hurrah! hurrah for horse and man! And when their statues are placed on high, Under the dome of the Union sky, The American soldier's Temple of Fame; The American so dier's Tempis of Fame; There with the glorious General's name, Be it said, in letters both bold and bright, "Here is the steed that saved the day, By carrying Sher'dan into the fight, From Winchester, twenty miles away!" After the war closed Sheridan discharged important military duties in the South, more recently in New Orleans, to the satisfaction of loyal men throughout the country. Removed by Andrew Johnson for his patriotic course, he goes West bearing with him the love and respect of the loyal American people. Some idea of his popularity may be gleaned from his reception in St. Louis on Tuesday night last. He was honored with the most imposing demonstration ever witnessed in that city. Twenty posts of the Grand Army of the Republic were in torch-light procession, which was over two miles in length, and was composed in addition to the soldiers, the fire department, clubs from the various wards, and the different colored orv of the Southern Hotel, where he was sur. ounded with his staff, members of committees and privileged persons. The crowd, about the hotel was immense, and it was estimated that fully thirty thousand persons turned out to honor the illustrious soldier.-Gov. Smith and Carl Schurz made addresses to the General, who replied very briefly giv ing thanks for the reception. Thus will it ever be with those who are true to their country. Living, they will be EDITORS JOURNAL .—The general depression of business seems to be prevalent throughout the country, pwing to the unsettled condition in a pocountry, bwing to the unsettled condition in a political aspect, and the consequent lack of copfidence on the part of capital and of business men generally. But we, in this portion of the Anthracite Coal Regions, are compelled to bear a double portion of the burden in the loss of valuable time and labor.

Trade and business in other portions of the Anthracite Coal Regions, the Lebigh and Wyoming, is not, more depressed than the general business operations of the country. Our miners and is borrs have been compelled to seek employment in other Coal Regions for the past year, and at present, hundreds are leaving every week for the West and the "Old Country.

The prospect for the coming Winter is extremely gloomy. Property of all kinds continues to be

It is prospect to the coming where is extreme y gloomy. Property of all kinds continues to be depressed, and the prices offered or realized for such mines and coal lands as the exigencies of the times compel to seek the market, are merely nominal, and no one would think of submitting to the sacrifice unless compelled by stern neces-sity. Those who have the means and the cour-sor to have and improve are sure to realize, but sity Those who have the means and the courage to buy and improve, are sure to realize, but unfortunately, we are generally compelled to sell rather than buy.

In seeking the cause of this state of things, we cannot see why our trade should be more depressed than that of our neighbors, unless it exists in our inability to reach the coal markets in competition with others. We can appreciate and painfully realize the unfavorable condition in which we are alsaed in regard to competition in which we are placed in regard to competition in the market. In the additional cost of transpor which we are placed in regard to competitud in the market. In the additional cost of transportation over our monopolizing lines is where our profits for if we could share in the enormous profits of our transportation; if one million; of the profits of the Reading corporation for the past few years, were divided among our coal operators; it would infuse life and confidence in our community and give us a surplus of profits inators, it would intuse life and consudence in our community and give us a surplus of profits instead of loss. But even under the burdens we bear in this respect, if we had our proportion of the trade; we would have less reason to complain, when we not only suffer loss in the cost of our transportation to market in competition with our neighbors, but lose a million tons of our proportion of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage it is time that every principal of the cost tage.
