LECTURE CONCERNING SKATING.

Mark Twain, of California, has come on East with his family. The wife of his bosom having tried skating and failed, is thus talked to by her lord and master:

"O, go to sleep, you old fool!"

"Mr. Twain, I am surprised and grieved to ——"

"Don't interrupt me, woman! I tell you it's absurd—you learn to skate! You'll be wanting to play fairy in the 'Black Crook' next. I tell you skating is an accomplishment suited only to youth and grace, and comeliness of face, and symmetery of figure. Nothing is so charming as to see a beautiful girl, in the coquettish costume of the rinks, with cheeks rosy with exertion, and eyes beaming with excitement, skimming the ice like a bird—and sweeping down upon a group of gentlemen, and pretending she can't stop herself, and landing in the arms of the very young man her father don't allow her to know—and darting away again and falling on her head and exposing herself—to remarks about her carelessness. Madam—hold you tongue!—and always taking care to fall when that young man is close by to pick her up. It is charming! They look pretty and interesting, too, when they are just learning—when they stand still a long time in one place, and then start one foot out gingerly, and it makes a break for the other side of the pond and leaves the balance of the girl sprawling on this side. But you! You look fat, and awkward, and disgraceful enough at times; but when you are on skates you waddle off as 'stuffy and as stupid and ungainly as a hazzard that's had a half a horse for dinner. I won't have it, Madam! And you get under a precarious headway and then put your feet together and drift along, stooping your head and shoulders and holding your arms out like you expected a church was going to fall on you; it aggravates the life out of me! and Tuesday, when I was ass enough to get on skates myself, and kicked the Irish Giant's eyes out the first dash, and lit on my head and cracked the ice so that it looked like the sun with all its rays dropped where I struck, and they fined me ninety-two dollars for ruining the man's pond, I was terrified with the conviction that I had gone through to the inside of the world; because I saw the parallels of latitude glimmering all around me, and what was it but you, in your awkwardness, fetching up over me with your 'fillers' on? You've got to discard those things. I can't stand the pew-rent and I won't."

"Mr. Twain, I am surp——"

"Hold your clatter! I tell you you shan't bring odium upon the family by your disgraceful attempts to skate; prawling around with your big feet like a cow plowing her way down hill in slippery weather. May be you wouldn't be so handy about displaying those feet of yours if you knew what occurred when I took your shoes down to get mended."

"What was it? Tell me what it was; tell me what it was this minute! I just know it was one of your lies!"

"Oh, don't mind; it ain't of any consequence; go to sleep."

"But it is of consequence! You've got to tell me; you shan't aggravate me this way; I won't go to sleep till I know what it was."

"Oh, it wasn't anything."

"Mr. Twain, I know better! You're just doing this to drive me to distraction! What did that shoemaker say about my shoe? What did he do? Quick!"

"Well, if you must know, he—he—however, it's of no consequence."

"Mr. Twain."

"Well, he—he took it and gazed upon it a long time in silence, and put his handkerchief to his eyes and burst into tears."

"Why you born fool! Twain, are you going stark, staring crazy?"

"He just stood there and wept as if his heart would break, poor devil! There, now let's go to sleep!"

"Sleep, you lunatic, I'll never close my eyes till I know what that idiot was crying about—and you won't either, I can tell you that.—Come."

"O, it isn't worth while."

"Mr. Twain, if you say that again, I'll make you sorry for it; what was the numskull crying about."

"Well, he—he—"

"Well, h-e—h-e—what? Out with it! do you want me to—to, Twain, I'll snatch them pot fringes off till the side of your head is as bald as the top of it!"

"Well, he—poor fellow! he said he doted on his grandmother—fairly doted on her. She had nursed him, you know, because his mother was always feeble. Well, he came to this country fifteen years ago, and first he set up to the vegetable line, and got along pretty well, and was about to send to England for the old lady, and when hard times came he got broke. He went into fruit then, and after that into milk—into 'all sorts of things, you know, but he got disappointed every time till this present business fetched him out at last, all right, and he set off for the old woman.—She landed here four weeks ago, buckled the very same night. It was hard, very hard, after all his waiting and toiling for fifteen years, to get her over here at last and have her die on his hands. He—he—well, he was disgusted. However, he laid her out, and he and his friends sat up with her, and by-and-by the memories of her virtues softened his bitterness and turned it to a tender grief—a settled melancholy that hung about his spirits like a pall for many days. However, by patiently striving to keep sad thoughts out of his mind, he was finally beginning to regain some of his old-time cheerfulness when your shoe reminded him so painfully of his poor sainted grandmother's coffin——"

"There take that, you brute! and if you dare to come back here I'll kick you out again! You degraded old ruffian!"

THE SLEIGHOE SLEWED.—The "Fat Contributor" in a recent contribution to the Cincinnati Times thus relates the downfall of Stebbins as follows:

Great flakes of snow the air did fill, clothing in white both dale and hill. Livery men rubbed their hands in glee the fall of the beautiful snow to see. Young Stebbins saw the snow a-fallin' and that very day he went a callin' on his Dulcinea, Susie Brown—there isn't a prettier girl in town—and asked at once, without delaying, "if she would with him go a sleighing?" The shades of night were falling fast when along a certain road there passed a horse and sleigh and two young folks, covered with robes and shawls and cloaks. Tuse up your harp, my gentle muse, the maiden fair was Stebbin's Susie, and the festive youth who held the ribbens was no one else but Susie's Stebbins. Away they glide this joyous load, passing all others on the road. The steed himself enjoyed the fun—he sometimes trotted, and sometimes run. To him this pace no horse was able, although he came from a livery stable. And now they stopped their foaming steed—not as Stebbins said, to "feed," but on the sly (the wicked thing!) to get himself a hot-gin sling. One sling required another, just for company for his brother; and he slung in slings of gin and sich till he felt immensely rich, and wanted to bet a pile of tin no man could beat him driving in. As quick as ever the horse was brought they flew away as quick as thought, Stebbins laying on the lash, and Susie's sleigh she'd left her sash. But Stebbin's skin being filled with gin, he said he didn't care a pin—no one should beat him to town if she had lost everything but her gown. Flying swiftly past the Mill Creek stream, a snowbank, then a sudden scream—the sleigh tipped over, out they shot over the fences into a vacant lot. The horse kept on at a smashing pace, and never slackened in the race until he met his owner face to face.

There is a moral to our tale that should be headed by every male. Don't drink slings till you are slung into a lot from out your "prog," and when your are out on a whirl, desiring sympathy to sleigh your girl, be careful, sir—don't think as rude—that in sleighing her, you don't get sleyed.

MASONRY.—"Was Uncle Paul a Mason?" Ika asked of Mrs. Partington, as he stood looking at the rigid profile of the ancient corporal of the "Bloody Eleventh" that hung on the wall.

"No, he was a veteran sergeant, naturally, though he took in gardening afterwards, and raised the wonderful squashe, that always took the primer at the horticultural fair?"

"I mean was he a Free Mason?" continued Ika.

"O, dear, no," replied she, "and I'm glad of it, for they are a great deal too free in throwing their plaisterin' round, which is very smortarfying, and takes the color out of things so; and when they whitewashed the kitchen didn't they make free with the Calmy Iend rum which they mistook for a cordial? and I wish to gracious it had been a'mettic to have taught 'em a lesson to be a little less free next time!"

"But, free Masons," said Ika, petulantly, "don't masons; I mean the fellow that built the temple."

"O!" she exclaimed, them? well, dear, I have heard of a good many things they did, and then again I have heard of a good many things they didn't, and so between 'em both I don't believe neither. It is a great mystery!" she whispered, "and if they did kill Morgan, they ought to have done it if they agreed to, tho' 'twas a bad thing for him. But I never believed the story told of his smelling up Niagary Falls in a potash kettle with a crowbar, which is preposterous, and as for the gridiron—thereby hangs a tale, and the Lord knows what they do in their secret cemeteries, when they get on the aprons of their clothes by mistake and cut up all sorts of capers, so my ackledging of the ridiculous sprunks which make 'em look so queer."

The interest of Ika had ceased, and he had turned his attention to anointing the cat with an application of soft soap.

VERY DESIRABLE COAL ESTATE FOR SALE.—The Executors of James Dundas, Deceased, and the Executors of William Richardson, deceased, will sell all that valuable tract of coal land known as the

"Catherine Groh" Tract,

Situate in the Case and Foster Townships, Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania.

This tract contains 424 acres, almost all of which are underlaid with proven seams of coal. The tract has three distinct basins on it, viz:—The First or Southern Basin, between the Mine Hill and Peaked Mountain; the Middle or Grand Basin, between the Peaked Mountain and Broad Mountain, and the Northern or Lagrange Basin on the Broad Mountain. The course of the veins averages about 1700 yards.

The Middle Basin contains ALL the known veins from the "Big Orchard" down to the first in the series of the measures, including the MAMMOTH—being ten veins in all, of the aggregate thickness of over seventy feet.

There are now two first class collieries on the tract, viz: The "Glen Carbon"—under lease, which expires October, 1871—and "The Peaked Mountain,"—the lease of which expired 1st of January, 1867, and which is now untenanted. There is ample capacity for a third colliery in the First or Southern Basin, whose operations for years would be above water level. The improvements, which will be sold with the lease, consist of one new, large, powerful Cornish Pumping Engine, 500 horse power, built by Mr. Wentz of Pottsville, with all its appurtenances, in complete order, four fifty horse-power and one sixty-horse power Hoisting and Pumping Engines, 28 Miners' Houses, one large Store Store and Dwelling House, Reservoir, Water Pipes, stables, and various other valuable properties.

Besides the estate in fee, the undersigned will sell along with it the right possessed by the estate to mine coal above water level on the adjacent lands of the Forest Improvement Company between certain points.

For further information, parties contemplating a purchase, are invited to call at the office of the undersigned, where they may examine the inventory, maps, surveys and Engineer's report of this tract. The terms of sale will be made very liberal.

MINE HILL GAP COLLIERY TO RENT.—The Colliery now worked by Messrs. Wm. Kerr & Co., on the Gatty and Wagner estate, will be leased on favorable terms to an experienced operator, from April 1st, 1868, the date of the termination of the present lease. It is situated on the line of the Mine Hill Railroad, eight miles from Schuylkill Haven, and has a run of two and a quarter miles of the North Dip of all the veins in the Mine Hill Basin. The slope is at the Mine Hill Gap at the saddle of the track, the depth is but one lift below the water level, and in this lift the Gunsky and Church Veins are yet to be worked. The improvements are in good condition and capable of taking out and preparing a large quantity of coal.

Testimonials.

POTTSVILLE, November 14th, 1867.

G. W. MACKINS, Esq., President American Packing Co.:—I packed the stuffing-boxes of the 45-horse power steam engine at the Schuylkill County Lumber Co.'s works on the 9th of August last with the above Packing, and I find this Packing far superior to what is called Miller's Soap-stone: the Gum, or any other packing that I have used in an experience of 15 years as an engineer. THOMAS CORBY.

Thomas Corby has been employed by our Company several years in the capacity of engineer, and for truth in his statements is entirely reliable.

C. W. PITMAN, Treas. Schuylkill Co. Lumb. Co.

POTTSVILLE, November 18th, 1867.

AMERICAN PACKING COMPANY:—On the 21st of August last I received from G. W. Mackins, Esq., President ahout 7 lbs. of this Packing; gave it to Isaac Stall, the engineer running the locomotive Lazerne, between Pottsville and Philadelphia, for the purpose of trial. He filled the stuffing-boxes on one side the engine with this Packing and the other side with Miller's Soap-stone Packing. The engine has been running ever since, and this Packing is still good, without repacking, while the soap-stone Packing has had to be renewed the third time.

FRANCIS ROBOTTOM.

The above statement of Francis Robottom is true and correct and I consider this Packing the best yet offered for sale: I have an experience of 16 years as an engineer. ISAAC STALL.
