Instructing Senators.

Senator Conkling is reported to have said, a few days ago, in explanation of his course act according to his best judgment, regardless of the instructions of the Legislature from whom he holds his office. This avowed independence brings up anew an old question in federal politics, which we had supposed was settled long ago.

The theory of our whole government is one of absolute responsibility upon every officer. From beginning to end it consists of delegated power, primarily originating in the people, and controlled by them. Members of the lower House of Congress are directly responsible to the people of their Districts; the Senators represent States and are responsible to the Legislatures by whom they are appointed; and it was long ago conceded that, upon principle, the Senators should be controlled by the Legislatures, and obey their instructions. Hence it is that all concurrent resolutions, by Legislatures, addressed to Congress, read: "Our representatives are REQUESTED, and our Sepators are INSTRUCTED" to do so and so. Without going into the old arguments upon the subject of Senatorial subordination, it is sufficient to say that Senator Conkling has taken a bold, and it may be, a dangerous step.

THE PUBLIC CREDIT-CAUSE AND EFFECT.-Andrew Johnson went out of the White House with the bill pledging payment of the national debt in coin or its equivalent in his pocket. The new Congress speedily passed a similar measure and straightway President Grant pronounced it good by affixing his signature. The fact was telegraphed abroad and American five-twenties rose to 84 sterling money in London, at which figure they were reported firm on Saturday. This is equal to 92 in American gold. On the 3d of March, these bouds stood at 813. We then had an advocate of repudiation in the and Capt. John Evans, of Rochester, Executive chair: we now have a man whose first words were: "To protect the national honor, every dollar of the government indebteduess should be paid in gold, unless and there was about 5,000 insurance. expressly stipulated in the contract." These words have steadily improved our credit, and now that the first bill signed by President Grant is one for strengthening the public credit, American securities are rapidly in- the chain was attached. The opponents of manhood suffrage and universal civil rights, have relied upon Pennsylvania as one of the States which, though having a Republican Legislature, would yet truckle to effete prejudices by refusing to endorse the great crowning measure of Republican government, Happily they have been disappointed, and from their disappointment we gather renewed confidence that New York, Ohio, and every State which at the last election endorsed this distinctive feature of the canvass by electing Republican Legislatures, will come squarely up to the issue stitution.
