A TRAVELBES STORY

BY ITHEL DACAE.

"Is this seat engaged, sir?" I glanced up from the paper I was reading, and met the smiling regard of a geniallooking gentleman, apparently in the prime

"It is not, sir-"

"With your permission, then," and he seated himself beside me.

The train had already started, and presently the conductor made his appearance collecting the tickets. Reaching us, he detached the appropriate coupeus from our tickets, handing back the remainder with the unusual "check."

"l'ardon me," said my companion, "but I perceive that you place your ticket in your wallet."

"Yes."

"It is unwise, unsafe."

"Why do you considerate it so?" I inquired, with some curiosity, returning my wallet to my pocket.

"Suppose through carelessness, or we will say accident, your wailet is lost. Your pocket may be picked, for instance?"

"Your money and ticket are both gone. Probably you do not appreciate the manifold beauties of such a position; I do not think it possible except by experience."

"It would certainly be an undesirable situation, I can see that clearly enough. Pardon the question naturally suggested -were you ever so placed?"

"Once : once once."

"How was thuc?" "You wish to profit by my experience Well I don't know that I mind telling you the story. It may serve to amuse you, if nothing more.

I. occurred quite a number of years ago and over what road I was traveling at the time is of little consequence. I had taken the early morning express train, and being wemewhat tired and altogether sleepy, had streehed myself upon the seat for as comfortable a nap as circumstances would admit. I slept soundly, for I could in those days, sleep well almost anywhere, and did not awaken until the conductor came for could not be found. I was positive I had purchased a ticket; indeed, I . remembered distinctly having shown it to the baggage clerk at the time of checking my trunk. The encluster grew impatient, passed to Thankful for the patronage neretologoes the end of the car and returned to the car and returned to the car and returned to prietor, hopes, by paying strict attention to the comfort and convenience of guess, to discovery that my pocket book also was gone. I explained to the conductor that my pocket had been picked and in proof of my story showed him my baggage check. It was uscless. If you have traveled much, you are aware that a virtuous conductor takes no man's word; in fact, all men have designs upon the company's dividends except himself. It is perfectly natural, therefore that the faithful steward in question should say :

"The check is all right; but how do I and put you off, as you choose."

What could I do? Protestations amount. by their looks and expressions, that they of humanity came in, and resolving that he thought me a sneaking rogue, who would should be the last, I went to work upon steal a passage if I could. They paid their him. When he came to pay me, I was, to ment were rendered by jury-except them.

My search for the lost ticket had brought I gave it to him. From Lauderdale, a city of much importance, I could write to my partner for money. It would certainly be the cries of "stop thiei," and the like, grow- hen nor nothin' you'd lend me for a few as well as to tramp ten miles back to the city ing louder and increasing. What an up- weeks, have you, neighbor?" I had left, and where I should be no better roar there was! Suddenly came a flish of "I'll lend you one with pleasure," replied-

This business attended to, I sallied out to see what of a place Lauder dale City might be. There was nothing told heavily against me; but my story be- a dozen chichens. for me to do but to amuse myself as best I ing fully coaroborated by the boy at the The Yankee was again puzzled; he could could until the money should come, and I barbar shop, I was released.

"Daily Banner ; extra edition ; all about the murder : great accident on the E-road !" etc., etc. Have an extra ?" I took the sheet and thrust my hand in my pocket for the money but without a moment's thought. You may imagine my feelings when compelled to return that two. penny bit of paper to the boy, with the muttered excuse that I ' had no change," and the utterly contemptuous expression on the boy's face as he received it! I immediately stepped into the office of the Daily Banner and wrote a paragraph descriptive of my recent mishap, taking care to make it as amusing as possible. When completed I handed it to the clerk. He read it, laughed and took it onto the private office. Coming back in a few minutes af. ter, he told the book keeper to give me fifty cents. It was not much, but more than I expected. Well, I continued my walk until I finally reached the end of the stree', which terminated at the S- River, here spanned by a long bridge. I crossed the bridge and was surprised to see, upon reaching the opposite side, that I would be requird to pay toil A young girl came to the door of the little toll office as I stepped up to it and inquired how much I should pay, drawing forth my solitary shipplaster "O," she said, with a smile and a slight

My first duty the next morning was to seek some knight of the ruzor. I had no ticed a pleasent little shop at no great dis tance from the hotel, in my walk the previous day, and thinking that I should do no better by looking further, I repaired to that. SOLDIERS "HOMES." One of the saidest and most humiliating sights American eyes can see is that of a maimed and shartered soldier of the Union incapacitated by reason of his wounds from providing for himself, reduced to the necessity of begging his bread. And yet in the great cities-those human hives where the preponderance of mouths to be filled is al. ways vastly in excess of the supply of food to fill them -- the spectacle of a battle-scar. stalwart frame, clad in the old army blue. beggary!

This being true, all good people, and eswill learn with great gratification that el forts are being made to provide "homes" tor disabled soldier's in the several States Such an asylum now exists in Ohic in which hundreds of our gallant boys find a secure retreat from the sufferings of poverty, and in New York a meeting was recently held to consider the crection of a "home" for its soldiers. One of the largest audiences ever assembled in the Coopen Institute answered the call, and the proceedings were of the per. most encouraging nature. General SHER-MAN made a noble speech, in which he GONE THROUGH THE WAZE. - We have employed in our office a man who has been in the English army thirty five years : was at the seige of Lucknow; had both of his ears out off while sticking his head out of a sallyport. He afterwards served on the staff of Wellington at Waterloo, and subsequently accompanied Bonaparte in his celebrated Egyptian campaign, where he was arrested for conviving at an elepement with the Sphyox, and was confined in the pyramids for three years. He has been in red hero, with but the remnant of his own 481 pitched battles, and a great many that were not pitched.
