HOMINY PUDDING. - Prepare as for batter cakes, add one egg for each pint, some whole cinnamon, sugar to suit taste, and a few raisins; bake like rice pudding. A little butter or chopped suet may be added. Serve hot or cold, with or without sauce.

LEMON BUTTER FOR TARTS. -This is made by using one pound of pulverized white sugar, the whites of six eggs and yolks of two, together with three lemons, including grated rind and juice; cook twenty minutes over a slow fire, stirring it constantly.

A good dish for breakfast is made as follows : Take half a dozen, or as many as necessary, good cooking apples, cut them in slices of about a quarter of an inch thick; have ready a pan of fresh, hot lard. Drop the slices in and fry brown. A little hot sugar sprinkled over improves them. Serve hot.

CRACKER PIES.—Take six soda crackers. Break them into a dish and pour over them two cups of cold water. Let them stand until they can be reduced to a pulp. Add one and one-half cups of sugar, two teaspoons of tartaric acid, and flavor to taste, with lemon. This two teaspoons of tartaric acid. is sufficient for two pies.

To Boil LAME, MUTTON, OR VEAL .-Wrap the joint or quarter of lamb, &c., in a nice cloth, wet it, and dust it with flour. Let it remain so half an hour. Have the pot ready boiling; dip the joint in first one end and then the other -then put it in the pot and cover closely. Let it boil gently but steadily, an nour and a half for lamb, and two hours for yeal and mutton.

BREAKFAST PUFFS .- Take two eggs well beaten and stir into a pint of milk a little salt, a pint of butter and a pint and a half of flour. Beat the eggs and stir the milk. Add the salt, melt the butter and stir in; then pour all into the flour, so as not to have it lumpy; stir up thoroughly, and grease the cups into which the batter is poured, filling them two-thirds full. Cooking and Keeping Mackerel.

Isaac Hale, Newburyport, Mass., a famous mackerel dealer, gives the fol-lowing directions for keeping and preparing mackerel and other fish for

To keep mackerel nice, and prevent rusting, be particular to keep under the pickle, after taking out the head. The small head to a kit is the one to remove. If the pickle should get below the fish, fill up with more made by salt in cold water. Be sure that the mackerel are kept under the pickle. The cellar, or an even temperature, is the best place to keep them, also, all kinds of pickled

For boiling, soak 24 hours; for broiling, soak 48 hours; for baking, soak 48 hours. In the latter case cream of milk can be used for cooking them in. To avoid the unpleasant taste which many persons experience, of the rising up in the throat after eating, skin the mackerel before cooking, and a white, pulpy substance will be found, which adheres to the skin and which contains this

Dry codfish should never be boiled, as the flesh is harder the more it is boiled. Strip up fine, then soak in cold water until quite soft, and before bring-ing to the table change the water, and put over the fire and just bring to a scald, and it is ready for use. After preparing dry fish in this way, turn the water off, add a small piece of butter, a flung myself on the bed to pass a milk and flour gravy, and you have a wretched and fearful night. fine breakfast dish.

To keep dry fish nice, and prevent sliming or drying up, pack them snugly in a box, and cover up air-tight, put into a room that has no fire, (not in the cellar, unless it is a dry one), and they will improve much by age. Always purchase slack salted dry fish, if you want the best. English, Portsmouth, or some other salted fish are much better, also cheaper, than the heavy, thick, pickle salted fish, as they will swell much in soaking, while the pickle salted fish are much better. but rather one of a yellow cast.

Burning Soil.

In England land is often renovated by what is known as "paring and burn-It is mainly applicable to land containing much vegetable substance, and is performed by taking up the top surface to a depth of two inches with a spade, so that it may become air dried. This done, fire is applied and allowed to smolder until the whole surface has been burned over. The superfluous organic matter is thus burned out, and caused to yield an immediate supply of potash to the soil; some of the mineral elements of plant food are rendered more soluble, and if the land be clayey, the capacity of the soil for absorbing and retaining ordinary manures is increased. At usual prices for labor in this country this method of renovation is not recomthing similar may also be profitably tried upon reclaiming swamps, melon-hole lands, &c., by skimming the sur-face with a plough until the tufts of grass, roots, and the like can be raked out. They should be burned in heaps under as much of the soil as the slow fire will bear, and the dirt and ashes together distributed upon the surface.

A Novel Bath.

A novel kind of "bath" is described A novel kind of "bath" is described in a foreign paper, which is said to be refreshing, but which seems to us rather a grave proceeding. The patient is introduced into a warm room, in which is a curtained bath, filled with sand heated to about 100 or 120 degrees. A longitudinal groove is scooped to receive the patient, who is wrapped in a sheet to protect him from contact with the sand, and there is a comfortable pillow for the head. The operator then covers the body and limbs with warm sand, adjusting the temperature with the greatest nicety. The feeling of warmth is very agreeable, and the weight of the sand is just enough to cause a pleasant sense of compression in a foreign paper, which is said to be refreshing, but which seems to us rather cause a pleasant sense of compression and support. After an hour's delightful repose the patient rises, receives a sluicing of hot water, and goes away refreshed. The effect is very different from that of hot water, and still more unlike that of hot air or steam.
