A CRUEL (?) MISTAKE.—On last Thursday morning the two janitors of our school building rang the first of half-past eight bell at 7.30, thus convulsing the whole village.

School Directors were seen on the streets very much exercised about something (steak for breakfast, perhaps).

The Principal of the school thinking that the building was on fire, rushed from his breakfast table like a fugitive from justice.

When cooler all decided that the ringing of that bell was very much like the Graphic Balloon Ascension, it well meant it was poorly executed.

Janitors please do not be so naughty again till about the first of April, and oblige
