Farm, Garden and Household,

Profits of Co-operation.

Some eight or ten years ago, says the New England Farmer, Joseph D. Holmes, Charles Jordan, and William Millard, three young farmers living almost within a stone's throw of each other, decided to join in establishing a dairy milk route from their farms to Pawtucket, Rhode Island, some six miles away. Neither farm was large enough to sustain a route alone, but the three together could do it easily. Neither wanted to take the place of a middle man and do all the marketing, nor did either wish to give up his busi-ness to a middle man. So they agreed that each should take his turn on the

The milk accounts are kept in one book, and the buyers at the village settle their bills by this book, whether it comes by one or other of the members of the company. Each of the three men go with the wagon every third day in regular order, unless for accomodation sake one goes a trip for one of the others. Each uses his own horse and wagon, and each knows the amount of milk that is taken from the different farms every day.

The two trips that each one makes every week enables him to market most of his other produce, such as apples, of his other produce, such as apples, potatoes, sweet corn, tomatoes, and other garden products, of which each one raises considerable quantities, without making special trips for such purposes. Nor is there any hitching up and going to store for purchase; all the buying, as well as selling being done on their regular market days; and they are all in daily communication with the post-office, which is no small convenience to farmers. convenience to farmers.

Under this system of partnership, the cost of marketing is reduced to the minimum, while each bears his just proportion of the expenses, and receives equal share in all the advantages of the combination. Since this ar-rangement has been established, all their farms have been really enhanced in value. The young men have increased their stock and it is better fed and better housed. Buildings have been repaired and enlarged, more and better tools purchased and the land is constantly increasing in fertility and productiveness. But little complaint is heard from them about hard times for farmers. They pay their bills, take the papers, and know what is going on

A Bad Beginning.

A colt should be handled every few days; he should early feel the bit, the bridle-reins, and the sureingle; early learn to draw light loads, and not to be afraid of sudden noises. It is no way at all to bring up a colt to be as wild as a deer or to kick at the slightest provocation. By the time he is old enough to be used he should have become thoroughly trained, the time of his subjection having extended through all his previous days. We have known farmers who allowed their colts to grow up without the least handling. It would be almost impossible to catch them unless they were driven through a lane into the yard and cornered, or were induced to lenter the stable where it was considered a feat to get on the halter. The "breaking" (which is a bad word) is considered a great event, and often some public day will be selected. Being caught, the saeldle put on by a feat of dexterity, a fearless and strong young man is selected to mount him, and when he succeeds great is the admiration of the beholders. The horse is simply frightened; he would run, but the curb-bit restrains him, and he can only rear and perhaps kick within limited bounds. To make him behave himself a raw-hide or black-snake whip is applied to his sides, and even over his head, and we have seen the flesh made bare. The poor creature, utterly unable to understand what is required, trembling in every muscle and nerve, and at last, finding out the extent to which he is to be tortured, submits, and then he is declared "broken." he is broken, as much so as a broken merchant, and if he does not from that day become balky or vicious it will not be because his owner failed to take the best possible means to make him so.

Replacement of Hoof. Generally a horse that has lost a hoof by accident is thought to be beyond recovery, and as the injury is excessively painful, the poor creature is destroyed at once. But the natural replacement of the hoof seems to be a possible and even probable occurrence under proper treatment and favorable conditions. We hear of a horse in San Francisco which had its hoof torn off by the wheel of a dray, and being not only valuable but a favorite, it was determined, if possible, to effect a cure. The horse slung for nine days, during which time it suffered most acute pain. After this the pain apparently abated, and the horse was lowered to his feet, the horse was wounded foot being well preserved from any undue amount of exertion. The horn, or hoof, has now grown twothirds of its natural size and in a proper shape, and it is hoped that the hoof will become sufficiently strong to bear a shoe and allow the animal to return to work. The cure has been brought about by humane treatment and con-

A correspondent of the Scientific American writes to that paper: notice that some of your correspondents mention trouble with pumps which they require to draw water almost further than is possible. I have succeeded in such cases by letting a very small portion of air in at the bottom of the pipe, which, passing up in bubbles in the water, lessens the gravity of the column of water so that the pump can raise it.'

A Queer Story. A queer and almost unbelievable story comes from Indianapolis. It is said that a prominent member of the Young Men's Christian Association of that city was recently called upon by two children, who, by a story of a dead mother and a home destitute of fire and wood, awakened his sympathies. Accompanying them to their home, appearances corroborated their story—a coffin, containing what the gentleman supposed to be the figure of a woman, pared for burial, adding to the gloom of the poverty-stricken tenement. He gave the children a five dollar bill with some loose change, and promising to make some further arrangement for their comfort, left the place. Returning to say something to the children which subsequently occurred to him, he was astonished to find the woman whom he had supposed dead sitting up in the coffin, counting the money the imposture had gained.

BAZAINE'S GRATITUDE, -Marshal Bazsino, after receiving notice of the commutation of his sentence, wrote a letter to Pres. MacMahon, in which he says:

"You remembered the days in which we served the country together. I feared that the impulse of your heart would be overmastered by state considerations. I should have died without regret since the recommendation of the Court for mercy vindicated my honor."

A young gentleman at Kansas City sent seventy-five cents to New York recently for a method of writing without pen or ink. He received the following inscription on a card—"Write with a

The following story of the disaster to the Ville du Havre is related by Mr. is scarcely credible. We were sleeping tranquilly in our berths when a dread-ful crash and the shivering of the vessel awoke us in a moment. The pas-sengers—men, women, and children— rushed on deck, some of them half dressed, others in their night-dresses. At once we saw the extent of the acci-dent which had occurred. There were the bows of a large sailing vessel projecting over the deck, and there, too, was a frightful hole in the side of our steamer, through which the water was rushing furiously in. The crew, under the orders of the captain, were manning the two long boats and helping passengers into them as fast as possible under the excitement of those terrible moments. While they did so, however, the mainmast fell with an awful crash, bringing down the mizzen-mast also with it. These two masts fell upon the longboats and killed a number of the passengers and wounded many others, The terror which prevailed among them at this time prevented a great many of the passengers from making any at-tempt to save their lives. Some of them, in a paroxysm of despair, threw themselves on the deck in earnest prayer. Although there were eight boats altogether belonging to the ship, owing to the brief time in which she sank the crew were only able to get the captain's gig and whaleboat into the water. The whaleboat was launched by the second lieutenant, who, with several of the crew and two or three pas-sengers, succeeded in getting into it she was struck. The Loch Earn, after clearing away from the sinking vessel, Baptist. put off to a distance of about half a mile, where she hove to, and sent the boats to pick up any of the passengers and crew who might happen to be floating on the sea. Some were found on pieces of plank, some clinging to portions of the broken spars, others on life buoys, casks, and various other remnants of the wreck. Not a single person was saved from the deck, the panie being so great and the time so short before all was over. The captain and second officer behaved with great courage through this scene of agony and despair. They both remained on deck to the last, and went down with the steamer, but came to the surface and floated for three-quarters of an hour, when they were picked up by the whaleboat. The mental anguish of some of the fortunate few whose lives were saved was heartrending in the extreme. One lady (Mrs. Spafford, of Chicago) had lost her four child en, and another Mrs. Buckley) had lost three. A gentleman, who was taking his sister to France for the benefit of her health, was among the saved, and his grief on finding that his sister had gone down in the vessel found a parallel only in that of parents who were lamenting the loss of their children, and children the loss of their parents. Nor can I forget the harrowing scene which I witnessed on the deck of the Loch Earn—a scene surpassed in agony only by that I had beheld just before on the deck of the ill-fated Ville du Havre. Ladies and the Parsees agree. According to it, the soul was in existence before the body, and can be transmitted from one gentlemen who before had never known

New York County Offices.

The offices in New York City pay very handsome figures. For instance the salary, fees, etc., of the Sheriff's office amount to 3250,000; County Clerk, $200,000; Reg ster, $100,000; Surrogate, $100,000; Chamberlain, $30,000; Judges, $17,000. To get the nomina-tion for the first two offices costs about $20,000, and to be elected about $30,000 more. Veryoft on these sums are spent without securin; an election.

THE WEEKLY SUN is too widely known to require any extended "commendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand suscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as sollows: It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day vil. se found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible, and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of enter-aiming and instructive reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first-rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle, and for the election of the best ment to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors from their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies, and the markets for the men, especially for cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for a year.
