

Farm Garden and Household.

Care of Milk Cows. The hot months are upon us, and it becomes dairymen to see that their cows are not suffering from heat or the lack of pure water...

The remedy is, shelter from the sun. This but for a few hours in the hottest days, green cut feed being given at such times...

In many cases, in a dry time, water becomes scant. Of course stock will suffer from this cause, particularly milk cows...

It needs but a few cases of this description, or a few careless patrons, to hurt the whole make of a factory, the guilty parties suffering with the rest...

It is always well to look out early for the seed for a future crop of wheat. It is quite as important for the farmer to look to improve his grain...

The best culture possible will not produce superior grain from inferior seed. Every farmer should make a special effort this year to sow better seed than last...

A Scotch Purchase.

Here is another Scotchman who did not understand a joke in the law court, at Aberdeen, William Jamieson, a carter, sued William Walker, a fish-dealer, for £20, being the price of a mare which the pursuer alleged the defender had bought from him...

Tube-Drinking.

During these warm days the temptation always is to drink more liquid than is best for us. A good way to obviate this, and at the same time to slake the thirst fully, is to take water, lemonade, or iced tea through a small glass tube...

$40,000,000 WANTED.

The Decision in the Great Coal Land Suit—Twenty Years of Preparation for a Trial—The Claimant's Adventures.

The great $40,000,000 coal land lawsuit of Turnbull against Pardee and others, which has been pending in Pennsylvania for two years, and which secured the lawyers twenty years before it was in position to warrant a hearing, has been decided in favor of the defendants...

The question at stake was the title to several thousand acres of coal land in lower Luzerne county, in possession of the defendants, and claimed by James Turnbull and James Turnbull, Sr. The land is in the heart of the coal fields...

His career had been one of danger and hardship. On his first voyage he was shipwrecked. With eight others he floated nine days in an open boat on the ocean...

The Famine in Bengal.

A correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, writing about the famine in Bengal from Madhubani, says: "Truly the scenes of suffering and death are hard to understand; they seem to set but little value on their lives, as the following tale will show: Hard by the hospitable house of a planter near Madhubani, stands a dilapidated native hut; the planter himself assists the sick in the shape of grain or money to such as seem in want...

Disaster by Flood.

The great destruction of life and property by the storm at Pittsburgh is alone sufficient to rank the event among extraordinary occurrences. In tropical regions, and on vast plains, the form of a storm is the presence of a destructive hurricane in which wind, rain and hail unite in inflicting damage, can scarcely be called unusual...

The Cholera.

Dr. McClellan, of the United States Army, has obtained statistics showing that during the last year the cholera made its appearance and gained a foothold in three hundred places in the United States. He purposes visiting every place visited by the dreadful epidemic, which appears to have its principle hold in Tennessee. The special object of his journey is to ascertain the causes which render the disease epidemic, and when he shall have gathered all the facts together, he is to make a report upon the subject with such sanitary suggestions as he may deem proper...

THE BOY-MURDERER.

Confession of His Last Crime—A Shocking Tale of Thrift for Innocent Blood.

Jesse Pomeroy, the Boston boy-murderer, has confessed that he murdered little Horace Miller. He says that on the morning of the 22d of April he arose early and went to the store and afterwards to the city, returning home about nine o'clock. He remained at the store until half-past eleven o'clock, when he told his mother that he was going to the city. She gave her permission and he went over to his mother's house, where he remained a few moments and then started for the city proper. He, however, went up Dorchester avenue to Eight street, where he saw the little Miller boy, and immediately his evil passion got possession of him, and he determined to torture him, if not kill him. He asked the boy if he would like to see the store, and he said he would, but that both started off in the direction of the marsh. When they arrived at the spot where the body was subsequently found, Jesse told Miller to lie down, and the little fellow, not suspecting his danger, did so. The young fiend then immediately sprang upon him, pressed his left hand over the little fellow's mouth to stop his cries, and then, with the same jack-knife that a month before he had used to murder Katie Curran, the monster deliberately cut the throat of the little boy that had so faithfully served him. The child struggled fearfully, and the murderer, desperate at his failure in not killing him at the first blow, stabbed him repeatedly in the bowels and chest. He mutilated the body in a frightful manner, but does not know, as he says, to what cause he was impelled, or what led him to do it. He was found in a dying condition. He cleaned his knife and person, and then took a car for Boston proper, going to the Common, where he remained some time, and then returned home.

The young murderer gives the same reason for committing the deed that he did for killing Katie Curran—that he couldn't help it. He had no intention of killing any one up to the time of meeting the Miller boy, and then the horrible plan entered his head on the instant. He says conscience or something of the kind did not enter his mind, and he would have done the same where he had found him, but something seemed to draw him on, and he had to do it. The confession was told in the same cool manner as the story of the murder of Katie Curran. Jesse further stated that he made the confession not because he was afraid of the law, but because he feared his mother, brother, or some one else might be suspected.

Hanging a Boy.

Lynching a boy eighteen years of age for a crime of which he was innocent. The St. Joseph, Mo., Herald describes the murder of the boy James Ross, who had been arrested for making free with the steers of the farmers in that vicinity. Ross, in the custody of an officer, was on his way to jail, when he was seized, in spite of the protests of the officers, by a mob of armed men. Resistance was useless. Ross was dragged from his horse and taken into "the timber." Then, for the first time, this boy seemed to comprehend the awful fate which awaited him. He shook with fear and cried for mercy. With one hand he grasped the neck of his horse, and with the other he added piteously that "he was a mere boy, and wanted time to reform." The only answer to this was the stern warning that he had but five minutes left, and four of them he had already taken. He was then taken to the gallows, and the executioner raised the drop, and the boy fell to his death. The executioners mounted their horses and rode rapidly away, leaving the corpse there alone with the night.

Killed by a Rattlesnake.

A. S. Heep and some friends started out with a view to examine some land for farming purposes. They had traveled some distance, when their attention was aroused by a sharp, whirring noise. Not being acquainted with the sound of a rattlesnake's warning, the party kept advancing, and only stopped when the venomous reptile, which was coiled and secreted in a dense tuft of dry grass and weeds, sprang forth and buried its poisoned, death-bearing fangs clear through the wooden clothes. Heep wore, into the main artery of his left leg, just above the knee. Involuntarily, as he felt the pain of the bite of the snake, he leaped forward to examine the wound, and as he did so, the reptile, which had again coiled up, sprang forward and struck him on the right cheek, about an inch below the eye. By this time his friends came forward and soon despatched the reptile. No remedies were of hand. Rapidly the deadly poison diffused itself through his veins; his limbs and body began to swell; the pupils of his eyes to distend, and soon he was in the throes of death. He died in twenty minutes after being bitten.—Fresno (Cal.) Expositor.

Just Taken His Bitters.

We heard a seedy-looking individual with an alarmingly red nose remark to a brother seaker that he had "just had his bitters, but he did not mind taking another nip." His remark suggested a train of reflection. How was it, we asked ourselves, that the word "bitters" had grown to be a synonym for gin, whisky, rum, and other alcoholic stimulants, to which it was applied indiscriminately. Bitters, we reasoned, suggested the idea of a healthful tonic, not of a poisonous stimulant; something invigorating to the system, not an alcoholic irritant, full of fuel oil, producing present intoxication and ultimate insanity, idiocy, or premature death. Moreover, our idea of bitters was totally irreconcilable with "gin cocktails," "rum punches," and "bandy smashes," which we are informed, are sweetened with sugar, and rendered doubly injurious with essences colored by means of mineral poison. This was bitter-sweet with a vengeance. We mentioned this problem to a friend. He solved it by exclaiming: "Why, don't you know the object of these bitters advertised as remedies are only drams in disguise? Tapers know it, if you do not. I must make one exception, however," he added, "and that's Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters; there isn't a particle of alcohol or fermented liquor in it, and it is the best vegetable tonic and alternative in America."—Com.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A total estimate for the damage inflicted by grasshoppers that appears to be approximately correct is, for value of crops destroyed in Minnesota, $3,000,000; in Iowa, $2,000,000. About 4,000 persons in both States will require help to the total extent of about $300,000. The London Times dispatches from India state the prospects of the crops are most favorable, notwithstanding the recent floods. Many deaths from cholera are reported in Burmah. German journals say that war between Russia and China is inevitable in consequence of designs of the latter upon Kashgar. A special dispatch to the London Daily News reports that the destruction of property by the floods in Moravia is immense. At least 200 houses have been swept away. Dispatch from Vienna announces the death, in the Austrian capital, of Anselmo Rothchild, the eminent financier and banker. His life history was about the same as that of the other members of the family. He was industrious, honest and frugal, and became, in consequence, a man of mark on "Change." The quarantine physician at Pensacola has reported that a majority of the cases of supposed yellow fever which have occurred at that port were in reality attacks of Chagres fever. It is difficult to conceive of a calamity more distressing than that which occurred in Pittsburgh, Pa. It was one of those events which cannot be foreseen, and which no human care can guard against. A sudden fall of rain in such quantities as to flood the streets, burst the sewers, and fill the neighboring streams until they become destructive torrents, sweeping through a thickly populated city and carrying death and ruin in their path, is something the like of which, happily does not often fall to the journals of our country to record.

A terrible thunder storm passed over Sarina, Ont., from 1 to 3 o'clock in the morning. A number of houses and barns were struck by lightning. The Presbyterian church was also struck with lightning. The church was flooded with water and many sidewalks carried away. Reports from various places in this section indicate that the storm was of a most severe character, and the loss of property very heavy. An incendiary plot was discovered at 219 North Clark street, Chicago. A lighted candle was found in the midst of a pile of kindling wood, which was saturated with kerosene. Forty-one Carlists, most of them ecclesiastics or members of the nobility, have been arrested at Barcelona, by way of reprisal against the inhuman conduct of the Carlist. Carlist have again been driven from the Republican troops, and have sustained very heavy losses. Two companies of Carlists who refused to surrender were cut to pieces. The Committee of the Agricultural Laborers' Union in England, have adopted a resolution declaring "that as we are not justified in appealing to the public for support for the locked-out laborers, in the eastern counties during the harvest, therefore we offer them the alternative of emigrating or depending on their own resources." The committee is negotiating for easier terms of emigration to California, and has already secured the services of a steamer in Moravia, and giving account of a steamer in Moravia, says that the town of Azagra was overwhelmed by a torrent; six-four houses were demolished, and a few of the inhabitants escaped with their lives. The railways were badly damaged in every direction. Moravia is a province of the Austrian empire, bounded by Galicia, Hungary, Austria, Bohemia, and Silesia. It is almost surrounded by mountains, and lying as it does in the basin of the Danube, its storms are very destructive.

Not Quite So Fast, Mr. Jones!

A doctor in Philadelphia was caught changing his celebrated Mexican medicine into other goods, and using it as his own recipe. Honesty is always the best policy. These medicine men like to follow up such fellows. It cured the lame horse all the same; but it damaged the doctor's reputation, and benefited the proprietor in proportion. We have heard of so many Bismarck persons and lame horses being cured by the same doctor, that we are inclined to believe that the doctor is a very heavy loser. Two companies of Carlists who refused to surrender were cut to pieces. The Committee of the Agricultural Laborers' Union in England, have adopted a resolution declaring "that as we are not justified in appealing to the public for support for the locked-out laborers, in the eastern counties during the harvest, therefore we offer them the alternative of emigrating or depending on their own resources."
