Cleaning Stubble Land.

The farmer who has grown wheat, or barley, or oats this year, and is not seeded down, and which is not to be sown with any other crop until next spring, has an opportunity of cleaning his land, that should on no account be neglected. The English farmers seldom seed down their land with wheat, After the wheat is havested, they harrow the land, or tear it to pieces with a three or four horse cultivator or "grubber." This pulls out the roots of quackgrass, and starts the seeds of other weeds. The field is afterwards plowed. when, of course, all the young weed-plants are destroyed. The grubber is kept at work as ofen as necessary, to clean and mellow the land. The next spring, this land is sown to turnips or mangels, or, on heavy land, to beans or barley. It is said that this autumn cleaning of stubble land by the free use of the grubber, especially when operated by the all-powerful steam engine, is one of the agricultural improvements of the age.

What is true of English farming, might be still more emphatically true of American agriculture. Our autumns are longer and drier than they are in England, and we have a better opportunity to clean our land, while there is certainly a great necessity. Our fields are fearfully foul with all kinds of weeds, and in many instances, they are annually gaining a stronger foothold. We must fight, if we would win. It will not do to go on in the old way. With our drying winds and hot sun, we ought to have the cleanest farms in the world-and sooner or later, such will be the case. We must kill weeds by wholesale. It will not do to depend on the hoe and the fingers. Nature is never at rest. It will not do to let land lie idle. When it is not occupied with growing crops, we should be occupied n stirring the soil, and killing weeds. It is the great secret of success in farm-

The ground squirrels and gophers of the far West become so numerous and mischievous that farmers have to resort

Thompson took us out in his buggy to an outside lot on which the squirrels had "squatted" and taken up their claim and were in high glee over their possessions. He had with him a large "man bellows," to which he had at-tached about a yard of guttapercha On reaching a squirrel burrow, where a colony had evidently settled, he set his machine down, thrust the end of the hose into one of the numerous squirrel-holes, threw some shavings, cobs and sulphur into the teakettle, struck a match, set the shavings on fire, caught hold of the bellows, and in a moment the earth all round began to send up puffs of yellow and infernallooking smoke where a squirrel had ever run his underground road. The precaution had been taken to cover all the holes with earth before the smoke was forced into the burrow. In one instance the smoke rushed out of a hole over thirty feet distant from the main entrance of the nest. It takes about five minutes to smother a whole colony single day.

The Skunk.

In the American Journal of Science, for May, Rev. H. C. Hovey, has a very important and interesting article under title of "Rabies Mephitica," in which it is shown that the skunk can no longer be regarded as simply a very disagreeable animal, but on the contrary a most dangerous one, and is to be classed with the rattlesnake as an enemy to mankind. As strange as it may appear, Mr. Hovey has brought forward an array of facts to prove that the skunk is very often affected with a disease, or perhaps with a natural salivary secretion, that causes its bite to be far more dreaded than that of a rattlesnake or of a mad dog. As the skunk is a nocturnal animal that steals upon his victim without warning, and gives the bite which almost invariably proves fatal, it is truly to be dreaded. Especially is this the case in the Western States, where the animal is abundant, and many persons are nightly exposed to its attacks.

To Preserve Green Corn. Steam it on the cob, to harden the milk ; cut it off the same as for drying ; pack it in stone jars, to every four pints of corn add one of salt, until your jar is full. Then cover one-half inch thick on the top with salt. Corn put up in this way, will keep good till corn comes again. Soak the salt out before using it. I have tried this way several years, and I find it is a much nicer way than drying. Give it a trial.

London Overflowed from a Sewer. Something very like a water-spout hit the east end of London the other day and made things decidedly lively for the inbabitants. For some reason the London papers have preserved a curious reticence on the subject, contenting themselves with mentioning that the down-pour was heavy, and that several persons were killed by light-ning. For the most interesting part of the story we are indebted to eure D. Conway. It seems that all the sewage of that quarter of London is collected in a huge receiving pipe, to be pumped off for fertilizing purposes more or less rapidly, according to the demand. In case of heavy rains, the gates—or whatever the damming-up apparatus may be-are promptly opened, for obvious reasons. occasion, however, the man in charge could not be found. NOT ALL A DREAM,

How Mile Byington Prevented Robbery

Milo Byington is brother-in-law to the Hon, George S. Bowen. The residence of the latter is in the southeast part of the city of Elgin, Ill. Byington lives directly opposite. One night Byington dreamed that Bowen's barn was enveloped in flames, and jumped from the bed into the middle of the room, which effort brought him out of somnambulism. He was very much excited, and could not for a moment comprehend the situation. Impressed, owever, with the thought of the barn being on fire, he proceeded to the window and discovered no signs of a blaze. His wife inquired of him what was the matter, and he replied that he had a dream that Bowen's barn was on fire, and it frightened him very much. The lady said to him that he had better lie down, and not be disturbed on account of a dream. Byington returned to bed, but trembled like a leaf, and was unable to quiet his nerves, or divest his mind of the impression of fire at the barn. He says he could not lie there, and felt impelled to go to the barn; that he could not sleep or rest until he had followed the impulse. In spite of the remonstrance of his good wife, he put on his trowsers and shoes only, and taking a revolver in his kand, make tracks quietly for Bowen's barn, a distance of fifteen or eighteen yards. As he neared the barn he thought he heard movements of men inside, and instead of entering the barn, as he would have done had he not heard the noises, he stepped lightly around the north end of the barn, and as he looked around the corner two men walked out of the barn door on the east side and stepped around to the south end of the barn. Byington stealthily followed to the next corner, and when he reached it he discovered the two men talking, and heard one say to the other, "Now you go in and get the horse, and I'll fire the thing." Whereupon Mr. Byington disturbed the composure of the villains by saying, "No. I guess you won't." Almost instantly one of the men fired at him, and the ball hit the corner of the barn, within two or three of defence than dogs and guns, or even traps. The Santa Barbara Press says:

I'ma singe Mr. Dixie W. was running south from the barn, cried out: "Don't shoot; I'm hit." Byington said to him: "Stop, or I'll shoot again." The fellow did not stop, and Mr. Byington sent two more bullets after him. In the morning a bridle was found on the stable floor behind one of the horses, and at the south end of the where the men were standing where Byington first disturbed them Mr. Bowen's driver picked up a ball of rags about the size of a cocoanut, which was bound with a string and thoroughly saturated with kerosene oil. He also found on the same spot three or men was, we must necessarily conclude, to steal one or more of the good horses which Mr. Bowen is possessed of, and then burn the barn to lead the public to think the animals were burned, and thus enable them to make good their escape.

stantly making living advertisements for my-self and medicines. It is a common thing to hear people say that plenty of advertising will make a success out of anything, whether it has any merit or not. Nothing could be far-ther from the truth. It is with this delusive idea actuating them that thousands have rushed headlong into advertising, only to find themselves bankrupt in a little while. Not themselves bankrupt in a little while. Not more than one in five hundred, who engages in advertising medicines, ever makes a financial success out of the undertaking, for the reason that a medicine to be successful must possess unusual and extraordinary merit. It is not enough that it should be a remedy of fair efficacy; it must possess superior and uonderful remedial properties, for if it does not, those who use it with the most sanguine expectations will condemn it. They will expect much of it, and it must be equal to the test, or it will prove ruinous to the proprietor. For it will prove ruinous to the proprietor. For, although a great display of advertising will, many times, create a considerable immediate demand for the article advertised, yet if that article does not possess real merit, the demand will be only temporary; the fraud will be de-tected, and the reaction will upset the proprie-tor and all his high expectations, long before

With this view of the subject, I have felt warranted in contracting for hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of advertising in the newspapers of this and other countries, feeling perfectly assured that the merits of my remedies were so great as to insure a financial success, out of such a hold block in the path of Bunyan's Christian, though it couldn't bar his way to Truth. We can sympathize with the Pilgrim, for Doubt always besets us when we are asked to believe anything particularly extraordinary. Consequently, when we heard, some eighteen months ago that a physician in California had compounded, from the juices and extracts of certain herbs found there, a medicine that cared almost every variety of blood disease, we were incredulous. Since then we have had opportunities of testing the accuracy of the report, and are free to admit that our doubts have vanished, Seeing what we have seen, knowing what we know, it is impossible for us to question the remedial properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters. The Beecher-Tilton Case.

The Committee of Investigation appointed to take evidence and report on the charges made against the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, made a lengthy report, which they closed with the following statement of conclusions:

First—We find from the evidence that the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher did not commit adultery with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton, either at the time or times, place or places set forth subdivisions of Mr. Tilton's statement, nor at any other time or place whatever.

Second—We find from the evidence that the Committee of the control of the reputation and large sale which these medicines are rapidly acquiring and who are pecuniarily interested in endeavoring to check their sale. So ridiculously prespoterous are those receipts that medicines compounded after them could never have gained any reputation or sale in any country, for they would be so caustic, poisonous, immediately and positively injurious, as in every case to be promptly condemned by the people on the first trial as miserable, dangerous and wicked humbugs. Whereas, it is a well-known fact that all my medicines enjoy the reputation, honestly earned, of being not only efficacious, but perfectly mild, pleasant and harmless in effects. Notwithstanding, however, that the bogus receipts were so ridiculously preposterous as scarcely to have been believed by the most unscientific.

This they evidently did without a moment's reflection, for that much consideration, given by an intelligent mind, to the receipts and the properties and effects of the mixtures that would result from such a compounding of well-known caustic and poisonous chemicals and drugs, would have condemned them as bogus fabrications, and the pretentious publishers of the paper that originally inserted them, as either knaves or fools. On my attention being called to the matter, in order that some thoughtless and over credulous people might not be deceived and misled by seeing such an announcement in a paper laying claim Third-If this were a question of errors
