How to Make Tea .- In China tea is never decocted, it is infused; and the reason is that the aerid quality contained in the stems is not liberated in a quick "drawing." Take a porcelain pot for tea, and scald it with freshly boiling water; then to every heaping tablespoon-ful of tea add a breakfast cup of water; when the tea has drawn exactly five minutes, and no more, pour all off and drink with sugar only. The leaves are very useful afterward for carpet sweeping, but tea amateurs rarely try such an acrid preparation as a second drawing, sive flavor of which must be disguised with milk.

Sago Jelly.-Take a teacup of sago and boil in three pints and a half of water; when cold add half a pint of raspberry syrup; pour the wholeinto a shape which has been rinsed in cold water, and let it stand until sufficiently set to turn out well. When dished, pour a little cream around it if preferred.

COCOANUT PUDDING. -Grate cocoanut: then stew it slowly in one quart of milk; pour this on a half loaf of baker's bread; when cold add one pound sugar and one-half pound butter beaten to a cream; then add six eggs, and bake.

ORANGE CARE. - One cup white sugar, one small half-cup butter, two cups flour, one-half cup cold water, five eggs baking powder, juice and rind of one

Snow Pupping .- One ounce of gelatine; pour on it a pint and a half of boiling water; add two teacups of white sugar, the grated peel and juice of two lemons; strain into a deep dish to cool; when it commences to jelly add to it the whites of four well beaten eggs, beat all until the dish is full, put in molds and place in a cool place.

APPLE PUDDING .- Make pastry as for apple dumplings, roll it out, lay it on a pudding cloth, pile up some sliced apples, sprinkle plenty of dark brown sugar on and cinnamon or nutmeg, add half a cup of water, gather up the edges of the paste together, tie the cloth loosely, boil an hour and a half.

although the two are adjoining; much depends upon situation as well as soil. I have observed that very fair crops of corn have been grown a number of years in succession on the same land without emancipation of slaves, internal improvethe aid of a fertilizer; while on other land nearly and apparently as good, but having a different location, when farmed in corn three or four years in succession, the last crops were little better than nubbins. When crops are rotated they are much more productive than when the same article is grown for a number of years in succession, and the land is kept in better heart. Therefore adopt some good system of rotation. Plow deep and well, always getting your crop in the ground in good season and harvesting it at the proper time. Early planting of crops is generally the best. Never attempt to do more than can be done well. Look closely after the manure pile—there is nothing of more importance to the farm. Contract no debts unless it is for real estate, or judiciously improving what you already own. Be industrious, practice economy, and sell your crops whenever they are ready for market. Take a good agricultural paper, one that keeps you posted in what is going on in your line of business, especially the markets. Spend your evenings at home reading your paper and keeping accurate accounts of the management of the farm. If you are blessed with good health, and these rules are observed, you will find farming honorable, easy and profitable.

BRAZIL'S ROYAL FAMILY.

Brief Sketch of the Emperor, the Empress, and their Children---His Career as a Monarch.

Dom Pedro II, de Alcantara, emperor Brazil, who is now visiting the United States, was born in Rio de Janeiro on December second, 1825. He is a scion, in the direct line, of the house of Braganza, the female line of which is ruling over Portugal. In 1807, on the invasion of Portugal by the French, the royal family fled to Brazil, which, in 1815, was raised to the rank of a kingdom. After the death of the queen, Dona Maria I., the father of Dom Pedro I. became king of Portugal under the title of Josn VI., and returned to that country in 1821, leaving his son as regent of Brazil. When the Portuguese adopted measures reducing Brazil again to the rank of a colony a revolution took place, and Dom Pedro I., placing himself at the head of the movement, was proclaimed protector and perpetual decream around it if preferred.

The disturbances in the revolted provinces did not cease, however, until 1842, when the decisive victory of Santa Lucia was gained by the royalists. Subsequently the emperor joined with Uruguay against the Argentine Dictator Rosas, who was finally overthrown in 1852. In 1865 war was declared against Paraguay, and an offen-sive alliance was formed by Brazi, Uruguay and the Argentine Republic,

He said : GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY-I am an old man, and my race is nearly run. This is the first time in my life I have over been before a jury. I have never even been a witness in a magistrate's court. I was born in 1816, and have been a hard-working and an honest man all my life until now. I am a stranger to every man in this house, except his honor who sits on that bench. He has known me for nine years, and he will tell you I have been an honest man and a good citizen. This jury looks like a set of honest and intelligent men, and I wish you to deal with me the best you can. I read in the papers that the prison at Frankfort is an awiul place—that it is so crowded that one can scarcely live there. From the accounts of that place I suppose I could not live there You see I am old and feeble, and I ask you to do the best you can for me. Gentlemen, if I could have got work I could have supported my family and not been here. But I want to tell you-I am a very poor man and have to work to live. Well, last year the times were very hard indeed, and I could not get work much of the time. I am a me-chanic, and I went to Clarksville, Fairview, and many other places, but I could not get any work. The times were very hard, as you all know, and but few men had money to pay for labor. I traveled around till I spent all that I had but a bed and a chair. I was tired, and out o heart, and my family suffering for food and clothing. I heard then that I could get work in North Logan, and I sold my kit of tools to get my family moved up there. I paid $75 for my tools in Louis-ville, and had to sell them low. After paying for moving, I had $15 left. I got place for my family for a little while, and started again for work. I tried hard to find it, but could not. I went back to my family broken down in spirit, thinkng I would have to starve or beg. Gentlemen, my little boy, about six years old, got in my lap and put his little arms around my neck and asked me if the good Lord would let us starve. I love my family as well as any man,

It was getting along toward nine o'clock, when the young lady inquired the time of the evening, "Five minutes to nine," was the reply. "How long will it take you to go home?" large number of straws about three inches in length. Each straw was filled with powder and securely sealed at the ends. The whole formed indeed a very dangerous contrivance, which if it had enver reached the fire box of a parlor stove would have made very destructive work with the inside of a house, and perhaps destroyed the lives of more than one member of the family. Whether the above machine was placed in the coal box on purpose, and with malicious intent, or whether it came there accidentally, is a question not yet solved.

A Singular Trial.

A very singular trial took place in Paris recently, the disclosures made during which prove what a long way a small sum of money judiciously applied headed man, was arraigned for the crime of grand larceny—horse stealing. He pleaded guilty, and presented himself to the jury in a brief and touching address.

during which prove what a long way a small sum of money judiciously applied may be made to go. Fifteen years ago Chaplat, a granadier of the Imperial Guard, deserted, and being captured soon afterward, was sent to prison to await his trial. Before the trial came on Chaplat struck up an acquaintance with another prisoner called Marechal, whom he induced to personate him, and to acne induced to personate him, and to accept the consequences. Marechal succeeded in passing himself off as the descring grenadier, and was sentenced to five years' hard labor. He spent this time at the galleys without disclosing the secret; but when, at the expiration of himself. of his sentence, he was sent to join a colonial depot, he made his escape. He was, however, captured, and still passing himself off as the grenadier Chaplet, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for desertion. He had been for no less than six years in the prison of Fontevrault before his patience was exhausted; but at last he was determined to unbosom himself, and it was found that his statements were true. He was brought before a court-martial, together with Chaplat, the real deserter, who explained to the court that when, after being captured by the gendarmes, he was being taken to Auxerre in company with Marechal, who had merely been arrested for begging, he suggested to the latter that they should change places. This they did in the prison, and the result was that while Chaplat, passing as Marechal, was "discharged with a caution," Marechal, passing as Chaplat, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. All that he seems to have received in result was the sum of about 210 frames. with Chaplat, the real deserter, who exturned is the sum of about 210 francs, which, considering he has been in prison altogether for nearly twelve years, is at the rate of about fourteen shillings per anuum. Chaplat, in the meanwhile, had returned to his native village and had become a respected family man, when the disclosures of his substitute led to arrest. He has now been sentenced to three years' imprisonment, while Marcchal is at last restored to liberty, and will, though many people may think he was a fool for his pains, be looked upon as a hero in military circles both abroad and at home.

The Geography of the Future.

As certainly as terrestrial revolutions continue, says Popular Science Monthly, The prisoner became overwhelmed in the course of ten thousand years with emotion, and, pausing for a few there must come an entire reversal of polar conditions. The southern waters must be drained off to make the oceans occasion was exceedingly solemn. The of an opposite hemisphere. New lands, prisoner told his story without reserva-tion. The Stewart Estate.

The bequest of one million dollars by Mr. A. T. Stewart to Mr. Henry Hilton, we presume is, the New York San says, the largest bequest ever made in this country to a person not related by blood or marriage to the testator. And now the conveyance by Mrs. Cornelia M. Stewart, widow of Mr. A. T. Stewart, to Mr. Henry Hilton, is something still more astonishing. For the same one million dollars that A. T. Stewart left Mr. Hilton the conversation of the same of Mr. Hilton she conveys to him all her interest in the real and personal property belonging to A. T. Stewart & Co., including all the real estate, mills, factories and other property, whether standing in Mr. Stewart's name or the name of the firm, used for the purposes of the partnership. This property must amount to many millions of dollars. It does not include real estate not connected with the business and owned solely by the deceased. Mrs. Stewart states, in the conveyance, as one of the considerations, her desire to effectuate the wishes of her late husband, that the business in which he was engaged may be continued and carried on, the same as if he were living. Of course this could not be done if the new firm had not ample capital. This is furnished to the senior partner, Mr.

Hilton, by her conveyance.

There is no reason to doubt, says the Sun, that the great wealth of Mr. Stewart will now be devoted to purposes of real charity, as he understood it. It will not be wasted or given away. It will go on accumulating, in the hands of Mr. Hilton. To quote Mr. Hilton's own words: "It is more charitable to furnish employment to men and women than it is to destroy their self-respect by giving them money as to panpers."
