VERMONT voted last Tuesday for state officers, Fairbanks, Republican, has 30,000 majority.

"Leaf by Leaf the Roses Fall." And so do Mr. Tilden's hopes of success, as each day reveals its tale of shame.

And so do Mr. Tilden's hopes of success, as each day reveals its tale of shame. The latest is the discovery of his fraud and perjury in his income returns. If this is true, and "tis true, 'tis pity," the man is a fit candidate for the penitentiary in his own city, not for the White House in Washington. The proofs are overwhelming; he is condemned by his own act. He swore to his income in 1862 as only $7,118, and then, with a blindness which is marvelous, swore to receipt of $20,000 in that year from one railroad alone, the Terre Haute and Alton, for professional services rendered. The Chicago and Northwestern paid him from ten to eighteen thousand a year, and it was from 1859 to 1870 that he was counsel for this road as well as the Chicago and Alton, the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago roads, and also for the Cumberland Iron Company, all of which paid him enormous sums as yearly salaries, not as in certain suits.

Can any one be never so infatuated a Democrat, read this one item of his leader's record and not blush for it? Did the man dream that these things would be allowed to slumber, and he permitted to walk into the Presidential honors unchallenged? Did he imagine that the loud cry he raised of "reform" would defame the people? That when he pointed to himself as the destroyer of the Tweed ring in New York the people would not point at him as the friend and patron of Tweed as long as money could be got out of him? Did he not remember this little transaction, which has just come to light, or is his memory so weak as not to go back fourteen years? And if he remembered it, did he not know that just so surely, sooner or later, it would be held up to public gaze in all its naked deformity? Poor man! What a torment his daily life must be; how he must dread to take up a paper, lest it contain some fresh proof of his unutterable dishonesty and falsehood. That old pagan who was so remorselessly puffed in the Furies had a gay and festive time in comparison.

Where, in view of this and other revelations, is the "aggressive warfare" which Mr. Tilden so boldly proclaimed himself about to wage in this canvass? There will not be much time left for that between this and November if the Democrats are kept as busy as they have been hitherto in whitewashing and defending their candidate.

Take the advice of a friend, Mr. Tilden, throw up the sponge, acknowledge that the Fates are too much for you, and spend the remainder of your life in the private enjoyment of that wealth which you have labored so hard to acquire and which a generous government in view of your present position, will refrain from depriving you. And while you enjoy the comforts of your elegant home look over at the large stone structure near it, where many less guilty men than you are expiating their crimes, and remember that but for the clemency of the Government you once would have been glad to see destroyed you, too, would have been an inmate there.—The Republic Magazine.

The Cleveland Herald puts the Tilden money and income business as follows: Mr. Tilden's "barrel of money" was partly filled with funds belonging to the Government, withheld from it in its hour of need. That money should have gone to the support of our brave boys in the field and to the suppression of the rebellion. It is now used for the purchase of votes to overthrow the Republican party, which was unanimous and energetic in supporting the soldiers, suppressing the rebellion, and saving the Union. It is used to restore to power the Democratic party, which brought the Union to the brink of destruction in 1860; which from that time until the spring of 1865 was openly or covertly aiding or sympathizing with the enemies of the Union, and which has now renewed its alliance with those who were then the open foes to the Union.
