few scattering here and there over its | 000, broad surface. As yet Clarion county maintains its former excellence as producing territory. From the general tenor of the report a material falling off in the production for the winter months is evident. Up to Nov. 1st, 567 wells were drilling, and 863 rigs up and building, which shows well for a busy sesson throughout the oil region.

General White Elected.

Returns from the Congressional contest in this district indicate the election of General Harry White by a majority of about 1,700. Indiana county gives him, 2,497; Armstrong 700; Forest 40. This county gives Mr. Jenks 246, and Clarion, 1,291.

The contest was one of the most severe within our experience, and the result in this county shows how closely Republicans adhered to their candidate, reducing Mr. Jenks' majority of laborer. two years ago four hundred votes. Perhaps there were other reasons for this falling off. Two years ago Mr. Jenks had made no record as a Democrat, and his neighbors having full faith in his ability as a lawyer and knowing him to be a true gentleman, stepped out of party lines to elect him to the honorable position of Congressruan. His record as a member, however, was that of a Democratic parfizau, every measure proposed in caucus receiving his support, and new he man, but as the material of which a farmer; Jacob Hanes, farmer. Democratic member for this 25th Conressional district is composed. We standpoint, and we are pleased to know that in the heat of the contest no one so far forgot themselves as to allow their party feeling to lead them into a personal contest. Of the successful candidate we have taken frequent occasion to express our opinion, and we will now just add, that he is not an untried man, our people know him to be trustworthy, and that in the ensuing Congress they shall not be misrepresented .- Brookville Republican.

Choosing a President.

Every voter will understand by this time that he does not vote directly for President and Vice President. That might be the best way, but it was not so provided in the Constitution. He votes for as many electors as his State has Congressmen and Senators. In this State we have 29 because we have 27 members of Congress and two U. S. Senators. The whole number of electors in the United States is 369, necessary to a choice 185. These electors are generally selected by the State Convention of each party, and voted for by the people at the polls. In some States, Colorado for instance, the electors are selected by the Legislature, being Republican or Democratic according to the polities of that body. The electors who are elected meet at the capital of their respective States and vote by ballot for President and Vice President. The certified record of this vote is transmitted to the President of the U. S. Senate. On a given day the Senate and House meet in joint convention and in their presence the President of the Senate opens all the certificates and the electoral votes are counted. The person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be President if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then, from the persons having the highest number, not execeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representative from each State having one vote,

Some former Congresses adopted a joint rule providing that either House might object to the vote of a State and throw it out But Congress failed to adopt this joint rule at the last session, so no such provision now exists. An effort was made by Senator Morton list winter to have the Constitution so amended as to refer all such questions to the Supreme Court. But the Democratic House took no action in the matter and the whole power of the matter and the whole power of deciding any contested case will rest with Senator Terry, of Michigan, the President of the Senate since the death of Vice President.
