The New Cabinet. Washington, March 7 .-- The following nominations were received by the Senate from President Hayes at 2:20 p. m.: William M. Evarts, of New York, Secretary of State; John Sherman, of Ohio, Secretary of the Treasury; Geo. W. M'Creary, of Iowa, Secretary of War; Richard M. Thompson, of Indiana, Secretary of the Navy; Charles Devins, of Massachuesetts, Attorney General; David M. Key, of Tennessee, Postmaster General, and Carl Schurz, of Missouri, Secretray of the

From the Pittsburgh Telegraph, March 2. Now For Peace and Prosperity.

The great struggle is ended. The contest which closed at break of day this morning will be memorable in the annals of the country as recording the first systematic and combined effort on the part of a defeated candidate for the presidency and his friends to defeat the will of the people, as expressed at the polls, and to prevent the inauguration of the man legally chosen to fill the Executive chair. Soon after his election to the gubernatorial chair of the Empire State, Mr. Tilden conceived the idea of becoming President of the United States, and immediately began planning and scheming. He grew so bold and confident that he made no concealment of his purpose, but, like a commander in the field, marshalled his forces and prepared to capture the great prize. He was shrewd and far-seeing, and, as part of his plan, coolly proceeded to kill off his rivals. He sent men and money to the State of Ohio to ensure the defeat of Governor Allen, in the fall of 1875, and accomplished his purpose. His emissaries swarmed through the West and South, their secret instructions being to create public sentiment in favor of Mr. Tilden, and, through the press, in railway cars, in hotels, in the business arena, in the social circle, and in every place where a peg could be driven, it was driven, hard and tight. And so, everything being in readiness, the Convention was assailed and earried by storm, to the surprise of the whole country. The wisest politicians were amazed, and those Demoeratic leaders who had advised against the nomination of Mr. Tilden on the ground of his inexperience in politics, took back all they had said and hastened to assure their followers that the St. Louis namince was truly the man for the hour.

During the campaign struggle which followed the party nominations, Mr. Tilden personally directed the movements of his columns. He was in daily consultation with his most trusted lieutenants and supervised in person all important schemes. He secured the appointment of his private secretary, a near relative and a member of his own household, to the position of Secretary of the National Democratic Committee. When the polls were closed and it was announced that an official count would be necessary to determine the result, Mr. Tilden, instead of quietly retiring town, cut into halves. It was thought from the public gaze, to await the de- three trains passed over him before he cision of the proper tribunal, immediately set about scheming how he could make sure of an election, and the shameful revelations of the Oregon investigation show how far the great "Reform" candidate dared to go in his desperate and unprincipled effort his desperate and unprincipled effort shattered to atoms. to become President.

When it was seen that the exposure of the Oregon fraud was certain, a general plan of systemetic delay was decided upon, the purpose being to prevent, by fair means or foul, a legal declaration of the election of Hayes and Wheeler, and to throw the election into the House, where an easy triumph for Mr. Tilden was assured. After a most unreasonably delay the Democratic leaders agreed to submit the cases of the disputed States to arbitration, but not until they thought they had made sure of having a tribunal the decisions of which would be in favor of their candidate. The first disappointment in the latter respect was followed by a howl of indignation that deepened into shricks and curses as the arbitration progressed. Again the policy of delay was renewed, and the seenes in the House during the ham, a wealthy gentleman of this city past week, the most disgraceful in the was robbed to-day of $40,000 in notes. history of that body, were the result.

All hail the glad tidings, for with this announcement comes a feeling of relief and security which the nation has not known for more than two years. The pure personal life, unsulfied official record and manly dignity of Governor Hayes has inspired the people of the whole country with confidence, and when he enters the White House the nation will enter upon a new era of peace and prosperity. Auburn, N. Y., March 2-Leonard Howard, alfas Edward Thomas, native of Hartford, was executed in the corridor of the county jail this morning. Thomas killed a convict named Sheffield in Auburn prison in June, 1876. The prisoner died from suffocation; his neck was not broken. Before the black cap was adjusted he made a short address, taking back the former statement that the fatal blow was given in self defense, saying that he only meant to wound Sheffield.

A National President. THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE ON THE NEXT PRESIDENT'S OPPORTUNITIES. New York, Feb. 26.-The Tribune editorially discussing the next President's opportunity, says: It may be Mr. Hayes' greatest good fortune that he attains the Presidency under circumstances which force him to conciliate the best men of both parties. He will be compelled to seek the support of the best men at the North and the most progressive men at the South who have not been identified with the Republican party. In short, circumstances will compel him to be precisely what the country has desired and needed, a truly national President. The circumstances under which he will enter the White House will compel him to bring to his support Northern men who trusted him, but distrusted his party, and Southern men who are sick of the fatal alliance with Northern copperheads. The grandest opportunity ever placed before any President awaits him. He can build up a truly national party-a party as broad, liberal, and kindly as his own sentiments, a party impregnable at the North, and powerful and growing in all the Southern States, with control at the outset in several. That he will not fail we have assurance. His policy, we fully trust, will unite the independent of the North with the Republican party, and will win the best elements at the South by a leadership as wise and patriotic as that of the Democratic party has been selfish and fatal. He can, if he chooses, form a Cabinet which the extremists of each party may oppose in the Senate, if they dare, a cabinet so truly reflecting the principles and pledges which saved his election, that ing nothing of fidelity to Republican principles. He can win to the support of those principles thousands who have resisted them at the peril of their lives, sacrificing nothing of the rights of the loyal men at the South he can secure these rights beyond all possibility of infringement by pledgng to sustain them. The most patriotic and far seeing men of the South, the genuine reconciliation, the true union for which through years of diffi-
