From the Philadelphia Times, March 1st. The Silver Bill a Law.

President Hayes vetoed the silver bill yesterday, stating his reasons briefly, but sensibly and pointedly. Stocks and Bonds Bonght and Sold on The veto is a substantial repetition of his views expressed in his recent annual message, and presents no argument that had not been considered by Senators and Congressmen before the bill was sent to the Executive. I was a proper record for him to make and what he has said was due to the world from the Chief Magistrate o the Republic. The bill was promptly taken up in the House after the reading of the veto, and passed by a vote of 196 to 73 being 17 more than a constitutiona majority. The Senate considered the bill at once when the action of the House was reported, and it was there passed by a vote of 46 to 19, being more than the requisite number Thus the silver bill has become a law over the veto of the President, and i now is the properly ordained financia policy of the nation.

While we sympathize in the main with the particular objections to the measure as stated in the Presidential veto, we do not regret its passage over the objections of the Executive.
