FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD Orchard and Garden Notes.

Coarse fodder, such as corn butts, straw and over-ripe hay are improved one quarter to one-half of their value by steaming before feeding, But the gain in steaming good hay is considera-ble.

Liberal feeding is true economy. The aim should be to induce animals of all kinds to eat all they have a good appetite for and digest, by changing food and also changing methods of preparing it.

Pomologists generally disapprove of raising wheat and other kinds of grain in young orchards, on account of the tendency of such crops to dry up the soil in summer, leaving the trees to suffer for want of moisture. In wet soil the grains must be beneficial instead of injurious, especially in wet seasons; still, as a rule, we would prefer to plant the land in we would prefer to plant the land in orchards with some kind of crop requiring cultivation in summer. Potatoes, peas, beans or other low growing kinds are preferable to corn or table crops.

It is well known among feeders that when an animal is once ready for fatten-ing, the quicker the process is carried on the better and the more tender the meat. Above all, once an animal is being fed, it should not be allowed to shrink during the fattening. It is not only a loss of time, but the animal will not retain of time, but the animal will not retain that uniform juiciness of flesh that it otherwise would. If the animal be in-tended to be fed right along from the calf, a plan usually practiced by the best feeders now-a-days, so that it may be turned off ripe at not more than three years old past, it must be forced right along from the time it is weaned. In fact along from the time it is weaned. In fact the calf should never know the weaning Paper. process.

Few of us are sufficiently aware of the Few of us are sufficiently aware of the true value of our insectivorous birds. From early spring until late autumn these restless visitors hunt the fields and gardens in quest of food, prying into every nook and erevice where the de-stroyers of our crops lie concealed, a countless host of which falls a prey to their huse concealed in the concealed of the second desting t their busy search during the season of planting and harvesting. Every bird that frequents a farm—if we except the henhawk and crow-comes to offer us an unpaid service whose importance we can hardly overestimate. Let any one who doubts this watch a phobe-bird, or a sparrow for half an hour, and see how, with scarcely a moment's intermission, our little insect-hunter pursues his eager tacks and then let him section that task; and then, let him reflect upon the necessity, the duty, of affording these birds every possible protection.

A simple and convenient method of obtaining a supply of radishes at any season of the year consists in steeping the seeds in water for twenty-four hours, and then exposing them to heat in small bags. In another twenty-four hours they will have commenced to germinate, then sown in boxes of welland, if manured soil, and occasionally sprinkled with a tepid water, radishes as large as pickling onions will be ready for gather-ing in five or six days —American Culti-

A Care for Bolls. Dr. Simon, a physician of Lor-raine, in France, states that as soon as the characteristic culminating point of a boil makes it appearance, he puts in a saucer a thimbleful of camph-orated alcohol, and, dipping the ends of his fingers into the liquid, rubs the in-flamed surface, especially the central portion, repeating the operation eight or ten times, continuing the rubbing at each time for about half a minute. He then allows the surface to dry, placing a then allows the surface to dry, placing a slight coating of camphorated olive oil over the inflamed surface.
