Brother Kills Brother.

At Bradford, McKean county, on Tuesday morning of last week Robert Butler shot and instantly killed Henry Butler, his brother. The murdered man had been working in the saw mill at Daguscahonda, five tives; some new statuary has been in-troduced, and many changes made in the rooms. The ventilation of the Representatives' Chamber is being greatly improved. A lobby has been made by tearing out the partitions be-tween the reporters', the Sergeant-at-Arms and the Speakers rooms, with windows opening to the cut-door world; the speaker's room has been transferred to what was the folding miles east of Ridgway, and boarded with William Fannin. He determined to make a visit to his brother at Bradford whom he he had not seen for a number of years arriving at the King farm near that city on Monday afternoon. The greeting between the two brothers was of the most friendly transferred to what was the folding room. An open fire-place has been built back of the speaker's desk, and various other decided improvements character. After supper the two brothers and Wm. King, with whom Robert lived, started for Bradford to inaugurated. A new electric lighting spend an evening socially together-They visited the Comique remaining until about 12 o'clock, and in other drinking places until two o'clock in the morning. At one of the places a fellow sung a song at which Robert took offense and struck the fellow in took offense and struck the fellow in the saloon. Henry interferred to stop of an appropriation of $2,400 for the purpose, and the remainder will, it is thought, pay for the larger one. The apparatus will occupy the west part of the dome, and will command Pennthe quarrel when the two brothers engaged in a scuffle which did not result in harm to either.

The following we copy from the Bradford Evening Star.

It is expected that, with electricity "King and Henry Butler got home first and entered the house some five instead of gas, the dome, the routunda and the halls will be better lighted minutes before Robert came in. King had spent this time in advising the than ever before, and that the cost of the same will be lessened. Speaking of the dome of the Capitol, the old Italian artist Signor Brumidi, who painted the allegorical figures in the unfortunate man not to have any more trouble with his brother but to go up stairs to bed and all would be right in the morning. When Robert came in he attacked his brother again, but findapex, and who has been at work here ing that he was about to get the worst of the fight let go, and telling Henry that he would give him just ten minutes to leave the house, started out. He went directly to Wickwire's, a neighbor's house, and calling him up asked the loan of his revolver. On being asked what he wanted with it his answer was that he didn't want anything in particular. He insisted on having it, and finally at Wickwire's suggestion promised that he would not do any harm with it, and he got it.

Returning toward the house he met his brother at the barn which stood saved himself from dropping down be low by catching on a round of the midway between where he had left him and where he had obtained the pistol.

Again they began fighting, and after man who called on him that he did ting range on his brother, and fired. The ball entered the left breast an inch and a half below the nipple, and four inches below the medium line, passing directly through the heart, clipping the edge of the liver, then through the second lumbar vertebra, after which all trace of it was lost, and the physicians who made the post mortem examination failed to discover where it had lodged.

As the victim fell he turned toward King who was standing near and said, "Good bye, Bill, the Lord have mercy on me," and in another moment was dead. The body was then borne into the house by King and the murderer; neighbors were summoned and a man despatched to acquaint the police of the facts, and their arrest of Robert Butler for the deliberate murder of his own brother followed.

When the officers arrived at the house Butler said, "I have killed my brother, what am I do?" The officers at once took him into custody and lodged him in the lockup in this city. Neither of the brothers were married Henry Butler was a man about 30 years of age, about 5 feet 7 inches high and would weigh near 160 pounds. His brother who killed him is not se strong a man, and of very much the same personal description. He is said by all who knew him to have been of exceedingly bad and quarrelsome dis-position, especially when drinking, which it seems was almost constantly.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter, (returning a paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken; any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for the payment.

2. Any person who takes a from the postoffice, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not is responsible for

4. If the subscriber orders his paper to stop at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it, if he takes it out of the post-office. The law proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay

Military and government circles are a good deal agitated over the Indian difficultics which have just broke out afresh. This time it is the Utes of Colorado and the White River country. The murder of Major Thornburg, agent Meeker and all the whites at the agency is another of those cold blooded atrocities likely to occur at any time, so long as our Indian policy and system remains where it now is. The Utes have heretofore been regarded as friendly, and the principal chiefs are still so. Seven of the chiefs were here in Washington less than a year ago remaining two weeks at th Tremont House, where I met and conversed with them. They were feted and feasted, and given receptions without number. They also attended church and made speeches to the Sunday school children, and before leaving for home the Interior Department gave them each a trunk, an overcoat and $100 in silver. One of overcoat and $100 in silver. One of this same party, "Colorado Chief" is now the leader of the warlike band on White river. The others, among whom are chiefs "Sam" and "Billy" remain friendly. Both of the last named outrank Colorado in the Ute councils. The principal chief "Ouray" is not a hereditary chieftain, but holds that position by reason of his great LOCAL ability. He superseded Colorado a few years ago, and the latter has since been sullen, reckless and violently opposed to the civilization of his tribe. I saw a great many of these Indians while in Colorado, and learned much of their habits and condition. They occupy a reservation comprising several millions of the best land in Colorado, but are generally opposed to cultivating the soil and very jealous of the encroachment of white prospectors and settlers. Dom PEDRO.
