Gents—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters some six months ago. My cure has been wonder-ful. I am pastor of the First Methodist Church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtue of your bitters.

Very respectfully,

REV. H. FEREBEE.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 11, 1880. Please accept our grateful acknowledgment for the Hop Bitters you were so kind to donate, and which were such a benefit to us. Yours, very gratefully, OLD LADIES OF THE HOME OF THE FRIENDLESS.

Immense Sale.

Evansville, Wis., June 24, 1879. Gentlemen-No Bitters have had onehalf the sale here and given such uni-versal satisfaction as your Hop Bitters have. We take pleasure in speaking for their welfare, as every one who tries them is well satisfied with their results. Several such remarkable cures have been made with them here that there are a number of carnest workers in the Hop Bitters cause. SUPERIOR Wis , Jan., 1880. I heard in my neighborhood that your Hop Bitters was doing such a great deal of good among the sick and afflicted with most every kind of disease, and as I had been troubled for fifteen years with neuralgia and all kinds of rheumatic complaints and kidney trouble, I took one bottle according to took one bottle according to directions. It at once did me a great deal of good, and I used another bottle. I am an old man, but am now as well as I can wish. There are seven or eight families in our place using Hop Bitters as their family medicine, and are so well satisfied with it they will not use any other. One lady here had been bedridden for years, is well and doing her work from the use of three bottles.

A Voice from the Press.

I take the opportunity to bear testi-mony to the cflicacy of your "Hop Bit-ters." Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whisky, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Connor, friends, here likewiselied have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, heratasic and want of appe-tite. The two former ailments are gone, and the latter greatly improved. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to lock after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now.

A Texas Horse Trade.

A Texas Horse Trade.

A man by the name of Smith, living in Galveston, Texas, kept a livery stable. Among other horses in his custody was a fine bay horse belonging to Jones. This horse, in cavorting about the stable yard, ran against a wagon and broke his leg. Of course Smith was responsible. All he had to do was to send for a peliteman, have the animal shot, and pay Jones about $60, the value of the animal. Smith notified the policeman, and started out to see Jones and inform him officially about the accident. Now Smith is considerable of a wag. Happening to meet Brown, he asked if Brown did not want to buy a horse. Brown wanted a cheap horse, and one that was safe, so that when Smith put the question to him he replied:

"Maybe see if you have the sight."

plied:
"Maybe so; if you have the right kind of a horse. Is he a steady, quiet horse?"

"He is the quietest horse you ever

"Won't bite or kick, and is not likely to run away?"

"If he bites, kicks or runs away?!'ll give your money back."

"Humph," said Brown, "what are you asking for the wonderful animal?"

"Pil let you have him for $21. Give me $1 down, and your note for $20 more, and it is a bargain. I have no more use for the horse, but I want money right off."

Brown thought to himself: "Smith has been tampering with cotton futures, and is strapped," so he planked down the dollar and gave his note for the balance.

If Brown was pleased with the trade,
Smith was still more so. He called to several friends and treated the crowd with the dollar, after which the pro-cession re-formed and marched down to cession re-formed and marched down to the stable to see Brown's new purchase. When they got there the policeman had already shot the poor brute, and he looked like all he ready needed was an inquest. Brown looked very much that way himself. He turned pale and then got red behind the ears. Then he smiled, but it was not a particularly healthy smile. Smith tried to help matters; and as soon as the crowd had quit holding their sides, he said: "Now, Brown, I don't want you to tell anybody that I swindled you. I call on these gentlemen to witness that I've done the square thing. That is Jones' bay horse, the men to witness that I've done the square thing. That is Jones' bay horse, the identical one I soid you. I guaranteed he would not bite or bark nor kick, and you can't provoke him to run away. I think he fills the bill. I want you to take him off or I'll charge you for keeping him."

ing him."

"Boys," said Brown, "don't give me away. I know I am not the only fool on Galveston Island. Let's go and hunt for a duplicate, and I will set 'em up."

They strolled out and met Robinson. "Look here, Robinson, don't you want a right good horse at a bargain? I've just bought Jones' ince bay horse. He cost $60 originally, and he is in just the same condition he was when I got him."

"Oh!" said Robinson, "times are hard, and horse feed is awful high. A high-stepping horse like Jones' bay will eat his head off in no time."

"That's where you are fooling your-self. He eats less than any horse you ever saw. By George, no horse can eat less than he can." "Ain't he a little frisky?"

Brown shook his head and replied: "You are doing that horse injustice You can tell by looking at him that he is not that kind of an animal. I'll let you have him for just what I gave for him—$20-$1 down, and your note, secured by such men as Heidenheimer, for the balance. I've got to have noney."

Robinson thought it was mean to take idvantage of Brown's distress, but then it was not his lookout. If he was out of his head, why didn't he have the court appoint him a guardian? So he planked down the dollar and gave the

A Fortune for Twenty-five Cents. All the worn-out and mutilated legal-tender notes come to the treasury for reby the aid of steam are reduced to a pulp very much smaller in volume than pulp very much smaller in volume than the original notes. This pulp is of a gray-whitish color; it has heretofore been thrown away. An enterprising young man has had an idea on this subject, however, and is working it out. He has taken the pulp, and is modeling it into different shapes. When dried the pulp assumes a light consistent form. Dogs, cats, bells and all animals and everything else almost are reproand everything else almost are repro-duced. Out of the destruction of $1,000. 000 in notes, he modeled a bullfrog of heroic size; $10,000 goes to make a mouse; $50,000 into a paper weight, and so on through the list. He sells these "pieces of art" at twenty-five cents each. One can, for that amount, pur-chase at least what was once a million or more of dollars in the currency of the land .- Savannah (Ga.) News.

Courage Necessary to Success. As the St. Louis Journal of Commerce pertinently says, a great deal of talent is lost in the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to the grave a number of obscure men, who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort, and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would in all probability have gone great lengths all probability have gone great lengths in fare. The fact is, to do anything in the world worth doing, we must not stand back shivering and thinking of the cold and danger, but just jump in and scramble through as well as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating risks and adjusting nice chances. It did very well long before the flood, where a man could support his friends upon an intended publication for a hundred and fifty years, and then live to see its success afterward. But at present a man waits and doubts, and hesitates, and consults his brother, and his uncle, and his particular friends, until one day he finds he is sixty years of age; then he he finds he is sixty years of age; then he has lost so much time in consulting his first cousin and particular friends that he has no time to follow their advice.

Something noble, something good, something pure, something manly, something god-like, is knocked off a man every time he gets drunk or stoops to sin through forgetfulness of God.

Farm Notes. Don't go straight from the cow stabl nto the milk-room.

Ground black pepper sprinkled on growing cabbages when the dew is on, will, it is said, free them from worms. From 150 to 170 degrees is given as the right temperature for scalding hogs, the former for small and the latter for large ones. Add a few handfuls of ashes, and frequently air the hogs while scalding.

Farmers who know the value of compost, and know how to make it, increase their manure pile. In this way hundreds of loads are made annually, the material being gathered on the premises, such as forest leaves, cornstalks (includ-ing the roots), weeds, vines, loam from fence corners, muck from ponds and ditches, occasional sprinking of lime through the mass, layers of barnyard manure, and thus build up oblong squares and let them remain over win-

The fruit in an or-chard near the farm buildings in which his hogs have run during the season is much less injured by the codling moth than the fruit of another orchard on his farm to which the hogs have not had access. By some fruit growers sheep are believed to be quite as efficient as swine in destroying the larvæ of the moth.—Lockport Journal.

There seems to be a use for anything, if we can only find out what it is. It has been discovered that even coffee grounds are good for something. They are recommended as a valuable manure for garden plants. A San Francisco lady recently received some plants from Mexico, with the direction to fertilize them with waste coffee and coffee grounds. The experiment was so sucessful that she tried the same treatment on roses, and the effect was a healthy and vigorous growth, and colored, better and more abundant flowers.

An exchange says: Many farmers are testing the practice of cultivating wheat. We hear of frequent experiments in this direction, and these have generally turned out satisfactorily. Cultivating or hocing is easily done by drilling the wheat in sixteen-inch rows, by stopping every alternate spout. It is not difficult to construct a simple cultivator that will work the spaces between the drills. There are two different wheat hoes in the market that do the work effectively. Wheat that is sown broadcast cannot be cultivated. This fact, and the better condition of drilled wheat, should be sufficient inducement to use the drill, if the great saving of seed and the lessening of labor are not,

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

Dr. J. C. Walker, of Indianapolis. Ind., gives the following account of the encounter with a burglar in his house: At about three o'clock in the morning I tender notes come to the treasury for retender notes come to the treasury for resumption After new notes are issued in their stead, the old notes are destroyed by the process of meceration.

This process includes the introduction
This process includes the introduction the the night in case of a callor other emergency. I got out of bed and elevated it to the usual height, thinking that the pressure was unusually light, and saying to Mrs. Walker that that was doubtless the cause of its burning so low, and returned to bed. That did not satisfy her, however. She imagined that the turning down of the light meant something, and woman-like looked unsomething, and woman-like looked unsomething, and woman-like looked unsomething. something, and woman-like looked un-der the bed. She saw the feet of a man sticking out toward the west wall, near the head of the bed, and here comes the most remarkable part of the story. She knew I was awake, and considered that if she told me there was a man under the bed I would grapple him, and he undoubtedly being armed would kill me. So she arose and went into the boys' room and awakened them carefully, telling them there was a man un-derneath our bed, and for them to get up quickly and watch while she went downstairs for a revolver. When she came back she gave it to John, remem-bering, even in that moment of supreme peril, that Frank had just recovered from a long spell of sickness, and was consequently weak and nervous. She then went along the hall to the room of the colored man, whom she knew had a revolver also. She then returned and went into Frank's room, where the two boys were. In the meantime I began wondering what she was about, and just after she passed the door the second time thought I heard a slight rustling under the bed. I tuened over toward the side she vacated, and met the gaze of a man, whose cated, and met the gaze of a man, whose head alone was raised over the bed rail near the foot, watching me. The state of affairs flashed across my mind in an instant. Mrs. Walker had seen the man, and had aroused the boys and colored man to assist, if necessary. The burglar was doubtless aware of her movements and was pondering on what movements, and was pondering on what was to be done. Of course I imagined

In our struggle he managed to get his right arm from un-der his body, and with it he fired his revolver, the ball grazing my left side an deenctrating the ceiling. I thought a young cannon had gone off.

The explosion somewhat startled me, and I let up on my grip, which enabled my antagonist to break away from me and rush into the hall. Just as he got outside of the door, apparently, two shots followed, and then all was still and dark. The shooting had extinguished the gas, and the agony of the moments that followed was almost unbearable. the moments that followed was almost unbearable. It seemed to me, of course, that the two shots had killed the boys, for I did not know that there was a revolver in the house, much less that Mrs. Walker had provided the boys with it I ran out into the hall expecting to encounter the burglar, and found the door into Frank's room partly closed. I tried to open it, but could not, and then it occurred to me that hy a chance the occurred to me that by a chance the boys might not be hurt, and I called out, "Is that you, John?" and the an-swer was like the sweetest music to my ears, for I recognized his voice.

"Are you hurt?"
"No, father, I am not, and Frank and mother are here with me, all right."
"Who did that shooting?"

"I did, and I know I hit him." As soon as possible the gas was relighted, but no burglar could be seen, either in the hall or on the stairway. Organizing an investigation party we went downstairs. The fellow, after being shot through the heart, had run downstairs through the heart, had run downstairs through the dining-room and kitchen, and fell prone on the threshold of the porch—dead. He had his revolver in one hand and knife in the other as he lay.

This was speedily agreed to by Jack. Mrs. Gilpin was out calling, Lizzie was out too, and so the boys had full swing. They hitched on one can to the narrative of the canine and then let him loose. The parlor door happened to stand ajar, and for this the dog made. Then there was havoc wrought. The scene that met the eyes of the boys as they looked in was unique and varied, for the air as filled with dog, plaster bust of Shakespeare, oyster can, cuspidore, and finally the dog ran his fore feet through the what-not and sowed the bric-a-brac it contained in broadcast confusion on

The Afghans. The Afghans are Mohammedans of the Sunni faith; they reverence the first four Khalifs, and have no particular veneration for the prophet (Khalif) Ali. They are split up into tribes, clans and families, each under its own head, commander or sirdar; and they are often at war or feud, and often engaged in conspiracies, rebellions and assassinations. They are tall, burly, active men, with olive complexions, dark Jewish features, black eyes, and long black hair hanging down in curls. Their counten-ances are calm, and they affect a frank-ness and bonhomie; they will some-times indulge in a rude jocularity; but their expression is savage, and evil passions are often raging in their hearts like hidden fires. They are blood-thirsty, deceitful and deprayed; ready to sell their country, their honor and their very souls for lucre. They care for nothing but fighting and loot, delighting in the din of arms, the turmoil of battle and the plunder of the killed and wounded; without any relish for home life or domestie ties; without a sting of remorse or a sense of shame. There are no people on earth that have a finer physique or a viler morale. They are the relics of a nation who have played out their parts in history. In bygone ages they conquered Hindostan on the one side and Persia on the other; but the conquering instinct has died away amidst the incessant discord of family feuds and domestic broils,

A Warning for Jokers. The funeral of Miss Clara Bagnall recently took place from her mother's house in Indiantown, N. B. The story of her sad life should be a warning to practical jokers. Several years ago, while she was but a girl, a gentleman of her ac quaintance thought he would play a joke on her, never imagining for a moment that it would result as seriously as it did. He arrayed himself in a diabolical rig and presented himself before her. She was naturally of a weak and nervous temperament, and the shock that her nerves experienced by the that her nerves experienced by the frightful apparition proved too much for her. She fell in a fit, only to wake a raving maniac. For five or six years her friends managed to keep her at home, until her health began to fail, when they very reluctantly decided upon sending her to the asylum. She lingered there for some time, until death relieved her of her suffering.—Toronto (Ont.) Mail.

was to be done. Of course I imagined that that was to shoot me, and to prevent him I lunged at him with my right hand, striking him in the right eye and knocking him back on the floor. As I struck I threw myself upon him and bore him to the floor. The space where we fell was narrow and circumscribed, and, although I had the tellow by the throat, he succeeded in grasping my wrist with such a grip as to temporarily paralyze it. I never pefore felt, and did not think it possible for a man to exert

The Text.

A pious old lady, who was too unwell to attend meeting, used to send her thick-headed husband to church to find out the text the preacher selected as the foundation of his discourse. The poor dunce was rarely fortunate enough to remember the words of the text, or even the chapter and verse where they could be found; but one Sabbath he ran home in hot haste, informed his wife that he could repeat every word, without missing a syllable. The words were as follows:

"An angel came down from heaven and took a live coal from the altar." "Know every word," replied the busband.

"I am anxious to hear it," continued the wife.
"They are nice words," observed the husband.

"I am glad your memory is improving; but don't keep me in suspense, my dear," said she.

"Just get your big Bible, and I will say the words, for I know them by heart. I said them a hundred times on my way home."

"Well, let's hear them."

"Ahem!" said he, clearing his throat.
"An Injun came down from New Haven and took a live colt by the tail and jerked him out of the halter!"
The memory of one-half who attend church is very similar to the above.

The Military Salute.

Within the last few years among the many changes introduced in the army is that of the salute. Why the old, time-honored salute was abolished, no one knows; but it is an interesting fact, and knows; but it is an interesting fact, and one probably unknown to most of our readers, that the old salute, which consisted of the hand being brought to a horizontal position over the eyebrows, has a very old origin, dating, in fact, from the very commencement of the history of the English army. Its origin s found in the tournaments of the middle ages, and was as follows: Atter the queen of beauty was enthroned, the knights which were to take part in the day marched past the dias on which she sat, and, as she passed, they shielded their eyes from the rays of her beauty. Such was the very interesting origin of the old solute. the old sainte

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face. WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1879.

Ms. H. R. Strvess:

Dear Sir—I can testify to the good effect of your Medicine. My little boy had a Scrofula sore break out on his head as large as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down his face from one ear to the other, under his beek, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bottles of your valuable Vegetise completely circe him.

Very respectfully,

MRS. G. R. THATCHER.
