Charge Along the Whole Line.

Unerringly the index finger of public sentiment as shown by the elections held in the states of Ohio and Indiana, points to the election of James A. Garfield as the next President of the United States. Broken and scattered the forces of the enemy are flying in every direction, while the victorious hosts of the Republicans, flushed with victory are pursuing them still further into the land of sorrow and despair. The leaders of their forces are discouraged, and their followers gone. The sober second thought, the awakening common sense, the sturdy patriotism of the people are the elements that are increasing the high tide of Republican success. The great public heart always beats right, no matter what the politicians may do. The people believe in a free country under the glorious stars and stripes. Alarmed at the symptom of danger which seems to threaten the welfare of our common country, the people with sturdy might place their strength with the party that upholds the flag as against the party that may seem to waver in the faith. The solid south cry of the Democratic party rings like a death knell in the ears of the aroused yeomanry of this broad land, as with united effort they repudiate the idea and determine to oppose with a solid North this unhallowed wrong of a solid South. The principles of Lee and Jackson are not considered the safe ones, as a gigantic war has demonstrated they were wrong, and as a consequence a verdict sealed by the silent ballot, more potent than the leaden ball, is recorded with no uncertain meaning against these principles and against the men who uphold them. November election day will come and once again the men of the North, shoulder to shoulder, as they once stood before the battlelines of the rebel hosts, will with a common purpose seal the seal of condemnation on the face and heresy of a solid South. By these elections and by the election held in the opening of the month November, the rights of white and black, North and South is guaranteed above the remotest suspicion of doubt. In the sentiment then, if not the exact words of the illustrious Zachariah Chandler the mission of the Republican party is not ended until any man black or white throughout this broad land can go to the farthest point of the sunny South or to the remotest place of the frigid North, and make the blackest kind of Republican speeches when and where he pleases. Then, steady, along the whole line, the fight of the Republican party is the fight for the rights of the people and will succeed. In the crowning of the victors, after the battle, is forgotten the grime and smoke that made the crowning possible. Steady then, men, cast your ballot for Garfield and Arthur. They will be elected.

Andrew G. Curtin. Next Tuesday the people of the 20th Congressional District of which Elk county forms a part will be called upon to elect a representative in Congress. Two men are running for this important position, the man whose name heads this article being one of them, and to him we wish now to call the attention of our readers. Who is he and from whence comes he? What are his claims on the people? Why do the Democrats place him in nomination for this high office? What are his qualifications? Other questions could be asked, but the answer to the ones we have propounded will suffice to convince all well meaning men that Andrew Gregg Curtin is the very last man in this Congressional District for whom they should vote.

Who is he and from whence comes he? He is the sad wreck on the shores of political events of a man, who once stood up among men, proud as the mighty oak in yon forest whose head soared to the sky and whose mighty branches, affording protection to the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field, while defying the mighty tempest of almost countless years. The Great War Governor of the mighty commonwealth of Pennsylvania, enjoying the confidence of a majority of her citizens, and held up as a shining light in the camp of the Republicans. An orator whose word thousands held breath, as he portrayed in colors of rhetorical fancy the faults of the Democratic party, and pointed with steady hand to the way of the Republicans as the right way to National peace and prosperity. Not only did this state sound with his great fame but other states, yea, the whole Nation, sounded and resounded his praises until other nations caught the sound and other countries heard of this great man. Honored by the Republican party as few men have been received, he was still stepping up to receive higher honors. As Minister to Russia, as named for the office of Vice President, he increased and grew in honor and fame, until men wondered at his great height, but as the height he climbed was great so is his fall deplorable.

What are his claims on the office? Just this, that he once ran against a man whom he considered his inferior, and was badly beaten. Smarting under the sting of an injured pride, he contested the seat in Congress of the man who defeated him, and a congressional committee decided that his case was not a good one and that the other man was fairly elected. After his first defeat, knowing his opponent, Seth H. Yeocum, to be comparatively a poor man, he relied on his wealth to crush out this poor man in a long contest, thinking in his evil heart that his opponent would abandon the fight for lack of funds. The will of the people, as expressed at the ballot box, Mr. Curtin regarded not, his own selfish being the only thing that gave his heart cause for joy. I will crush out this man who has dared to oppose me, even though the people have recorded their verdict in his favor. He is a poor man and I am rich. I will crush him! I will make him succumb. The long contest is a matter of history. Mr Yeocum's friends flocked to his rescue, and upheld his hands against the onslaught of this once great, but now fallen and desperate man. Mr Yeocum succeeded and the result sickened Mr. Curtin to his heart's core. Visions of former greatness mixed in his dreams of present ruined hopes. But, thought Andrew Gregg, I will go before the Democratic convention and ask for a vindication. For I have been injured, my feelings have been outraged. I have been beaten by a man who once received a commission from me as a Lieutenant in a company of volunteers while I was the Great War Governor. Other thoughts he thought and other words he spoke, but for two years his dream was of vindication.

Why did the Democrats place him again in nomination for this high office? Not because they love him, for once he cursed the name Democrat as piously as ever did Homer Greeley or Thad. Stevens. Not because they were short of candidates. Not because the party was honored by his presence. Not for any of these reasons, but simply and solely because they had a certain man in their hearts for the sunny South or to the remotest place of the frigid North, and make the blackest kind of Republican speeches when and where he pleases. Then, steady, along the whole line, the fight of the Republican party is the fight for the rights of the people and will succeed. In the crowning of the victors, after the battle, is forgotten the grime and smoke that made the crowning possible. Steady then, men, cast your ballot for Garfield and Arthur. They will be elected.

Great was the greatness and sublime the heights he once held, but, alas! that greatness has departed, and the once bright intellect is now shadowed with a fancied wrong, while the man wallows in the lowest of low ground, his degradation all the more conspicuous by reason of the comparison. Filled by his friends, scorned by his enemies, while he stands almost at the close of man's allotted span, with nervous grasps he reaches out for a seat in Congress, asks and begs for it from a party who in his towering strength he despised and hated. Once a man now a whining, chronic office seeker. Every man should fathom the shallow conduct of Andrew G. Curtin and vote against him. Teach this political tramp by the power of the silent ballot that he cannot insult the intelligence of the people of this district by whining when fairly defeated, and by seeking with the aid of his money to crush out a poor man whom the people fairly elected. Vote against this political vagrant. Let the November show of public sentiment cover him as deeply with an adverse majority as he has been covered with disgrace by his infamous conduct. Drop the curtain on his political aspirations forever and ever.

The Judicial Question. The question of who shall be elected Judge of this judicial district is a question of business rather than politics. The practical question for every voter to consider is, which of the two candidates for Judge, Hon. Wm. D. Brown, or Hon. Russelas Brown, will conduct the business of our courts to the best interests of the suitor, the taxpayer and the general public? It may be taken for granted that the character, ability, and legal attainments of these two gentlemen are equal. Certainly no one will claim that Wm. D. Brown in any of these respects is less qualified than his opponent, but there are strong reasons why he should be elected at the age of fifty-seven. Hon. Wm. D. Brown is just in the prime of a ripened intellect, with a strong body, a vigorous mind and a good voice he can perform the duties of Judge to the satisfaction of the entire public.

Should Hon. Russelas Brown be elected he will enter upon the duties of his office at the age of nearly seventy, and close his term of office at nearly the advanced age of eighty years. It is a serious question whether the Judgeship should be entrusted to so old a gentleman. If at any time he should become unfit to perform the duties of this office he cannot easily be got rid of. Let each voter remember that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" and vote for Hon. Wm. D. Brown without regard to politics.

Figures that do not lie. In the election of 1874 the vote of Elk county for Lieutenant Governor was for Latta, Dem. 1127; Olmstead, Rep. 474 or a total vote of 1591. In the same year the regular candidates for Sheriff and the votes which they received were as follows: P. W. Hays, Dem. 822; H. H. Wensel, Rep. 258 or a total vote of 1080. The reason for this falling off is not denied by anybody; the ring came forward and openly ran and elected Mr. Scull as an independent Democrat. The Democratic vote of St. Marys and Benzing being as follows: St. Marys, Hays 21; Scull 239. Benzing, Hays 7; Scull 273. In Jay township Mr. Scull received 30 votes and in all the balance of the county he got but 25 votes. There never was any reason for making a bitter fight for his election; all his interests, social, and financial were in Philadelphia, and he was only temporarily a resident of this county. The only redeeming feature of his election was the fact that his administration of the affairs of his office was unsatisfactory to his friends as it was to his opponents. But the running of Scull by the Ring had a marked influence on the vote for Assembly. Mr. Wimmer was the regular Democratic candidate and on a strict party vote he should have received a majority of 693 votes. As it was his majority was cut down to 224 and it was only through the extraordinary exertions of himself and a few friends that he was saved from defeat. This result was not caused by any unpopularity because Mr. Wimmer was at that time and is to-day one of the strongest men the Democrats could nominate. His narrow escape from defeat can be wholly attributed to the ring.

In 1877 the regular nominees for Sheriff were John R. Kime, Dem. and D. C. Oyster, Rep. and the total vote for Sheriff was 1920. On a strict party vote Mr. Kime should have been elected by a majority of 676 votes; as it was he received 522 votes while Mr. Oyster got 580 and the office. At this election T. J. Burke, George Everitt and James Rogan ran as independent candidates, the total vote for Burke being 354. It is denied that the Ring supported Burke, and this denial is true so far as the individual vote of the Ridgway branch of the Ring is concerned, he cast his vote for Mr. Kime, but the result of the election does not show that he worked for him unless it be conceded that his advocacy of a candidate has a tendency to drive votes away. But granting their pretensions in regard to Ridgway, what was the course of the St. Marys wing? If they also supported Kime it is a curious coincidence that wherever their influence was greatest the vote for Kime fell off the most. In St. Marys and Benzing together Kime received 144 votes when he should have received over 500. And it has been asserted that they induced Everitt to run for the express purpose of defeating both the regular candidates and electing Burke. Not only did the ring thus oppose the election of Kime but two reliable witnesses say they saw J. L. Brown the present Ring candidate throw the ticket on the floor saying, "there is the Democratic ticket if anyone wants to vote it, I shall vote for Oyster."

With this record staring them in the face it is almost impossible to believe they could have the brazen effrontery to ask anybody to sustain the ticket which they succeeded in putting in the field by various tricks and devices best known to themselves, but pretty well known to others, and which they now call the regular ticket and which they flaunt in our faces with the battle cry of "Who the devil cares for the wishes of the people?" For a great many years the Ring has disregarded the wishes of the people; they have "run" the county long enough in their own private interest; it is high time that at least a part of their extravagant aspirations should be subdued, and it is confidently believed that a sufficient number of votes will be found outside of their vest pockets to roll up a rousing vote for Earley and Taylor.

Vote for Thos. H. Murray for Congress.

A Wise Deacon. "Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family well the past season when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors visiting us so often."

"Deacon, I'll use your medicine hereafter."

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored!

Just published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, also, consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
