On the eighteenth day public interest in the On the eighteenth day public interest in the trial was unabated, and the court-room was crowded netwithstanding it was the opening day of Congress. The following eight doctors, who have made a study of mental diseases, were called by the defense: Doctors J. G. Riernan, Charles H. Nichols, superintendent of the Bloomingdale (New York city) insane asylum; Charles Folsom, of Boston; Samuel Worcester, of Salem, Mass.; W. W. Golding, superintendent of the government insane asylum at Washington; James H. McBride, of Milwaukee; Walter Channing, of Brookline, Mass.; and Theodors W. Fisher, of Boston. A hyrothetical question, in which the points relating to the prisoner's mental condition as set forth by the defense, including the insanity in his family, and his alleged belief that he set forth by the defense, including the insantly in his family, and his alleged belief that he acted upon inspiration, were assumed to be true, was read to the foregoing and they were asked whether upon the state of things they thought Guiteau was insane. Soven of them replied that if the propositions were true the man was insane. Dr. Worcester would not be a proving because he wanted a the man was insane. Dr. Worcester would not express an opinion, because he wanted a clearer explanation of the word inspiration than Mr. Scoville gave him. Guiteau constantly feer-wed in the proceedings. He began by saying that he wanted the experts to pass upon the question whether when a man claims he is impelled to do an illegal act by a power beyond him he is sane or insane. He showed a protty clear understanding of the testimony given, and ence pointed out how well it fitted his case. As usual he was sensitive on the question of his mental powers, and was angry when a witness spoke discouragingly of his Garfield speech, declaring he would rather be hanged as a sensible man than acquitted as a fool. He was also affended by a question implying that he was a vulgar criminal. There was nothing vulgar about this case, he extanded it was all high-toned. At the end of the dav's proceedings, when Mr. Scoville anacounced that he expected to have President hounced that he expected to have President Arthur as a witness, Guiteau insisted that Jeneral Grant, ex-Senators Conkling and Platt, ex-Governor Jewell and others should be called ix-Governor Jewell and others smould be called to show what was the political situation before the assassination. He also suggested that President Arthur would do well to appoint Smory A. Storrs as attorney-general.

The first witness called for the defense on

The first witness cancer for the detense on the interteenth day was Congressman Charles B. Farwell, of Chicago, who testified that he had had one or two interviews with Guiteau and regarded him as insane; but on cross-examination he said Guiteau could distinguish between right and wrong. After a short examination of George C. Gorham, editor of the Washington Benefits of the Washington Benefits of the Washington Benefits of the Washington Benefits of the State of the St ination of George C. Gorham, editor of the Washington Hepublican, during which Guiteau constantly and violently interrupted and asked questions, at one time saying that his counsel, Mr. Scoville, was "getting cranky on this business," the defense closed, Mr. Scoville saying, however, that he expected some testimony from President Arthur expected some testimony from President Arthur and Dr. Spitzka. Mr. Scoville explained that what he wanted to show by the President's tes-timony was that in October last Guiteau wrote letter on public business, and he im-hat he regarded this letter as proof of plied that he regarded this letter as proof of the prisoner's insanity. It was arranged that he should send written questions to the Presi-dent. During the close of the session a curious scene occurred when Mr. Scoville proceeded to read from Guiteau's book, "Truth." Mr. Scoville said he would have to read the whole book, and he was beginning to do so when the prisoner called out to him: "Do not read it like a schoolboy. Read it with some spirit." Thereupon Mr. Scoville proposed that the prisoner himself should do the reading, and he proceeded to do so, with rather a poor effort he proceeded to do so, with rather a poor effort at declamation and with occasional illustrative remarks, such as, "That is the way that Paul got in his work." When a slight disturbance was caused by some of the spectators trying to get out, the prisoner commanded order and said: "Some of this book is interesting. It is good religious talk. It will do people good t good religious talk. It will do people good to hear it read." After about three-quarters of an hour spent in this way the district-attorney in-tervened, representing that this was a waste of the time of the court, and as the result of some discussion it was agreed that Mr. Scoville should the next day mark the portions of the book to which he proposed to call the attention of the jury. of the jury.
Guiteau began proceedings on the twentieth day by declaring himself dissatisfied with the day by declaring himself dissatisfied with the development of the facts relating to the political situation, wherein lay the gist of the alleged offense, and he renewed his demand for the testimony of Grant, Conkling, Plat, "and those kind of men." He announced also his purpose to make the closing speech for the defense. No answer having been received from the half-decaying been received from the half-decay automated in writing to President Arthur the court said that the defense about here the heart of this testing of the political statement of the said that the defense about the said that the defense about the said that the defense are said that the defense are said that the said that the defense are said that the said should have the benefit of this testimony when obtained. Guiteau disclaimed a wish to bring the President into court, expressing a high regard for him and claiming the credit of having made him President. The prosecution called to the witness stand General W. T. Sherman, who identified the letter that was placed in his hands after the shooting written by Gui teau, and said that he suspected at the time that there might be a conspiracy, but afterwards he concluded that the shooting was the act of one man. Guiteau the shooting was the act of one man. Guiteau here thanked the general for protecting him with the military, at which the warrior smiled grimly. The prosecution then put upon the witness stand ten citizens of Freeport, Ill., who testified to their intimate acquaintance with the assassin's father, and declared their belief in his perfect sanity, which they never heard questioned until after July 2 last. Their names questioned until after July 2 last. Their names are Edward P. Barton, a lawyer; A. T. Green, a collector; G. W. Tandy, boot and shoe dealer; Dr. D. T. Buckley, who had been the family physician of Guiteau's father; S. D. Atkins, editor Freeport Republican; J. S. Cochran, a lawyer; G. W. Oiler, a justice of the peace; A. A. Babcock, a lawyer; State Senator D. H. Sunderland, and Horace Tarbox, capitalist. While one of these witnesses was being examined, the prisoner took occasion to comexamined, the prisoner took occasion to com-ment upon the President's message, saying:

"I am glad that General Arthur has rapped those miserable Mormons, and I hope he will do it again. I want him to make it a specialty of his administration to destroy Mormonism. The message shows that he is a very fine man in his administration. I expect he will give us the message shows that he is a very me man in his administration. I expect he will give us the best administration we have ever had. The message has the true ring to it."

Guteau came into court on the twenty-first day escorted in the usual fashion—an officer walking in front, a second one behind him, holding him by his left arm, under which there was a houlds of newspapers and behind will holding him by his left arm, under which there was a bundle of newspapers, and behind still another officer. The day was more exciting than any recent day of the trial, and the mass of evidence taken was exceedingly damaging to the defense. The first witness called was Mrs. Julia M. Wilson, a cousin of the assassin, a daughter of the Mrs. Julia Maynard whom the defense had sought to make out insane. Mrs. Maynard was a sister of Luther W. Guiteau, the assassin's father, and the purpose of the defense was, of course, to show parallel cases of insanity in that generation of the Guiteaus. The witness culogized her mother with a quivering voice, and testified that she had never seen the slightest trace of flightiness in her conduct. In the course of her testimony Mrs. Wilson stated that her father was Insane before he died, and this led to a scone between the assassin and his brother. John W. Guiteau rose, and addressing the court asked that he rose, and addressing the court asked that the question and answer be stricken out as irrelevant. He protested against having things of this kind, not affecting any blood relation of the prisoner, go out to the world. The dis-trict attorney intimated that the testimony was valuable as showing that if Abby Maynard (one of the two members of the Guiteau family who have been members of insane asylums) was insane, she probably inherited insanity from her father. Mr. Scoville was now on his feet father. Mr. Scoville was now on his feet, sagrily objecting to any interference by John W. Guitean. This fired the assassin at once. "I think he's a perfect nuisance," he shouted, banging his fist on the table in front of him, while his eyes gleamed hatefully. "He'd better go back to Boston. I haven't known anything about him for years. He just crawled into this case, and he's trying to get a little notoriety out of me. I never recognized him as a brother. He's not of counsel in this case and don't know anything." sel in this case and don't know anything." Several other witnesses next gave testimony tending to disprove the plea of insanity. This displeased Guiteau, who accused some of the witnesses of bias, and claimed that the testiwillesses of bias, and claimed that the testimony of others was irrelevant. President Arthur's reply to the written questions sent him by Mr. Scoville was read. The President said he had seen Guiteau at least ten and perhaps twenty times, but had no conversation with him except to return the ordinary salutations, and once or twice in answer to his request to be employed as a speaker by the Republican State committee, of which he was chairman. Guiteau had never rendered any political services that the President knew of to the Republican party in the last campaign. There was nothing in the prisoner's relation to himself or to General Grant or Senator Conkling or any other leader of the Republican party, socially or politically, to give him any ground for supposing he would receive political preferment, and he had never given Guiteau any reason to think he could have any political or personal influence with him. The President added that in October last he remony of others was irrelevant. President Arceived a letter from Guiteau, containing some claim to having rendered important services to the Republican party, and an appeal for the postponement of his trial. He did not preserve the letter. The Rev. Dr. Moarthur, of New York city, of whose church Guiteau and his wife were members several years ago, described his acquaintance with the assessin and the circumstances under which Guiteau was expelled from the church. The prisance alterpelled from the church. The prisoner alternately contradicted this witness outright and addressed him with an air of familiarity.

began with the continuation of the examina-tion of the Rev. Dr. MacArthur, of New York, who testified that he had seen no indications of unsoundness in Guiteau. The prisoner, as usual, constantly interrupted and used abusive language, at one moment showing anger at the witness, at another making an onanger at the witness, at another making an on-slaught on a local reporter, and then again at-tacking District-Attorney Corkhill, saying: "If your record was dug up, colonel, it would stink worse than mine. I understand you are booked for removal. You had better go slow. The President is only waiting to get this thing off his mind before you get your ticket-of-leave. I want the absolute truth about this." Stephen want the absolute truth about this." Stephen English, of New York, editor and proprieter of the Insurance Tomes, next detailed all the circumstances connected with the prisoner, procuring bail for him while he was in Ludlow Street jail on a charge of libel. He was interrupted at every step of his narrative by the prisoner ejaculating: "That is not true;" "Confine yourself to the facts, English;" "He got me arrested by actual perjury;" "That is absolutely false. I can convict you that you are lying. There is not an insurance president in New York who does not know that you are a first-class fraud;" "That is the biggest lie you have spoken. Why, I would not spit on you in the street, you old scoundrel;" "The insurance presidents of New York would not believe you under cath, you old fraud." In reply to the question whether he had any doubt as to the sanity of the prisoner, the witness said: "Never. On the contrary, he appeared to be a new of appeared to b "Never. On the contrary, he appeared to be a man of remarkable keenness of intellect, be-cause he completely outwitted me. He was a New York lawyers were then examined, and testified either as to the prisoner's sanity or rascality, Guiteau continually interrupting in his usual abusive style. Judge Hawes, of the New York marine court in whose office the prisoner occurring a tyle. Judge Hawes, of the New York marine court, in whose office the prisoner occupied a desk in 1874, testified that they had nover seen any indication of unsoundness of mind in Guiteau. Senator Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, testified that the prisoner asked him in Washington last spring to help him get office, but the witness told him he was already overloaded with applications from his own State. He had never questioned Guiteau's sanity. Guiteau patronizingly said of Senator Harrison: "You are a good fellow, Senator I remember you very well. Our conversations were generally social." The next witness was Isaac F. Lloyd, of New York, secretary of the Mutual Life Insurance company. He presented applications for insurance four from John W. Guiteau, two from the prisoner, and one from the prisoner's father. The point made was that those applications contained negative answers to the question whether point made was that those applications contained negative answers to the question whether there was insanity in the family. Upon objection by prisoner's counsel the court excluded the applications of the prisoner's father and brother. But the great sensation of the day was created when D. McLean Shaw, a New York lawyer in whose office Guiteau had a desk ten years ago, testified that the prisoner told him in 1872 that he (Guiteau) was bound to be notorious before he died; that if he could not get notoriets for he (Guiteau) was bound to be notorious before he died; that if he could not get notoriety for good, he would get it for evil; that he would shoot some of our big men, and would imitate Wilkes Booth. As the story was told, and the spectators felt how completely it fitted the pop-ular conception of the assassin's character, a profound sensation was visible. The assassin was beside himself with excitement. "You lie" he shouted, shaking his head, at the witlie," he shouted, shaking his hand at the wit-ness. "You're a mean, low, dirty liar. I never lie," he shouted, shaking his hand at the witness. "You're a mean, low, dirty liar. I neverhad any such conversation, you low, dirty, low-lived whelp. My wife and you know something of each other.
She told me you came up to visit her,"
he said, with a grin of pure malice; "I'll show

torrent of abuse on the witness, which lasted almost without a break through both the direct and cross-examination. Mr. Scoville did his writes: congregation wended their way to their | size. Some of the poor fellows, seeing that all respective homes, there to find the could not escape in this way, tried to dash Christmas roast meat done to a turn. Before, however, sitting down to the festal meal, some further rites had to be performed. First, the Domachitza, taking with her a dish containing corn, a cup of wine and a pomegranate, begged me to accompany her to the cattlestall. She then entered the stall set apart for the goats, and having first sprinkled them with corn, took the wine cup in her hand and said: "Good-morning, little mother! The peace of God be on thee! Christ is born; of a truth He is born. Mayst thou be healthy. I drink to thee in wine; I give thee a pomegranate; mayst thou meet with all good luck!" She then lifted the cup to her lips, too a sip, tossed the pomegranate over the herd, and throwing her arms around the she-goat, uttered a blessing. At the end of the service the beautiful old Slav rite, called the "Peace of God," was performed by the whole congregation. Every one approached his neighbor and kissed him or her on both cheeks, saying, "Hristos se rodi" (Christ is born)!" To this the other replied: "Va istinu se rodi (Of a truth He is born)!" and returned the kisses, and this was repeated till each had kissed and been kissed by all present. In Northwest Bosnia, and I believe other districts, it is usual for the house ather, there generally known as stary-eshina, or elder, to take a bit of cheese and of the Christmas roast meat to be consecrated by the pope at the end of the service, and the consecrated morsels are eaten on the way back.

Test for Water.

A simple test is to cork up a small bottle nearly full of it, in which a piece of lump sugar has been put. If by thus excluding the air and letting is stand in the light for two or three days there is not a milky cloud seen, but the water remains clear, it may be considered free from the phosphates with which sewage water is impregnated. To ascertain if water contains iron, take a glass of water and add to it a few drops of the infusion of nutgalls, or suspend a nutgall in it by means of a thread for twenty-four hours. If iron be present, the water will become of a dark-brown or black color. Prussiate of potash is a still more delicate test for detecting iron. If a crystal, or a drop of it, when dissolved, be added to a glass of water containing iron, it will immediately become of a blue color. To ascertain if water contains magnesia, take a quantity of the water, and boil down to a twentieth part of its bulk; then drop a few grains of car-bonate of ammonia into a small glass of water. No magnesia will yet be precipitated; but on adding a small quantity of phosphate of sods, if any magnesia be present it will then make its ap-pearance and fall to the bottom of the glass. In this experiment it is necessary that the carbonate of ammonia be in a neutral state.

A TERRIBLE fire which broke out early in th

morning in a frame boarding-house occupied by railroad workmen, at Gibson's station, eight miles from Fittsburg, Pa., resulted in the frightful death of ten men and severe injuries to ten others, one of whom died in the hospital the same night, while two or three more were not expected to recover. The fire originated in the upsetting and consequent explosion of a kerosene lamp. An eye-witness says: "Be-tween 2 and 3 o'clock Mr. McCune, the boarding-house keeper, rose and lighted the kitchen fire. Leaving a lighted lamp on a table near the dining-room door, he went to arouse his wife and the servants. In his absence the explosion occurred and the dining-room was in flames. Mr. McCune made his escape with his wife and the servant, and shouted to those upstairs to run for their lives. In another noment the flames had enveloped the stairway, thus cutting off all means of escape for the men above except through the small opening at either end, and from these the sliding door had to be removed. The loft was tilled with straw and combustible material used as be !ding, and only those who were nearest the openings could make their escape. A rus's was made for these openings by the half-crazed Arthur J. Evans in his account of men and a struggle for life took place, each $2,225,000,000 in 1870 to $2,890,000, Christmas in the Black mountains trying to crowd the others out of the way, as 000 in 1880. only one at a time could be forced through the windows on account of their small downstairs and through the flames, only to meet a horrible death. The men had not even time to clothe themselves, so sudden was the alarm and so quickly did the fire make headway. Those who made their escape seemed so bewildered by the sudden outburst of flamand the cries of their companions that they rushed back into the burning building, atempting to save their property. At this moment a crash came. The frail walls, weakened by the flames, crushed in upon the unfortunate men, and their cries for help were drowned in the roar of the flames. In a few moments the flames were dying away and the scene that followed was terrible Shricks and groans went up on every side from the poor unfortunates who had been burned and scorched. Men with great patches of skin and flesh peeled from their bodies rolled upon the ground in their agony. Half a dozen Pittsburg physicians hastened to the scene of the fire as soon as they received word of the sad calamity and did all in their power to alleviate the sufferings of the living.

FACTS ABOUT UMBRELLAS.

Antiquarians say that the umbrella was invented shortly after the Jood, and has been the least improved upon of all appliances for human comfort, the shape being now as it was in those youthful days of the world. An umbrella is much like a pigeon as to the question of possession—the last one who gets it owns it. The following facts about umbrellas—especially the last one—may serve every reader a splendid purpose sooner or later: To place your umbrella in a rack indicates that it is about to change owners. An umbrella carried over a woman, the man getting nothing but drippings of the rain, indicates courtainly. When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings, it indicates marriage. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies woman the drippings, it indicates marriage. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an eye is to be lost by the man who follows you. To put a cotton um brella by the side of a nice silk one signifies that "a kenange is no robbery." To lend an umbrella signifies that "I am a fool." To carry an umbrella signifies that "I am a fool." To carry an umbrella just high enough to tear out men eyes and knock off men's hats, signifies "I am a woman." To go without an umbrella in a rain-storm shows I am sure of getting rheumatism, and will have to use Sr. Jacons On to get well." To keep a fine umbrella for your own use and a bottle of Sr. Jacons Ott. always in the house, in case of rheumatism or accident, would signify that you are real philosopher.

The Dead Cannot be Raised, nor if your lungs are badly wasted away can you be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." It is, however, unequaled as r tonic, alterative and nutritive, and readily cures the most obstinate cases of bronchitis, coughs, colds and incipient consumption, far surpassing in efficacy cod liver oil. Send two stamps for Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on consumption and kindred affections. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The friends of the Davenport (Iowa) Academy of Sciences claim that that institution possesses the only evidence that has yet been discovered that the mysterious mound builders had a written language. It has in its museum two inscribed tablets which were found in some of the mounds, and which have attracted attention from American and European archeologists. Mr. Prett, late president of the academy, believes that the evidence of the genuineness of the inscriptions is sufficient, but the fact must be regarded as still very much

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 24, 1876.

H. R. Stevens:

Dear Mr. For several years I have been suffering from Frees and Agar. Have used Quitable and other pulseques modeline to break up the chills, until my general health became poor. Finally, through the advice of a friend who had used your Vecening, I tried it, and it worked on my system like a charm. I have not had a chill since I commenced using the Vecenius, I near that I had not heard of the Vecenius, I reret that I had not heard of the Vecenius four ago. I believe it would have saved much suffering and exposes. Very respectfully, MRS. ANN GREEN.
