Appulling Effects of an Explosion in a Ches-

The people of Chester, Pa., were startled earls The people of Chester, Pa., were startled early in the morning by an explosion in the pyrotechnic works of Prof. J. C. Jackson, which killed fourteen persons, scriously wounted about thirty or forty more, and shattered every house in the neighborhood. The scene of the disaster is an isolated district of he city, where only a few shanty dwellers live. The house in which the explosion occurred is an historical structure, having been erected in 1721 by Commotore Porter. Until statem cears ago it was occupied by Admirat Porter as a residence. was occupied by Admiral Porter as a residence. It is unpretentions in appearance now, but when it was the home of the Porter family the building was surrounded by a hand-same grove of tall trees, which shaded the walks at all hours. The trees still remain, but the ground is a barren waste of land. The building was constructed of stone, and stood on a laza overlooking the Delaware river. It was about forty feet long and twenty feet wide, with a peaked roof and attic. That part of it not used by the factory was occupied as a dwelling by one white and several colored families. There was a two-story was oc-cupied as a dwelling by one white and several colored families. There was a two-story frame extension in the rear, and this was used as a part of the factory. Only four persons had been employed in the factory up to the moun-ing of the explosion. These were the superin-tendent, Chieles Van Horn; a son of Pro-fessor. Lackson, and two yours worse. fessor Jackson, and two young women. But the demand for railroad torpedoes, which received a sudden stimulus from the Spuyten Dayvil disaster, had become so great that two or three more young women were engaged, and a room was fitted up for them in the second story of the main tuilding. A fire was lighted in the stove on the norning of the explosion, and Superintendent Van Horn says that 7:20 delock he went to look at the stove, found the fire was somewhat low and want down stairs for some wood and coal to rekindle it. As he went down he heard an explosion in the room he had just left, which biew off part of the roof and set the building on fire. It was caused he thought by a puff of coal gas from the story which set for the new least and the story which set for the set of t the stove which so fire to some loose powder scattered on the floor, and this in turn exploi-ed some red fire and rockets which were stored in the room.

An alarm of fire was given, and the three volunteer companies — Moyamensing Hose, Franklin Hose and Handly Hock and Ladder —which comprise the fire department of the city responded at once, though their members were tired by their heavy work at the burning of the Military academy on the previous night, It was stated by the superintendent and believed by the fremen that there was little or no powder in the building, and only a small shed,

Nominations for United States consuls were made by the President as follows: Bruno on the roof of the frame extension to get a good position from which to direct their hose streams, while a great crowd of spectators pressed close about the firemen. While this work was going on there was another explosion, and this, though slight and unimportant, caused the crowd to withdraw unimportant, caused the crowd to withdraw in ther from the building, thus no doubt preventing a more serious loss of life than actually occurred a few minutes later.

The work of fighting the flames had been going on for about half an hour, and the building was surrounded by a throng of firemen and others, when suddenly a quantity of some terribly explosive substance was reached by the fire, and an entire wing of the stone building was thrown into the air, frauments of stone, timber and human bodies being hurled long distances and scattered over a wide area. Men 150 varies away, who thought they were watch-150 yards away, who thought they were watching the fire from an entirely safe distance, were struck and killed. Others were dashed against trees and houses with fatal violence. Others again were torn limb from limb, and one map, a colored laborer named Perry Williams, siter of the National ball and an assistant reman, who was standing on the roof of the ing in which the explosion took place, was nown to the top of the main building, where is lodged among the burning rafters, and lay dricking and howling, roasting to death, for call an hoar. He was rescued by a brave car-senter named John W. Cramer, who volun-cered to bring him down. He was alive when cached, but died a few minutes later. Anthony Burbour and John Vanderitt, fremen, were arbour and John Vandegrift, firemen, wer canding on a ladder throwing water on the cos of the main building. Carbour was struck by a heavy stone and hurled 150 feet away, here he fell dead and horrobly mangled, and griff was blown off the ladder, but was oly singhtly hurt. Two other firemen were tanding on the roof of the frame building when the explosion came, and their dead bodies were picked up nearly 250 yards away. These, owever, were almost the only men who were unstantly killed among those close to the build-

Dices, a boy, who was found lying on the side-walk with his head crushed by a stone.

The explesion was followed by a scene of interse excitement. It shook buildings and brake windows all over the city, and called almost the window population of Chester to the Porter mansion, where they mound and shoed with anguish as they recognized triends and loved ones among the sufferers, or ran wibily about looking for those whom they supposed to be among the victims. Women threw up their arms and shricked or fainted away. Some kneeled on the middly ground and prayed, while others showed the intensity of their grief only by a convulsive rocking of the body to and fro and a fixed, but vacant, staring at the flames, which now had undisputed possession of the wreck. The firmen dropped their bose and devoted thems lives to the work of gathering up the dead and resculing the wound.d. They pad no more artention to danger than before, though two or three other slight explosions warned them that tention to danger than before, though two or three other elight explosions warned them that there was still a possibility of it. The bodies of the dead were gathered together before being taken off the ground, and at one time a ghastiy heap of half a dozen corpses was piled up in the street. The fragments of bodies which were scattered around were also gathered up and all the dead were carried to the city half to be identified, after which they were taken to their loones. The wounded were carried into the nearest houses, where they were attended by physicians, all the doctors in Chester and its vicinity having volunteered their services. After seeing that all the dead and wounded who could be reached were eared for, the firemen suld be reached were cared for, the firemen irried their attention again to the flames, and receded in putting out the fire about 10 meal to fortunate bipeds. The crab being covered with a hard, impenetrable shell, it is not easy to molest or make him afraid; therefore he wages war in his watery world unceasingly when one a tracked. Although tiny, he cannot be said to be devoid of understanding, having ten lers to resist his locomotion; this, havever, avails him little, for, when conquered, he never turns his back to his enemy, starting into a bold run, but, like many politicians during election time, slips off sideways. There comes a time in the his of this pugnacions fellow when the years bring him more bone and muscle than he can dispose of with comfort, and he finds himself in a very tight place; his shoes pinch him and he begins to realize the practicability of applying to Dame Nature for more room or a house in proportion to his increasing size. Nature slowly responds to the call; but in her own good time provides a new home, so that the enterprishing little creature does not wander about homeless, but is provided for suitably, as was the old sallor, who dropped his rheumatism and crabledness when he applied the Great German Remedy, St. Jacons Ott. This last, however, may sound rather fishy to the skeptical reader, and to such we would really in language too plain to be misunderstood—in words illustrating facts that even the waves of time cannot wash away or scaly epithets affect. St. Jacoss Ott. Oday has rendered the lives and homes of myriads of suffecers brighter than ever the electric light can, which people pauce to admire along the way. Still more happily served than the old sailor was an invalid, who wrote thus concerning his case:

"CROOKED HAERTEL." meal to fortunate bipeds. The crab being covered with a hard, im-

"CROOKED HAERTEL." Accept a thousand thanks for that "golden remedy." I suffered for many years with rheumatic pain in my limbs. My legs were drawn together, and people called fre "Crooked Haertel." I used Sr. Jacons On and was cured, and now feel so well that I think I could dance, as in my young days. John Harntel, Fremont, Id.
