Gutten's Skeleton.
Washington, Aug. 31.—Gutten's skeleton is now at the National Army Medical Museum, in this city, but will not be exhibited to the public.

Heber Donaldson, of Emlenton, who was tried a year ago by his church session for dancing and cut off from communion, was tried again last week, his case having been remanded to the church by the General Assembly, and the session has decided that dancing in a quadrille is a sin for which a Presbyterial man should be excommunicated.

A Lack of Babies Among Presbyterians.
In a membership of nearly 600,000 the last annual report shows that 19,000 babies have been presented for baptism.

An incident in the reckless career of the Marquis of Hastings is related by a traveler who chanced to be staying in the chief hotel at Sheffield, one evening, when he and a few companions resolved on what they termed a "lark." Their frolic took the turn of demolishing all the mirrors, chandeliers, pictures, and furniture of two large drawing rooms.

Two devices for overcoming perils of the deep, a steamship brake and a drag, have just been tested in Boston harbor. The brake consists of two large steel plates or fins, which are fastened to the stern of a steamship and worked by chains running to the pilot house.

In making stained glass windows, the coloring matter—red, green, flesh color, or whatever it may be—is first stirred with the glass in its molten state. When it is rolled into sheets and cools it comes out the brilliant hue desired.

Another method of curing disease without the taking of numerous medicines is Prof. Guilmette's Kidney Pad, which is guaranteed to cure all cases of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs.

Taking Their Stand.
An eminent Republican of this State writes to the Editor of The Press: "I desire to say that I have read The Press carefully this summer and I think you are entitled to the thanks of every true Republican for the earnest efforts you made to reconcile the difficulty between the two factions of the party.

The honored Republican who writes this letter has recently announced his support of Mr. Stewart and the Independent Republican ticket. Others who were equally anxious with him for a settlement of Republican differences will fall no less bound, if the fight goes on, to sustain General Beaver and his associates.

If, however, the contest is to go on, they will feel like the writer of the above letter, that they must take their stand. This will divide them. As an Independent Republican, he is impelled to join the Independent Republicans who go the length of an Independent ticket.

One starts with a favorable impression of the capital of the Pine Tree State when he first strikes the Kennebec River, upon which it is situated, for he rides through thirty-three miles of charming scenery in coming here by the Maine Central Railway.

There is no counting the tons of ice taken off the river every year," said a typical Maine Yankee, who sat by his side while enjoying the ride. His nose was sharp enough for an ice pick and his face as cold as an iron wedge.

The Country's Yield of Wheat.
AN ESTIMATE OF THE NUMBER OF BUSHELS PRODUCED BY EACH STATE.
New York, Sept. 1.—Bradstreet's to-morrow will publish a comprehensive report of the yield of wheat by States based on replies from 2,000 correspondents.

BLAINE'S HOME LIFE.
THE PLAIN HOUSE WHICH SHELTERS THE PLUMED KNIGHT.
Augusta, Aug. 26.—A neat frame house, large enough to live a good-sized family and always have space left for a few friends, stands in the centre of an acre or so of ground at the farther end of the chief street of this quiet town.

The flag stones that lead to the main entrance of the house are not barred from the sidewalk by a gate, and the latch-string that swings from the door knob, like the open entrance, seems to beckon all who come within reach of its charms to the master's presence.

Just across the street the little granite State House where he began public life, sits upon a high terrace, and almost before the place I have described, the public park, that the State owns, stretches off toward the river. The State Capitol ground on one side and this park with its depth shade on the other, set the quiet home of James G. Blaine in an attractive and appropriate frame.

Other interesting reminiscences of his early life followed, and then his talk drifted into other channels. Not long after this I passed down by the little printing office from which the paper is still issued, upon which he worked when chosen to the Legislature and began reaching out toward the great place he now fills in the public eye.

From the railroad station down near the river to the place on the hill, a description of which begins this letter, is something more than a mile. I found my way to the pleasant spot this evening, and was cordially received by its proprietor. There is nothing showy inside of the house more than on the outside.

Mr. Blaine had just come in from a drive when I called. He spends a good part of each afternoon "on the road" behind a span of fine horses I never saw him look in better health, certainly he never seemed in better spirits.

Confessing his Crime.
THE CASHIER OF THE KEWANEE BANK ADMITS HIS GUILT AND RETURNS SOME OF THE MONEY.
Chicago, Aug. 30.—J. S. Scott, the St. Louis dentist, arrested for complicity in the Kewanee Bank robbery, was brought to Chicago to-day, and will be taken to Kewanee to-morrow.

No man in this country has ever before stepped from the highest place in active politics into the walk of private life without losing his temper on the way. Mr. Blaine evidently has. There isn't a sign of regret or remorse in his speech or actions.

While talking with him to-night, almost in the shadow of the State House, where he began life in Augusta as a newspaper reporter, I couldn't help but wonder if any people ever stopped to think how he started life, and what a great structure he had built for himself through the State with him once when he talked freely of his early life in Augusta.

"Yes," said he cheerfully, when I suggested his prime condition; "I am in excellent health, the climate of Maine always agrees with me. I can recuperate here faster than any where else in the world."
