-Frank Wilcox and wife have returned home after a three weeks' absence from town.

-Miss Libbie Stewart, of Canada, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Nichols of this Borough.

-R. Brennan, of Wilcox, has been quite sick for nearly two weeks. We understand that he is slowly recovering.

-In mentioning the death of the infant of O. G. Kelts, we made an error in the age. It was nearly four weeks old.

-Mrs. Frank Bowker, of St. Marys, came to Ridgway on Saturday last. She will go down in the woods for a few weeks for her mother who is going away on a visit.

-Miss Addie Bardwell has returned from a visit to friends in western Pennsylvania, and New York State. Miss Grace Bardwell, a cousin, of Penn Yan, N. Y., returns with her.

-Birth. MORRISON—On Monday, Sept. 25, 1882, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morrison, of Ridgway township, a daughter.

-A Snake Story. A few days ago while Mr. George Stewart and his mother were picking berries in the upper Horse valley, near Concord, Franklin county, Mrs. Stewart was attacked by a large rattlesnake.

She called to her son, who soon came to her assistance and shot the reptile with a revolver. No sooner was it killed than another and still another came. Mr. Stewart continued to shoot them until fifty-nine had been slaughtered, fifty-five of which were rattlesnakes and four copperheads.

Mr. Stewart, fearing that his story would not be believed, took a neighbor to the scene of the conflict, who bears testimony to the truth of the story. The smallest of the rattlesnakes had twelve rattles, which shows it to be fifteen years old.

-Just arrived at Craig's Drug and Book Store new stock of seaside Libraries, Books, stationery, Pocket Books, Ladies' Bags.

-Last Sunday night the lightning struck the fence surrounding the yard of Mr. W. F. Stewart's residence, and the electricity passing through the barbed wire on the top, the whole structure, 150 feet long, was demolished or nearly so, pickets being knocked off at about 125 feet from where the lightning first struck a post of the fence. The electricity passed across the alley leaving a very plain trace of its course on the hard ground, and thence passed through a heap of rubbish and past a shade tree, the bark of the tree being broken in several places.

Splinters from the fence were scattered in all directions, and the dirt and rubbish showed plainly the commotion that had taken place. It was a very unexpected and heavy stroke of lightning, and those living in the vicinity were extremely glad that it spent its force upon an object carrying with it so little danger to human life. -Brookville Republican.

It is mirth, pure and unalloyed, without even a hint of coarseness. The play is one of those popular pieces abounding in strong situations. The spirit of fun is contagious and irresistible.

-Governor Cornell may thank his stars that the women of the Empire State have no voice in settling the question of his renomination. He would have a stormy time of it if he had. The women suffragists have declared war on him. Their side of the case is that the Governor, before his election, pledged them that, in the event of his success, he would be glad to sign any bill for the benefit of women, and that he turned around and violated his pledge by vetoing the two fairest and most liberal measures enacted by the last Legislature. The first of these bills was one authorizing the appointment of matrons for the police stations in New York and Brooklyn, while the second was that which made women eligible to the office of trustee for such charitable institutions as have charge of females—acts which, while they contemplated a radical innovation upon established usage, involved a humane element that, in the event of his success before the convention, the Home Rulers will oppose his reelection with all the fury of women scorned. -Philadelphia Press.

MR. STEWARTS VIEWS.

What He Thinks May Happen After the Election. THE CONDITION OF THE CAMPAIGN—MEN WHO WILL TAKE THE STUMP—AN ESTIMATE OF THE VOTE AND THE PROBABLE RESULT.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post, writing from Chambersburg, says: Riding over the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad, a few days ago, the towers and elms of Princeton college, distinctly visible three miles to the west of the Junction, set me thinking of the important part which that institution has played in the political history of the country.

From the day of John Witherspoon to the more degenerate era of Don Cameron. Going over the list of its illustrious graduates, I was forced to conclude that among the "scholars in politics" there was about the usual proportion of the evil and the good.

If Princeton is proud to claim James Madison as her son, she is also forced to admit the maternity of Aaron Burr. Coming down to a later day, the respectable political record of Princeton's sons, Robeson and Belknap, is offset by the more creditable reputation of Attorney-General Brewster and Hiester Clymer. The same institution is also responsible for the baneful Republican politics in Pennsylvania, Don Cameron, and yet, like Mother Nature, for every poison providing an antidote, she has upon her rolls among the honor men of his class the name of John Stewart.

Independent candidate for Governor and the foe of the house of Cameron. At the gateway in the Philadelphia depot, waiting for the Saturday night train to his home in the Cumberland valley, I met the leader of the Independents, and during the journey had the benefit of his views on the anti-Cameron movement, reinforced with conversation with other prominent politicians who were on the train.

Last evening, in the quiet of his own parlor, I had from him a more thorough review of the situation, dispassionately given, and I believe that he rather under-stated than exaggerated the extent and probable force of the movement. I was curious to know whether Cameron and Stewart had been college mates, and in answer to the question the latter said: "No; in college parlance, Cameron was 'bounced' from the institution several years before I entered it."

Leaving personalities, the conversation drifted into an outline of the plans, prospects, probable results, and future course of the Independent movement. After a careful review of the State, which showed the Independent leader to be a thorough master of the politics of his State, Mr. Stewart said, with characteristic deliberateness and caution: "Of course no one can foresee the results of the desperate struggle which the Machine will wage in the coming weeks; but I firmly believe that if the election should be held next week the vote for the Independent ticket would be not less than 150,000. The November election may show a much greater number, but that is a safe estimate of our present strength."

PROMINENT SPEAKERS. I find that opinion among many Independents favors a higher figure, 200,000 being the number most frequently mentioned. Those are not wanting who believe in an Independent victory. The total vote of the State in 1881 was about 600,000—265,000 for the regular Republican candidate, 258,000 for the Democrat, 60,000 for Wolfe, and 20,000 for the Greenback and Prohibition tickets.

In the Presidential election of 1880, the total vote was about 875,000, and Garfield's majority was 14,025. The total vote this year will probably be large, say 750,000. How the 550,000 votes which are not Independent will be divided depends a great deal upon the purchasing power of the clan Cameron and the cupidity of the Democrats. Hancock's vote when the total was 875,000, was 407,000. These figures show how extremely doubtful is the result of the campaign.

The plans for the campaign by the Independents are a thorough organization of clubs, many speeches by prominent Pennsylvanians and by men of local influence in their districts. On this point Mr. Stewart remarked: "We consider this a State fight, and we would have preferred to fight it out with none talent. But the Machine has decided to import Eugene Hale, Logan, and men of that stamp, and we will counteract their influence with the superior talent of George William Curtis, Ben Harrison, and others. I may say that Lear and Tom Marshall, late of the Stalwart camp, will also give us active support."

THREE POSSIBLE RESULTS. "There are three possible results," I said, "and if you will, we will begin with the one you seem to think least probable. If your own ticket succeeds, what then?" "In that case the principles of the Independent party will be carried out to the letter. The movement is centered on civil service reform, and civil service reform will be instituted in State matters. There will be no use of the patronage to strengthen our position. How far competitive examinations should be used in the appointment to offices I cannot say. That is a matter for experiment, but it is certainly an experiment worth trying. Of this much you can be certain, I am opposed to the spoils system in all its aspects."

"And if Patton is elected?" "The Democratic victory will be a warning to Cameron that if the State of Pennsylvania is to remain in the Blanching the Celery.

We last month described the manner of bringing the leaves of the celery into an upright position, or "handling," as the gardeners term it. The stalks are still green, and not fit for use until they have been whitened or "blanched." This is done by the complete exclusion of light which is usually effected by a banking up of earth. Any other method that will completely shut out the light will answer.

The banking up is done with a spade, one person on each side, taking the soil from between the rows and forming a steep bank against the plant, covering all except a few inches of the longest leaves; this bank is 10 or 12 inches wide at the bottom, and should be compact and smooth. In three or four weeks after banking the celery may be used. Only that which is needed early requires to be banked; the stock for winter use is blanched in trenches, or in boxes, and needs only the handling to bring the plant into the proper shape.

A trench is dug in a dry place, 10 inches wide, and deep enough to contain the whole plant, so that the top will be level with the surface. The celery is then placed in the trench, packing it as closely as possible, in an erect position. When cold weather comes the celery, which is not injured by a moderate frost, must be covered with straw or leaves, the thickness of which must be increased as the weather becomes colder. For family use, celery is often stored in boxes in the cellar, but the cellar must be cool. Boxes are made nine or ten inches wide, of any convenient length, and of a height a little less than that of the plants; the bottom is covered with an inch or two of sand or soil, and the celery placed in it as in the trenches. The taking up and storing of the main crop, in the latitude of New York, is left until the middle of next month, but in more northern localities it should be done earlier.—American Agriculturist for October.

The American Agriculturist for October is an unusually attractive and valuable number of this old reliable and famous journal. We notice important changes in the new and handsome cover, fine paper, and superior finish of the many engravings. It is a double number, containing a large Premium List filled with many desirable articles for those who make up clubs.

Among the leading contributors: P. H. Jacobs, on Poultry-keeping, fully illustrated; J. N. Muncey, on feeding hogs; Dr. Geo. Thurber, on Gladiolus, Skull-caps, Hemp, and other Plants; Prof. Buckhout, on Household Devices; X. A. Willard, on Cold Storage of Butter; Prof. W. H. Jordan, on Ground Livestock; Col. M. C. Weld, on Ensilaging Corn Fodder; Mr. Orange Judd, on Crops and Prices, etc.; and D. D. Bishop, on Curing Corn Fodder. Gueno's Wonderful Discovery; Farming in Egypt; Fall Plowing; Humbugs Exposed, are all important. Of the eight illustrative engravings are two large ones of "October," "Farewell to the Woods," "Camp Fire," and "Summer Home; Prize House-Plains; Red Polled Cattle, and a long list of labor-saving devices for the farm, garden, and household, such as: Field Roller, Lading Corn, Mending Fools, Pig Rack, Fence Posts, Door Latch, Hoe, Potato Bin, Cold Chair, Filter, Shoe Box, etc., etc. The Children's Column are full of instructive reading.—The Doctor Talks on Various Kinds of Nuts, Galls, etc. Orange Judd Co., Publishers, New York, $1.50 per annum; single number, 15 cents.

A Good Ohio Idea. [Cincinnati Commercial.] General Beaver protests that he is not controlled by bassism in Pennsylvania. Why then does he not read a declaration of independence of Cameron and thus clear away the only real objection to his candidacy urged by the Independents? He is in danger of defeat simply because it is universally believed that he owes his nomination to Cameron and will be his creature if elected. As self-preservation is the highest law of nature, let Beaver come out squarely against Cameronism and his chances will be improved a hundred per cent.

-Are you low spirited, "down in the-mouth," and weak in the back. Does walking, lifting or standing cause pain in the small of the back, if so, you have kidney disease, and Prof. Gullonne's French Kidney Pad will cure you.

Mason's Fruit Jars, Pints, Quarts, and half gallons at W. S. Service's, agent.

Republican ranks in 1884, he must turn from the error of his ways and yield to the demands of the respectable element of his party, which has shown such strength. Democratic victory will be a rebuke to Cameron, and one that he should heed. Without Pennsylvania as a probable Republican State in 1884, his power in national convention, in the national councils, and in view of a probable Democratic President in that event—in the national administration, will be stripped from him. Without these he is nothing. If his wings of patronage are clipped, his fall will be sudden and final. Surely sinner will never have had greater inducements for regeneration."

"And if Beaver succeeds?" "That can only be done by the aid of Democratic votes. But, however the end is gained it will be a virtual triumph for Cameron; his power will be strengthened and the shackles will be more firmly riveted on political serfs. He will control the Republican delegation from Pennsylvania to the national convention of 1884, and it will probably be instructed to vote as a unit for Beaver. This will be the old Cameron trick to enable him to throw the vote for whom he wills at the later stages of the convention."

"What then will become of the Independent movement?" "The time will then be ripe for a third party in the State. Respectable Democrats will be disgusted at the way in which Democratic votes have been used to elect the Cameron figurehead; respectable Republicans will be disgusted at the success of a man who will have made even Republicanism not respectable. A union of respectability will be a possibility, and third party a probability. The Independent movement cannot be suppressed by defeat."

Heroes of the Plains. In American history there are no more interesting figures than the heroes of the border. Bold, dashing, adventurous and patriotic; loyal to friends, to country and to the interests of society, their work was singularly effective in the advancement of western civilization. With seeming recklessness, their efforts were in the interest of law and order, and the people owe them a debt of gratitude they do not forget. Their pages in history is as fascinating as it is honorable, and there is a peculiar pleasure in reading the narrative of their wonderful exploits. Among those, whose careers were singularly adventurous, are Kit Carson, Wild Bill, Buffalo Bill, Capt. Payne, Texas Jack, California Joe, Capt. Jack and others, whose achievements have made them justly and widely famous. They have a warm place in the hearts of the people, and a prominent one in their admiration. It is appropriate that their achievements should be recorded, and we note with pleasure the forthcoming of a new book from the pen of N. D. Thompson & Co., New York and St. Louis, called "THE HEROES OF THE PLAINS," covering the ground of border history. It is profusely illustrated with a 100 engraving and 16 colored lithograph plates. It is sold by subscription through agents, and presents an opportunity to agents to make money especially inviting. We advertise it in another column.
