To take a town by assault is the worst danger a soldier can have to face. The theory therefore had a show of reason, that without the reward of unlimited license he could never be brought to the breach. Tilly is reported to have replied, when he was entreated by some of his officers to check the rapine and bloodshed that has immortalized the sack of Madgeburg in 1631; "Three hours' plundering is the shortest rule of war. The soldier must have something for his toil and trouble," The scene never varies from age to age; and the storm- day at Newburg, N. Y., aged eighty-three ing of Badajoz and San Sebastian by the English forces in the Peninsular war, or of Constantine in Algiers by the French in 1837, teaches us what we may expect to see in Europe when next a town is taken by assault, as Strasburg might have been in 1870. 'No age, no nation," says Sir W. Napier, "ever sent forth brayer troops to battle than those who stormed Badajoz (April, 1812)." Curious Spanish Ceremonies. A Madrid correspondent writes

Last Sunday an imposing ceremony was witnessed at the cathedral. Twelve poor, blind women and as many ragged men sat on a long bench before the altar. The king and queen of Spain, clad in garments neither as fine nor as becoming as the clothes worn by the mendicants, stooped before them and then washed and dried their feet, the queen bathing the feet of the women and the king those of the men; thus the royal family showed its humility and good faith. The royal hands did not touch the feet of the beggars, but simply sprinkled water over them and afterward dried them with coarse towels. Afterward the subjects of the ceremony were fed from two long tables prepared in imitation of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper," the queen, who was now assisted by her court ladies, dispensed the food to the women, and the king, with his ministers, attended the men. It was curious to study the faces of the mendicants thus honored by the ceremony. I did not see the menu. but I counted thirty-two courses, and I was told that the spread was better than the king usually had. After the dinner ceremony was over the entire military force of the capital was deployed along both sides of all the principal streets to receive the royal party, sion in Ashaway, R. I., with Professor A. R. who left the palace at 4 o'clock and marched on foot, the king and queen with the rest, to seven different churches, scattered about the city, and, having attended a short service in each of them, marched back to the palace again. They kept in the middle of the streets and walked with heads uncovered in the broiling sun through the whole four miles like soldiers; the queen and the ladies trailing in the dust no less than five yards of silk and gold-embroidered trains to show their extreme humility on this day.

Hydrophobia-The Possibility of Recovery.

The death recently of Mr. George A. Reeves, speaker of the Texas house of representatives, will tend to confirm the almost universal impression that recovery from hydrophobia is im possible. Here was a patient whose position and circumstances enabled him to command all the available resources of medical science in the treatment of the awful disease to which | On the fourth ballot Grover Cleveland, mayor he was a victim; and yet his life could not be saved.

The popular notion that there is no known remedy for rabies is correct, man Roswell P. Flower; necessary to a choice, Most of the new drugs which have been tested of late years prove more delegations from New York city going over to injurious than beneficial to the patient. They produce paroxysms, and thus hasten death.

But the idea that nobody ever recovers from hydrophobia does not seem equally well founded. On the contrary, a few cases of well authenticated spontaneous recovery are on record. For the last eight years a committee of the Paris Academy of Medicine has been engaged in prosecuting careful researches concerning rabies in animals and man, and the president of this committee, M. Decroix, in a recent report, declares that he has obtained satisfactory evidence of recovery in nine cases, three of which were those of human beings.

In commenting upon the experiments made by the French rables committee, the Lancet says that since the administration of medicines, usually provokes convulsive seizures, it seems desirable, according to our present knowledge, to leave persons affected with hydrophobia in the most perfect possible calm." Absolute quiet and obscurity are pronounced indispensable conditions of wise treatment by M. Decroix, and that investigator makes the astounding statement that, under such conditions, he would rather suffer from hydrophobia than from many other diseases. It is something to have learned that every case of hydrophobia is not necessarily fatal; that recovery may occur, though cure as yet appears to be impossible.
