(COMMUNICATIONS.)

Whoever has travelled a day's journey into the country, will find in almost "every rod of ground," a pointed counterpart of the repeated murmurings which issue from the Chronicle, and other papers. In every part we see, increased agriculture, extended towns and villages, improving manufactures, and, in short, every mark of a more rapid prosperity than the prior annals of our country can produce. With this stubborn evidence before their eyes, it will be hard to induce in our country brethren, the belief that their rulers have by their perfidy ruined and "impoverished their country."

It has frequently been intimated in the Jacobin papers, that the Spanish Court had refused conveying American vessels. To demonstrate that they only pursued their stale device of falshood, a correspondent mentions it, to the honor of that nation, that the Brig Patty, Capt. White, which arrived in this port on Saturday last, sailed from Cadiz, under a Spanish convoy; and being a dull sailer, the Admiral was generous enough to tow her into the fleet four times.

PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 24.

A Pilot arrived here this morning, informs, that last Sunday morning he saw the Concorde, he Lacaffas another Sloop of war and a Tender, together with 24 or 25 sail of merchantmen laying in the road. He also says, that he saw about 5 or 6 sail attern of him yesterday morning coming up the Bay—he saw the Fame at the Fort &c.

By this Day's Mail.

NEW-YORK, June 23.

Last Thursday a violent gust of wind did much injury at Poughkeepsie, James Wyant's barn was blown down, part of the roof of his house and of Dr. Chamberlains, Peter Myers, John Records, Samuel Smith's and Henry Mott's were blown down—John Tappin's house was unroofed—Junius Tappin's house blown down—Cummin's house blown down to the lower story—John Davis' barn—John Le Roy's, Thomas Carrs and Hagermans barn blown down and many others.—We hear the gust proceeded eastward, and had terrible effects in sweeping away buildings, orchards, &c.

KINGSTON, (Esopus) June 19.

Yesterday arrived in town, the Hon. Peter Van Gaafbeck, Esq. On the same day the following address was presented him by Jacob W. Tremper, Jonathan Habrotuck, Evert Bogardus, Egbert Dumond, Johannis Hardenbergh, and Conrad Edmund Elmendorf, being a committee appointed by a meeting for that purpose.

To the hon. Peter Van Gaafbeck, Esq. Sir,

A respectable number of our fellow-citizens, being publicly met at the house of Evert Bogardus, avail themselves of this mode of congratulating you on your return to your family and friends, from the delicate and arduous duties committed to you as one of the Representatives in Congress.

We deem it a tribute justly due to your manly and patriotic conduct, to tender you our cordial and unfeigned approbation for your Republican firmness during the last session of Congress. We consider it the most important since the formation of our government, for on its determinations greatly rested the fate of our empire, either to enjoy peace with its concomitant blessings, or to experience war with its destructive train of desolation.—And above all Sir, your moderation (which has ever been conspicuous) exercised with so much candor and firmness, does not fail at present of calling forth our most sincere thanks; for moderation is a Republican virtue, and we sincerely hope may continue forever hereafter to pervade our public councils.

And we have the best reasons to believe, that the measures, adopted by our general government, will place our common country in such a respectable state of defence, that if ultimately war must be our alternative, we will be prepared to meet it with firmness and unanimity.

Accept Sir, our best wishes for your health and happiness, Signed by order and in behalf of the meeting,

JONATHAN HASBROUCK,
Chairman:

Kingston, June 18th, 1794.

To which he made the following reply, presented in person to the meeting, and delivered to the Chairman:

To Jonathan Hasbrouck, Esq. Sir,

The address with which I am honored by my fellow citizens, originating in a meeting of which you are Chairman, while at the same time it affords me a secret satisfaction, does not fail of aiding conviction in my mind, that peace is a blessing, which will be of eminent importance to the general interest of common country.

If, in my public conduct, I have merited your approbation, be assured, that I shall never fail, in whatever situation I may be placed, of adopting and pursuing such measures, to the extent of my abilities, as may tend to the advancement of our empire, and will consider it a happiness to be among the first opposers to its enemies in any shape.

Although the situation of our commonwealth in relation to the belligerent powers of Europe, has not without good cause been alarming, for some time past, yet I have the best grounds to hope, that under the auspices of Providence, we will yet save our infant Republic from the destructive ravages of war.

Accept, Sir, my wishes for your individual happiness.

PETER VAN GAASBECK.
June 18, 1794.

EXTRACT.

In every nation there exists a set of men, who at all times delight in war. Incapable of fulfilling the laborious duties of civil life, their turbulent spirits pant for the active scenes of a military one. Their restless tempers, disdain the drowsy coils of a counting-house or work-shop, seek with impetuous ardor the glorious exploits of the camp: they burn with impatience to exchange the pen for the sword, or the hammer for the truncheon, and to obtain by a coup de main that glory and wealth which the ignoble drudgery of many a tiresome year would not have yielded. If destitute of property, while they apprehend not the losses of war, prize-money, plunder, and other emoluments are lures irresistible: if destitute of reputation, while the tranquil times of peace afford leisure to contemplate the villain's conduct, the hally scenes of war snatch him from the view and hide him in the confusion of martial bustle, and a lucky exploit in a military station, may throw a tinsel lustre over a character tarnished by a dishonorable act in a civil one. If trammelled with debt, the confusions incident to war may free him from his embarrassments by a temporary suspension of payment, or by a fortunate intervention of depreciated paper money.

These worthy characters, prompted by so natural an antipathy to a state of peace and such passionate fondness for war, will ardently grasp at every circumstance which can promote their ends: any irritation of the public mind, any just resentments for unprovoked injuries, are fine materials for them to work upon; the peaceable citizens are roused by the clamor of revenge, their passive dispositions are stimulated by appeals to their national pride, and any kind of negociation is reprobed as a dereliction of our character, and an abandonment of our interests. These appeals are reiterated in public and in private, in speeches and in print, by the individuals and aggregately in their clubs. Not content with the existing causes of irritation, the ferment is increased by an indutrious circulation of false rumours and exaggerated injuries: denunciations are hurled upon all who recommend peace, till negociation has failed or the country is better prepared for war, and no endeavors are neglected to destroy those who thwart their views.
