This Lottery will afford an elegant specimen of the private buildings to be erected in the City of Washington—Two beautiful designs are already selected for the entire fronts on two of the public squares: From these drawings, it is proposed to erect two centre and four corner buildings, as soon as possible after this Lottery is sold, and to convey them when complete, to the fortunate adventurers, in the manner described in the scheme for the Hotel Lottery. A net deduction of five per cent. will be made to defray the necessary expenses of printing, &c. and the surplus will be made a part of the fund intended for the National University, to be created within the City of Washington.

The drawing will commence as soon as the Tickets are sold, or at all events on Monday, the 22nd of December next: The money prizes will be payable in thirty days after it is finished, and any prizes for which fortunate numbers are not produced within twelve months after the drawing is closed are to be considered as given towards the fund for the University, it being determined to settle the whole business in a year from the ending of the drawing and to take up the bonds given as security.

The real securities given for the payment of the Prizes, are held by the President and two Directors of the Bank of Columbia, and are valued at more than half the amount of the Lottery. The drawing will be under the management of 24 gentlemen approved by the commissioners for the City of Washington, for the time being, and acting on oath.

S. BLODGET.

* Tickets may be had at the Bank of Columbia; of James West & Co. Baltimore; of Gideon Denison, Savannah; of Peter Gilman, Boston; of John Hopkins, Richmond; and of Richard Wells, Cooper's Alley.

CHINESE EMBASSY.

The following account by an officer in the East India company's service, we insert as a supplement to that we have already given.

Lord Macartney, with his fleet, in number the Lion, 64, the Hindostan, and three smaller vessels, arrived at the mouth of the river leading up to Peking, in July last, where the ships anchored, tho' a very great distance from the land; the small vessels could almost get to the mouth of the river, where he found in waiting to receive him many boats, and two Mandarin of great rank with the shore lined on all sides with thousands of people; he was attended by Sir G. Staunton and all his retinue.

On his arrival at Peking, the Emperor ordered a large house, with every kind of accommodation, provisions, &c. to be procured him; his retinue, and ships, at the expence of government. The ships were ordered to a port called Tez Chew, about four days sail to the Southward, where Lord Macartney left them to wait further orders, where every accommodation, and in fact every thing they wanted for, was allowed them gratis. The ships were permitted to go to any harbour or river on the coast without molestation. As an instance how delicate and extended was their protection, a Mandarin of some rank had insulted one of the midshipmen of the Lion; a complaint was lodged, and the offender was degraded by the ornament of his button and cap being taken from him, and he was bamboozled or flogged severely. Several instances of this kind has happened, and the greatest attention was paid to any complaints against the Chinese.

Lord Macartney and his suite left Peking the beginning of September, for Gehoi, the country residence of the Emperor, about 150 miles distant; and on the 14th, he was introduced. The ceremony held on this occasion was exactly similar to that observed on the Dutch embassy, in 1616. On the 20th they set out on their return for Peking, where they arrived on the 26th, and on the 30th left that city on their return to Canton, attended by a large guard, and supplied with carriages, &c. in abundance. The Emperor took much notice of Sir G. Staunton's son, who spoke a little Chinese to him; he appeared sensible and inquisitive; he was 25 years of age on the 21st of September, but had every appearance of health and vigour; he was dressed in yellow, with a profusion of embroidery.

On Lord Macartney's quitting Peking the Emperor ordered three Mandarin of the first rank to attend him, and to see that nothing which might tend to his accommodation should be wanting; and what is very amusing,
