

the brig Fame, of Cork, bound to this port, which she had captured about two hours before: both vessels were chased on shore, and the brig being immovable was burnt, but the La Syrene was got off, and brought into port. She had lately come out of Aux-Cayes mounted 16 guns and had 120 men.

In contradiction to the reports which have been lately circulated respecting the hazardous situation of our posts at St. Marc's we can affirm on unquestionable authority, that they are founded in fallhood; no part of St. Domingo being more secure, or the inhabitants of all descriptions better satisfied with the British government.

A letter from Port-au-Prince of July 29 intimates, that Brigadier General Warte was at that time so ill, that no person on business was permitted to see him. Col. Lyfaught, 22d regiment is dead. Died at St. Jago de la Vega Mr. Caniff.

From the American Daily Advertiser of this morning.

The ship Hercules of New York from Halifax, was spoke on Tuesday last, by one of the Delaware Pilots about five leagues to the northward of Cape May. The Hercules was one of the Commodore's convoy, and captured by the British squadron. The Captain delivered the newspaper, from which we have made the following extracts, to our informant, and told him that all the captured vessels having two or three were released.

HALIFAX, Sept. 20.

On Sunday last arrived at Liverpool, the brig George and Tracey, from Bermuda, after having been captured in lat. 37, by a privateer from Norfolk in Virginia, commanded by a Captain Paris. This privateer had also taken a schooner from New Providence, bound to this place—a brig from Jamaica bound to Dublin—a schooner from Antigua, bound to the Island of St. John; and an American brig commanded by one Smith from London to Baltimore. Smith entered himself a volunteer on board the privateer, and was stationed at one of the guns.—The privateer being incommoded with so large a number of prisoners, gave them the brig George and Tracey, in which they proceeded to Liverpool, and the privateer steered to the southward.

Wednesday arrived the schooner Queen Captain Pryor, in twenty days from St. Vincent's. Captain Pryor informs, that our troops still remain on the defensive at Guadaloupe.—It was reported that the French had attacked our lines at Guadaloupe, and had been repulsed with considerable loss.

The 10th of Aug. his Majesty's ship Rebeck failed from Martinique, with a small reinforcement of soldiers and sailors for Guadaloupe. No reinforcements had been received from Europe by either the British or French. About nineteenth days since, as Captain Pryor was within fifteen leagues of Guadaloupe he heard a violent cannonading.

Tuesday arrived the brig Peggy, from Grenock, in seven weeks passage, and brings papers to the 26 ult.

Wednesday failed his Majesty's Packet Westmoreland with the Mail for Falmouth.

Thursday arrived from a cruise, his Majesty's ship Blanche, Captain Faulkner.

PHILADELPHIA,

OCTOBER 11.

The ship Hope arrived yesterday morning at New-York from London, which place she left the 23d August—by this arrival, letters were received in this city, dated the 20th August; from one of which we are enabled to lay before our readers the following

Important Intelligence:

Extract of a letter from an American Gentleman of information in London, dated the 20th of August, 1794, to his friend in this city.

Another great change in men has taken place in Paris:—Robespierre and his friends have fallen on the same scaffold to which he had led so many others: A change of measures was expected by people here, but none takes place—the people and the armies seem not to lose their confidence in the Convention, bad as many think them, and no disturbance that we hear as yet, has taken place in any quarter.

The armies of the Allies are in every place unsuccessful; within a few days Treves is taken by the French, after defeating the army of Austrians, who projected it—this lays open the Rhine, and will oblige the Prince de Cobourg to fall back from Maastricht, in which case that place is the next to fall, and Holland will be expected.

Poland although not in a fair way to succeed for themselves, have operated a most important diversion for the French. The Fleets of the Baltic begin now to excite some speculation.

The Hope we are informed failed in company with the ship George Barclay bound to this port, full of passengers.

MORDECAI LEWIS, Esq. is chosen President of the INSURANCE COMPANY of PENNSYLVANIA.

M. LEVY, Esq. declines serving as a member of the Assembly for Philadelphia.

Extract of a letter from London, Aug. 2.

"We are happy to say there is no apprehension of a misunderstanding between the two countries.—Mr. JAY seems to have met with a favorable reception.—The very conversation of sequestering British debts is very impolitic, as it tends to lessen British confidence in giving commercial credit; as many of our Merchants will begin to think their commissions unequal to the risk, when their property and establishment in life will depend on the arbitrary will of a few coffee-house politicians, entering into such violent resolutions, when they think our government has given offence, intentionally, or not so, according to their interpretation."

Extract of a letter from an Officer in the first regiment of Philadelphia Militia, to his friend in Philadelphia, dated Carlisle, October 4, 1794.

"The extensive commotions that surround this borough, are canvassed over with our numerous tents. We have at present, (if I may presume to judge from the extent of ground occupied) about three thousand men in the field; and fresh companies are daily arriving. Our troops appear both healthy and gallant, and are armed and accoutred to the best advantage.

The army was this day reviewed by the President of the United States, accompanied by near a dozen general Officers. The scene was splendid and engaging. When the Sun occasionally broke through the fleecy and obstrucling clouds, the field in one part glittered with a forest of muskets, and death-pointed bayonets, while in another part streams of lightning flashed from the drawn blades of the gorgeous Cavalry.

Amidst all this reflected blaze of armory, the MAN OF THE PEOPLE, with a man intrepid as that of Hector, yet graceful as that of Paris, moved slowly onward with his attending Officers, nor open turned his Eagle Eye from the dazzling effulgence of the steel clad band.

As the Heroic Sage advanced on his Light Moving steed along the line which was mute with admiration, and respect, our standards involuntarily bowed their heads, while their flags chaunted to the passing gale, in union with the Trumpets clangor, and the wild music of the martial field—the scene was awfully picturesque and inspiring. My imagination caught fire, and I thought myself a second Homer, born to sing the Praises of the American Patriot and Hero. Thus transported, I beheld as he retired fifteen blazing Suns, encircle his elevated brows: In the Centre sat justice, with her sword and balance giving place to meek Eyed mercy with extended arms."

"The disaffection in Cumberland County, is beyond your conception. Three Insurgents have already suffered death, and three hundred more at least must share their fate. Terror is beginning to spread among them, because they discover a determined spirit in the government, and a zeal for its support, in the troops, which have already taken the field.

We must advance to the base of the towering Allegheny, and the line of march will be taken up about the 10th Inst. I fear the honour we shall gain will be too small, because the enemy cannot pretend to make any serious opposition. Those which fall in my way, I am determined to make compoils of, to fertilize the barren soil from whence the Demon Whiskey, born of Ryé, first reared his giddy head.

Block houses are said to be erected by the poor deluded wild men of the west, but the report I believe is groundless; if not, our Artillery will soon scatter them and their unarmed defenders, to all the winds of Heaven."

My next I hope shall be more worthy your attention.

MR. FENNO,

I have to complain of the partiality of the public prints, and to ask why so much noise is made because my friend,

(the little member) denounced both the Insurgents and the Excise in one, and the same publication. I say this in not blowing hot and cold in the face of a man as has been maliciously stated, but it was a fair and manlyly electing stroke, to keep in with all parties.—Then why this harping always on the same string, while no public notice is taken of the strange appeal from Congress, to the state Assembly, signed by the Speaker of Congress, who is also a candidate, and therefore as fair game as the other gentleman.

A CITIZEN.

Accounts from the army at Carlisle from good authority, inform that our friends enjoy in general a remarkable degree of health—some slight indispositions from colds affect only a few—that every man in Mc. Pherson's blues is well; that the army prefers the cold weather, to the warm intervals we have had, that they are somewhat impatient to finish the business, & that it is expected the greater part will have to march to Pittsburgh.

A new paper under the title of the Times has just made its appearance in Bolton.—Published three times a week by Hall & Machinotek.

BALTIMORE, October 8,

Extract of a letter from Philadelphia dated the 6th instant.

"The Philadelphians, I think are acting the same part that your fellow citizens did last year. In spite of the most convincing facts they will maintain that there is no infectious fever here; and were it not for the kind interposition of providence in sending very cool weather I should have no doubt of the fever raging as much as last year. To carry on this deception, they have stopped the intercourse with Baltimore.

The committee of health report the following list of burials in the different places of interment of Baltimore-town and its vicinity, for the last 24 hours, viz.

From the QUARTER, A NEW CHAPTER—POLITICAL.

1. THIS is the Book of the generation and down fall of Jacobinism:—
2. Briffot beget the Jacobin clubs of Paris—The Jacobin Clubs of Paris, beget Genet, and his French Brethren:—
3. Genet beget the Democratic Societies in America: The Democratic Societies beget the Pittsburgh Rebellion and its consequences:—
4. The Pittsburgh Rebellion beget an armament of Fifteen Thousand men:—
5. The Armament of 15,000 men, will beget an expense of near Two Millions of dollars; of which all the people of the United States must bear a proportion:—

6. The expense will beget an attention in the people, to its rise and origin: and,

7. That attention will beget the detestation and downfall of Jacobinism, and its Clubs:—

8. So all the generations, from Briffot to the downfall of Jacobinism, are eight generations.

This ends the first Political Chapter.

Mr. Fenno,

Mr. Brown's paper of last evening, contains the following paragraph:

"In all the squabbles and massacres of the Convention, the army, the city of Paris, and a very great majority of the rest of the people, have invariably stood by the successful party. This uniform adherence, and unanimity, afford a strong presumption, that many of these executions which appear so shocking, have been grounded on substantial justice."

How an adherence to the successful party affords any proof or presumption that any of those executions which really are shocking, having been grounded on substantial justice is incomprehensible.—That many of the victims of party fury have merited death is doubtless true—but that the approbation or acquiescence of the people in the indiscriminate massacres of persons of opposite parties, is founded in any principle whatever but that of terror, cannot be true.

The principle here laid down will justify perpetual executions, and in a more extensive sense than Pope ever meant shew that whatever is, is right."

Married lately, in Frederick County, Virginia, JAMES MADISON, Esq. Member of Congress, from that State, to the accomplished Mrs. D. TON, of this City.

ALBANY, Oct. 6.

On the night of Saturday the 27th ult. the store occupied by Nathaniel Tolman, in Renbaker-ville, and the house of Jonathan Hayton, adjoining, were consumed by fire.

Mr. Tolman being absent, Mr. Hayton was awakened by the noise of the flames, between the hours of 11 and 12 and on running out, discovered the inside of the store to be in a flame, and from the wind blowing strong from the west, rapidly advancing to his house; he immediately, with the assistance of his wife, carried out their children, and considerable part of their furniture, and before any aid could be had from the neighborhood, the rest was consumed.

In the store were a considerable quantity of goods; which, together with the store—books notes, receipts, &c. were all consumed. As there has been no fire in the store for six months past, it is supposed that some malicious, designing person has broke in and set fire to the store.
