ntimutely connected works the must field extremethe did not mean to deny that the muft field extreme-by autious in making dedarations upon this labels. He did not mean to deny that there was reajon to has ment much fonc occurrences which is datappened in Ire-land; but be would affert privicely and mennioveculty, that if this affair fould be Jully invyligated, it would appear to the boule and to the kingdom, that mone of the embarrafiments which might happen in that country, could in any degree be attributed to his majefy's fervants here : more than this be would not fay at prefent, except to obferve, that if it was true that the fifter kingdom was in afluation of for-ment abd meanings, it certainly was the firmgdom for the propofed enguity. He begged leave to afk the right han, gentleman, wobat good to either kingdom could poffibly arife from a difulfion of the fubjefa the prefent moment? In what manner did be propofed conduct the enguiry, if the boule fould agree to it expediency? The hon, gentleman had hild the bouge that he had ly cautious in making declarations upon this fubject He did not mean to deny that there was reason to la-

to conduct the enquiry, if the body body arree to its expediency? The bon, gentleman had kild the boyle that be bad a motion to fubmit to a committee of enquiry, if it fould be granted, which would not require the pro-duction of any paper to support it; but he wight to onfider, may be would put it to the candour of the right bon. gentleman himfelf, whether such as a quiry as this could be made to any effect whatever, without the production of a wariety of papers, let-ters, diffatches, We. which it would be impofilide at this period to make public. If the right hon-gentleman fiels, as every friend to this country may feel, a degree of uncafine is a count of the some and momentary in-terruption of the boged always would, fublit he-tween the two countries, furly be could not think bit-tween the two countries, furly be could not the bogs, who had upon every occafion during the boarmony which was flated to have been interrupt-ed.

The right hon, gentleman had used the flate eland as he did almost every other occurrence-al converted it into an argument to induce the hou-change the ofinions they had repeatedly and folem bange the opinions the argument to track to prove upon the fubject of war, and to pro-fity of an immediate peace. Here again b ement made againf the object he had in wie it was true that those embarrafiments and t time crifted in Technol. if the technologi was true that those embarrayments and to ton existed in Ireland ; if the probable of ce of that slate of affairs was as had been that we should not receive that cordial co-of from Ireland; was it likely that these aces would have the effect of procuring us this fellion much more fatisfactory proof upon this bead than any committee could give them. They had government up n this fully of, bad ever been refujed. That in the courfe of a war jo nowel in its nature, and jo unexampled in its pro-bable confequences as the prefent, we must loke a confiderable number of mem, was a melancholy truth, which could not be deni-ed. The lofs even of one nan from our troops, who had upon every occasion during this war, maintained the honor of the country, and acquired immortal glory to themfelves, was an event which must be deplored; yet when the importance of the object was confidered, and the immenfe flake we had upon the iffue of this conteft, the fa-crifice, great as it was, was necoffary for the good of the whole. good of the whole.

The question aubether in the course of the war ave had lost a few hundreds more, owwever it might affect their feelings, yet by no means decided the general question. Every object in life was great or small by comparison; the loss of any of our gallant countrymen, confidered abstractedly must be felt as a calamity; but when confidered with a relation to the nature of the present contells, the loss great as it must over left
