DARING ATTEMPT

ON THE SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE, By a JACOBIN. On the night of the 10th inst. a most daring attempt was made on the Secretary of State's Office, in the city of Washington, at present kept in the large building intended for the Treasury Department.

From July 1 to 13, the whole number of Deaths in New-York of every disease, was 76—of whom 22 were men, 15 women, and 39 children.

Died, at his Father's, in York Town, Westchester County, on the 3d inst. of the consumption, Mr. Jacob Lang, in the 26th year of his age.

The United States frigate Essex, captain Preble, sailed from the Cape of Good Hope the 27th of March.

It is pleasing to observe that among men of common sense and discernment the infidel cavils of Tom Paine are now held in the utmost contempt and abhorrence. A few of the most despicable of the vulgar, and the most ignorant among readers still pore over his flimsy page, and believe that he has laid the axe to the root of revealed religion.

The State of Connecticut is a sober and wife State. Its political thermometer is nicely graduated, and describes every vicissitude accurately. The following sentiments, expressed at a late festival, corroborate this opinion.

The United States—May their union be continued, unless the rust of Democracy shall so far corrode the chain as to render it impossible either to mend or to brighten it.

The Constitution of the United States—May it be written of it, as of the Christian System, that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

President Adams—May we regard him for his former good works, and may he be saved from being ensnared by those who greet with a kiss, that they may betray.

Memory of our immortal Washington—May his peaceful manes never be disturbed by innovating on the wise system of administration which he adopted.

The Aurora avers that the 4th of July was celebrated by none but republicans. This is certainly an exception to the usual false style of that paper. For it is a Truism, Mr. Duane could not in conscience expect that the day would be festively commemorated by Englishmen, or by old Tories, or by those, who had been aggrieved by the revolution. Let those laugh, who win. It was celebrated by Americans.

Cooper and Callender were toasted by the democrats. It will next be the fashion among atheists and traitors to toast the Devil and his Dam, and Cataline and Cætebus!

A lyncatic and disjointed Essay in the Aurora is headed "Hamilton in Boston at dinner with the Nobles and Clergy!" Quere, how many Dukes, Earls, Marquises and Barons were there at the above feast, and why were their respective names omitted in the last edition of the Boston Court Calendar?

An Editor of a country newspaper, announcing the death of the celebrated Cooper the author of the Task, &c. pronounces in a very dull and downright style that "he was the best of modern poets." Not to say a word, respecting the extreme looseness and inaccuracy of such criticism, the phraseology of this man of types resembles extremely that of an old market woman or a village huckster. "This is the best of butter." "This is the nicest row of piss in the world!"

The Editor of the Aurora, who feels goaded by the reproaches of his own party, respecting the perpetual blunders, vulgarity and incorrections of his uncouth style, has at length attempted reformation. In his paper of the 14th, speaking of the Boston Mercury, he calls it a "rapid vehicle of mean inanity." This is truly most adventurous flouting. This is flying quite out of flight. A vehicle, which has no taste of flavour, and which, though it carries nothing, carries meanness, is certainly that kind of car in which none but an Irishman would venture his neck.

A gentleman observing the democratic flovenliness, and ale house cafe of a certain mad-cap and ci-devant Parson, well known by his ravings in the Aurora, remarked that it reminded him of a passage in Pope's Dunciad.

"How Lausus lay inspir'd, behind a sink And to mere mortals seems a Priest in Drink."

Wanted sadly by the Aurora man, a little money to procure that same Royal paper and those new types, of which he talked so magnificently the beginning of the winter. Any generous Demo, who will loan the same, will—be sure—never to receive his cash again from W. D.

Left last night, in a blind alley, a quart of Gin, well distilled.—Whoever will return the precious liquor to Jasper Traitor, Esq. shall go snacks in boozing!

LIBERTY. EQUALITY. FRENCH REPUBLIC. PROCLAMATION.

Declaring in a state of Blockade the Ports of the Southern Department.

WE Toussaint Louverture, General in Chief of the army of St. Domingo. Considering the obliquity of the inhabitants of the Southern part of St. Domingo by persisting in their revolt against the French Republic: Considering that Addresses, Proclamations, and other writings, tending to open to their view the serious dangers to which the pride and dominant spirit, of Andre Rigaud is leading them, have made no impression on their hearts, hardened in crimes—that they have even obstinately refused the amnesty held out to them; and finally despairing of bringing them back to their duty by forsaking their errors—Hereby declare all the ports of the Southern Departments of St. Domingo in a state of Blockade, that is, from the ports of Miragane and Aquin to and comprehending those of Quiberon and Jeremie.

We solicit all American, Spanish, and French ships of war, and all others of our allies to capture every vessel entering or going out of these ports, of whatever nation they may be, promising to the captors the amount of the captures after they shall have been condemned.

We except from this measure only all vessels going out of the southern ports aforesaid to free themselves from the revolt of Rigaud, which circumstance, the captain, owner, or passengers shall prove.

Head Quarters, Cape Francois, 18th Floral, (8th May) 8th year of the French republic, one and indivisible. (Signed)

TOUSSAINT LOUVERTURE, General in Chief.

The enemies of Mr. Adams and his election, alledge as the great reason for preferring Mr. Jefferson, that the former by his influence has introduced standing armies and a navy; but since the army has been disbanded, the latter complained of evil as the only pretext to answer the views of the disaffected.—The following extract from Mr. Jefferson's Notes on Virginia, will plainly shew how far the author is to be preferred to Mr. Adams, as President:—"the sea is the field on which we should meet an European—an enemy on that element it is necessary we should preserve some power."—This opinion was published before the existence of party in the United States, at a time, when the author, if ever may be supposed to have felt an attachment to his country. If different sentiments were avowed by him now, we may readily conjecture the motives.

If it is possible for the people to view the expence of a navy as a burthen, why not attach blame to another part of the government—Surely they know that the laws authorizing its establishment must have originated and passed in Congress, before it could receive the President's sanction. [Vir. Fed.]

The following is a good epigram. It has the truth, nature and simplicity of the Grecian school, and, if translated by a Parr, or a Porson, might be included in the "Anthologia."

On a Natural Child destroyed by its Mother. 'Twas Love, that conquer'd SHAME, and gave thee breath, And SHAME, that, conquering Love, decreed thy death.

On a Contented Cuckold.

Nigrinus leads a married life, Not with his own—but neighbour's wife, And though Cornelius knows its thus, The fool's Cornelius Tacitus.

On a Divine, whose sermons were of the opiate class.

Dormouse esteems it wondrous odd, That people, when he preaches, nod, As if he were a very profer.

Take comfort, Dormouse, though they blame Your oratory, you may claim The merit of a rare compiler!

If the Monsieurs could have quietly contented themselves with their Prags, not a soul in Europe would have grudged or envied them their cookery; but when they turned their genius to Crocodiles, it must be confessed they made a pretty little of fish of it.

Lalande, the French Astronomer, complains bitterly, that in a Dictionary of A-theists lately published, the names of several have been omitted. He thinks, however, that it is not very clear that Sir Isaac Newton, who is included in the list, was one of that "description." Mercier, on the other hand, complains that his name has been inserted in the list of those whom he files the "spiffs of Death and annihilation."

A German writer has lately come forward to prove, that War is not only the natural state of man, but that Society is so constructed that it would cease to exist should any long interval of peace occur. How happy for the Theory of this gentleman is the French revolution and its abundant crop of guilt!

Suwarow, says a French Journalist, never allows his men to be taught any of the manoeuvres of retreating. Among a number of ridiculous particulars which they ascribe to him, they assert that it is his practice every morning to call up his army, not by beat of drum, but by coming in front of his own tent, and crowing like a cock, three times. They admit, however, that his disposition is most disinterested and generous, and that he is liberal to profusion.

A small plant producing silk wool, similar to that of Syria, and equal in quality, has lately been discovered on some mountains in South Russia.

In lat. 38, a Str. it has been lately discovered, dividing Van Dieman's Land from New South Wales. A lieutenant belonging to the Reliance lately passed thro' it, and returned round the South Cape.

An Hibernian domestic lately travelling, was observed to be very earnestly employed in fastening a string to a bell which chanced to hang in the chamber where he was to sleep: Being asked the cause of it, he vernacularly replied, "Don't you know as I'm to rise early, the bell way to waken myself will betwix the bell at five, so it will."—[One of Duane's fami!]

A German Chemist had lately amused himself in writing a long dissertation upon the Combustibility of the Human Body, and its readiness to catch a flame. Surely it has long been known that the irritable race of mankind are apt to take fire.

The French Papers give an account of a Citizen Lebrun, who was couched for a cataract, and who, immediately after the operation, was so perfectly well as to be able to distinguish his friends. We heartily recommend the operation to Buonaparte, and to the whole People of France, whose intellectual eyes require to be couched before they can make such a distinction.

In the New Helvetic Constitution we observe one regulation that strikes us as extremely salutary, namely, that Ecclesiastical and Civil functions cannot be exercised by the same persons. The total suppression of begging is also highly judicious.

A Gentleman being interrogated by a Friend respecting the health of his lady, rather a warm advocate for the new doctrine of female rights, "Poor woman," says he, "she was cast away some months since on the Godwin Sands."

ADDRESS TO THE MOON.

Written at the sea-shore, July 31, 1799. Superior queen of night arise, And o'er the gloom thy lustre throw— In peerless glory through the skies, To blest the traveller here below. High from some elevated steep, That overhangs the raging flood, Alone I view the silver'd deep, While winds disperse each rolling cloud. Here let me pass the silent hour, In transport o'er the immensè serene, And view, beneath the pebbled shoar, Above, the heaven's expansive scene. While all around in prospect grow, The lofty forests, tinged with light! The mountain top! the plains below! And wide creation fills the sight.

AGRICOLA.

LINES.

Written in a Garden-Seat. If Mirth alone to thee be dear, If Sorrow ne'er thy heart refine, If frolic Youth thy bosom cheer, And Spirits light, and Fortune kind, No longer let thine eyes peruse What here inscribed thy glance may see; For I this artless verse would chuse, Unmarked by mortals' blest like thee. But, Stranger, at the touch of pain If e'er thy heart were doomed to thrill, If Melancholy ever reign To steep thy soul in slumbers still— If harsh unkindness e'er for thee Prepared that keen envenomed dart, Which tenderness can seldom flee, And left it rankling in thy heart— Then would I greet with kindest lay, Would say like thee that others mourn, And chide thee soft, if chide I may, And bid thee bear what I have borne— And tell thee, Stranger, if to me Thy sacred griefs had but been known, One heart at least had felt for thee, And made thy sorrows all its own.

TO ELIZA.

THAT once I lov'd thee well, is true; I lov'd thy unaffected smile; Admir'd thine eyes, of azure blue, Ador'd thy bosom, void of guile. Thy artless converse charm'd my ear, Its innocence supply'd its zest; Simplicity and Truth were there. To prove the frankness of thy breast. Those were the days when in thy mind No fickle fashions held their reign; When Friendship's power was unconfin'd, And heart'd, but ne'er is falsified pain. But Coquetry's delusive wiles, Affum'd dominion o'er thy heart, For'd the young cherubs from thy smiles, And left thee but—a Thing of Art! Thus the fair Apple on the tree, Its fascinating tints displays; Its outside all from blemish free, But rotten at the core—decays.

Then learn from hence the will of fate— Its fix'd decree for once attend: N. solid joys, her days await, Who proves incontinent to A FRIEND

NORFOLK, July 8.

It has been observed by a shrewd observer of things, that it is very imprudent for our merchant ships to disarm, merely on the report of our Commissioners having a chance to succeed in their negotiations with France. This, perhaps, is true; for our Commissioners have been long enough in France, to convince the world that if France was ferocious in the inclination to make peace with America, that they would not, and did not intend to force us to it by acts of aggression on our commerce. But a fleet of privateers failing from Bourdeaux, and our vessels being examined & plundered within three days sail of our coast is certainly a convincing proof of French sincerity; but this may be justified by the following anecdote. "A highwayman having taken a gentleman's purse and watch from him, was requested by the gentleman not to take the watch, for it was a family one; The highwayman replied, d—n your family, you do not know how to take care of it. I'll wind it up for you." Depend on it, Americans! the fewer guns you have out for protection, the more you will have against you. I the news in the New York paper that our Commissioners have not been able to do any thing in France, is true, the above observation perhaps is not ill-timed.
