We have been informed that a young gentleman, lately from the interior of this State, made an attempt on his life, on Sunday evening last, at his lodgings, by cutting his throat with a razor;—He was conveyed to the Hospital yesterday morning.

Captain Warden who arrived at N. York on Saturday in the ship Orion, left Paris the 7th of August. The day before, he had an interview with Mr. Vans Murray, one of the American Envoys, who told Captain Warden that the negotiations hung in a state of uncertainty; and that NOTHING had then been done.

CLERGY.

MR WAYNE,
The following circular letter is addressed to the lukewarm Clergy, who have not yet come forward, at a time when the Christian Religion is so much threatened.

Reverend Sir,
GOD AND A RELIGIOUS PRESIDENT.

OR

JEFFERSON AND NO GOD.

There is no mean between these two extremes, no place for neutrality; will a Christian Minister pause one moment to what side he will take? Will he forsake his RELIGION, and his SAVIOUR: to take up with the world, and by his silence forward the election of an Infidel? The very deliberation is no less scandalous, than to debate whether you shall apostatize yourself by such conduct from your God, for a correspondence with the devil: or deprive yourself of the satisfaction of an approving conscience, with Heaven in reversion, for misery travelled, and Hell in remainder. You call yourself a Christian, and profess to be a Minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, you perform the Ceremonies required of you, in his Church, you preside at his table, and distribute the Bread and Wine to his Flock. These relations call upon you: You are in a station that requires great care, and your endeavours ought to be unceasing; for if you fail, you betray your duty, and risk your eternal welfare. In this Age of Reason improperly so called, your Religion is threatened, and you effect not to discover the danger. Are you yourself an Infidel; a faint in profession, but a fiend in principle? If you are not, it is your duty to make every exertion to prevent the election of one, to the first office in the United States. A prophet threw all the misfortunes of the Jewish People, upon their inconsideration. "The Earth lies desolate because no man will take the pains to enter upon the consideration of his duty," and I much fear the troubles that are fast approaching, this once happy, Christian country, spring from the same source. The Clergy have of late become negligent, and seem to fix their security upon a wretched maxim, I do no harm: suppose this true; is this sufficient to ensure you a place in those blessed Regions, where happiness hangs not on the precarious tenure of uncertainty; when you are in the omission of a duty, as a Christian Minister? You no doubt recollect the parable of the Master, who called his Steward to an account for a Talent; he pleaded to turn over to that Chapter, Matthew 25, it seems designed for your instruction, weigh the drift, and stop at every circumstance. He was unprofitable, but not wicked; he encroached not his master's stock, nor did he embezzle it. It is true he put not out the money to interest, but he secured the principal; and if he did no good, he did no harm. This plea brought him not off; he was found guilty of negligence, and received his sentence and punishment.

Infidelity is increasing among us. JEFFERSON is a candidate for the Presidency; and one of your Christian Brethren, the Rev. Mr. ABERCROMBIE daily abused from that infamous Press, which published Paine's Age of Reason; for doing, what he conceived to be his duty. Religion is decreasing, and the blessed Author of it, made the subject of Sport. You have seen the effect of infidelity in France; and do you mean to suffer these under your care, to take of the Poison covered with Honey, to give it a palatable relish? Or do you mean to come forward as a faithful servant, in support of your Holy Religion, and by a timely interference save many souls? If the latter is your determination, be not afraid in such a cause, speak boldly. Your Master is with you, and will not forsake you; and when you have finished your course here in opposition to the Philosophy of the present day; you will be translated into his presence, where there is Joy and Pleasure forever more.

NO INFIDEL.

FURTHER REFUTATION OF AURORA LIES.

"Saturday, October 4."—The false assertion with respect to the abuse levelled from the pulpit at Mr. Jones, which obliged his wife to leave the Church, is again, with unparalleled effrontery brought forward, supported by another bare-faced lie, that Mr. A. in the pulpit, called him a Jacobin. This is again denied in toto; not a single expression or allusion in the Sermon having reference to him, or it being known to Mr. A. that Mr. Jones was the candidate opposed to General Guyton.

Item. It is charged in the Aurora, that Mr. A. was accused of applying for the Treasuryship of the Mint after he was in Orders. The Aurora never dreamt to discriminate whether before or after.

In the Aurora of Wednesday, September 10th, is the following article:

"Mr. Abercrombie's views and pursuits are various, and he has always an eye to a lucrative profession, attended with leisure, from a Cashier to a Bank or Bank." (unquestionably a perfect security) before he was a parson, to the Treasuryship of the Mint, after he had, under pretence of inspiration by the Holy Ghost, assumed Orders."

Again, "The same Abercrombie was a competitor with Dr. Rush (in 1797) for the Treasuryship of the Mint."

In the Aurora of Friday, September 19, it is stated, that "Mr. A's disappointment, at not being appointed to the Treasuryship of the Mint, in the room of Dr. Rush, was further aggravated by the recollection of the service he rendered in the memorable East Day Proclamation of 1798."

In the Aurora of Monday, Sept. 29, among the "Speculations of Mr. A." it is asserted,

"7. The Treasuryship of the Mint was sought for by Mr. Tristram Dalton, under Gen. Washington, and Mr. Abercrombie put in his ear too, but the boat would not row; Gen. Washington refused."

"8. The same place became vacant again under Mr. Adams, and Dr. Rush and Mr. Abercrombie were the rival candidates." (4 years after Mr. A. was in Orders.)

"9. The place of Money Changer not being in the reach of this man devoted to the service of God, he took up the pulpit drum and beat a tattoo to politics, and got Porcupine to publish his Sermon."

N. B. Porcupine did not publish the Sermon, but Mr. John O'mol.

Is not this, reader, a clear conviction of a lie?

Item. "He says he was charged in the Aurora with instigating Porcupine to attack Dr. Rush. This was never directly said in the Aurora."

In that paper of Wednesday, 10th of September, it is said, "Why was it that Dr. Rush was perpetually annoyed, asperged and persecuted by Porcupine? Parson Abercrombie the defamer of Jefferson was the constant associate of Porcupine; the same Abercrombie was a competitor with Dr. Rush for the Treasuryship of the Mint."

If this is not the refutation of the form, it certainly is of the spirit of a lie. But the refutation of lies in this paper, would be like unravelling the web of Penelope, an endless undertaking.

The Editor of the Aurora declaims vehemently against "the intimacy and confidence that subsisted between Porcupine and Abercrombie," and considers it a just reproach to the latter. Mr. A. was never either ashamed or afraid to cultivate an acquaintance with Mr. Cobbett, and openly to avow his esteem for him, which surely the candor, even of his enemies must allow to be justifiable upon a principle of common gratitude alone, for his generous, able and unfeigned defence of Mr. A. against the base attack of Carey, an imported Irish patriot, and Editor of the Daily Advertiser, who in his paper of April 1797, virulently abused Mr. A. upon a false accusation. Mr. Cobbett with the zeal of a confirmed friend, was prompt in his defence, tho' Mr. A. had been but a very short time before, accidentally introduced to him, and could scarcely be said to be acquainted with him.

Duane concludes his Grub-street philippic of Saturday last, by saying "these strictures are severe, the writer feels that they are so, but it is the fever of Justice. It is not from any personal hostility to the man (Mr. A.) they are given; he is, in the writer's eye, a very weak and indolent man; one who has had an unhappy bias to pursue what was wrong; when he might with half the pains have obtained as much happiness as falls to the lot of humanity, by pursuing what was right;" which, being interpreted, weak and indolent as we are now inclined to style Mr. A. had he pursued what is right in our eyes, had he advocated with us the sacred right of insurrection, laboured to overturn our civil constitution, levelled a deadly blow at Christianity by endeavouring to effect the election of a man to the Presidency who ridiculed and despised it; had he exercised his pen in vilifying Gen. Washington, Mr. Adams, C. C. Pickens, Gen. Hamilton and other conspicuous characters who are the boast and glory of our country.—"He might with half the pains" or talents, have been one of the leaders of our gang; and by the homage and rewards, which we and our infligators the French, should have rendered him, he would have obtained as much happiness as falls to the lot of humanity to enjoy in such a society. Duane concludes with this conculding reflection, that Mr. A. is "mortified" by his strictures.—Far from it; Mr. A. conscious that his character is invulnerable, receives such censure with the contempt it deserves, and defies the utmost fury, which the malignity of party spirit, the frenzy of Jacobinism, or the exclusive influence of infidelity can display, to depreciate him in the estimation of the virtuous, and the good; of true Federalists, and of sincere Christians.

DUANE.

Dare you name the villain who called Washington a

MURDERER?

We are fond of asking questions Jasper.

From a Kingston (J) paper, per the Rose.
KINGSTON, (Jamaica) August 29.

Late on Wednesday evening arrived at Port Royal, his majesty's ship La Seine, with the French national frigate La Vengeance, commanded by citizen Pitot, which she captured after a very severe engagement on the 21st instant.

The account we learn of the action is, that on the morning of the 20th, the enemy was first discovered in the Mona passage and chased all that day, and in the evening engaged some time; both vessels then received considerable damage and separated. The next morning the enemy was again brought to action, and after a very considerable time, and her mizen mast and main top mast shot away, she struck.

Immediately after her surrender, her fore-mast went over the side, and the main mast on her passage to this island.

The number of the killed and wounded on board La Vengeance, is not yet known. There were thirteen killed and twenty-nine wounded on board La Seine, among the former Lieutenant Milne, a very gallant officer; some of the wounded are officers.

Several officers of the army were on board La Vengeance, among the number is General Bauvais, late commander under Rigaud in the South of St. Domingo) with his wife and children.

La Vengeance carries 28 eighteen pounders on her main deck, 14 nine pounders and 4 forty two pounders on her quarter deck and fore-castle. La Seine's force is inferior.

The number of the crew of La Vengeance, on her arrival at Port Royal, was 287.

The Captain of La Vengeance is the same officer who commanded La Renommée, when taken by his majesty's ship Alfred.

In the Jamaica papers there is another account, which does not differ materially from the above.

In stating the return of killed and wounded on board the Vengeance, it says that out of 453 her complement of men, she only brought into Kingston 291.

It also adds that Captain Petot mentions, that "in the action he had with the Constellation, he struck three times; that he saw her in the morning when his ship was entirely misfired, and might have made a prize of him, but that the Constellation did not appear anxious to renew the struggle."

From late London Papers.

The Abbe De Lille the celebrated translator of the Georgius of Virgil is at present in London—he is now quite blind.

Foreigners seem to know little of the sovereignty of the British empire, that a writer in a Strasbourg paper says—"England has just concluded a treaty offensive and defensive with the Isle of Man."

General Moreau who now displays so much skill and bravery at the head of the French army of the Danube, was originally an attorney.

Thomas Paine resides in an obscure lodging in the suburbs of Paris. He is in the last stage of a decline through intemperance.

A German writer compares England to a rich merchant vessels and the national debt to the ballast.

The unfortunate Kotzebue, in none of his tragedies conceived so dark a plot as that by which he is now confined to wear away probably the remainder of his days in the remote and hideous deserts of Siberia.

An Irish paper of the 12th July, says, "the first export entry from hence for Washington, the new capital of the United States of America, took place on Thursday, and consisted of wrought iron, brads and hosiery; which we hope will be followed by numerous others, especially as increasing rapidly in population, its demands for manufactured goods will certainly increase in proportion."
