LEXINGTON November 18.

The Answer of the House of Representatives to the Governor's Speech. HIS EXCELLENCY JAMES GARRARD, Esq. GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY.

SIR, Individually, and as the representatives of the people of Kentucky, we are pleased to receive your assurances of zeal to discharge the duties incumbent on you. We entertain no doubt of your integrity or of your intentions to promote the general welfare.

We sincerely join with you in the warmest expressions of gratitude to the great giver of all goodness for that portion of liberty, ease and prosperity which we enjoy yet we cannot help but regret with you the very reduced state of our finances, and the other inconveniences which you have laid before us.

We can only say, that our exertions shall be to promote whatever may have a tendency to advance and secure the interests of our fellow citizens, and to lessen (if not remove) the evils which attend.

We are unable to say how far our aid will be necessary to carry into effect special laws of the last session, which required the attention of the executive; inasmuch as we are not yet advised how far they have been acted upon, or what circumstances have impeded the completion thereof.

We conclude with hoping that the united efforts of the executive and legislative powers of this state will be to promote manufactures and agriculture in our Commonwealth, and that such endeavours will meet the reward which our warmest wishes shall contemplate.

On Saturday evening a letter was received by a gentleman in this city, from his friend in Washington, in which the writer states that he had just received a letter dated Columbia, Nov. 25th, informing him that the Legislature of South Carolina were convened the day before, and, that, in both houses, there was a majority of Federalists.

From the Boston Mercury.

I failed from Boston in the schooner Nancy, belonging to Leach and Watson of Boston, on the 18th of August last, and in 16 days was taken by a French privateer schooner, of 12 guns and 80 men, and carried into St. Johns, Porto Rico, where I found the following American vessels, which has been captured, viz. schr. Lark, Randall, from St. Vincents for New York, Hannah, Dighton, from do. for Kennebec; sloop Hercules, Tolman, Anguilla, for Wilmington; schooner John, Bayton, Norfolk to St. Thomas; brig Juno, Vincent, Philadelphia to Jamaica; schooner Favourite Alice, M'Connell, Norfolk to Jamaica; sloop Hiram, Wilson, New York to St. Thomas, and a Wilmington brig. I think it my duty, in behalf of the above mentioned masters and myself, to proclaim to the world the villainous treatment received from the captors, they being stripped of their goods and turned on shore penniless, and but for the humanity of the Spanish government, who obliges the captors or their agents to furnish the masters with a bare support, might have been reduced to have begged their bread. There was a Frenchman there, whom foreigners called a consul, but the Spanish government had not acknowledged him as such, and he was only permitted to act as receiver of plundered or stolen goods, in behalf of his countrymen. An American brig called the Polly, said to be from New York, bound to Jamaica, brought in here, and purchased by a Frenchman called Cartang. Said brig is bound to New York or Philadelphia, and commanded by Thomas Randall, mentioned in the foregoing list, and is supposed to be covered as American property by him. The collectors will do well to watch the arrival of the aforementioned brig, as she will be in America about this time.

From the Pittsburgh Gazette.

On the infolent letter of Judge Brackenridge, to Judge Addison, (published in last Friday's gazette) the following remarks are made in the Pittsburgh gazette.

Mr. Brackenridge it seems never heard of any arts in the election of Governor. Honest man! But let him not be alarmed, they are not imputed to him. His arts lay the other way, to trim between the two candidates, pretend neutrality, do things on both sides, that whichever succeeded he might claim the merit, and the reward. No body expects truth from him. He knows that such arts did exist, but that they are not flated to affect the people this side of the mountains. For the people on this side of the mountains did not elect Gov. M'Kean. And least of all would they apply to the people of Alleghany or Crawford county in which there was so great a majority against him. Nothing unfavourable to the people of these counties could be meant and nothing unfavourable to the character and administration of the Governor, which must speak for itself. And nothing but the malice of Brackenridge, the feeling of intoxication and the raving of insanity could suggest such things.

Mr. SCULL,

The letter of Judge Brackenridge to Mr. Addison printed in the Tree of Liberty last week, is more censurable and more alarming than any publication which has ever appeared in an American newspaper. A Judge of the Supreme Court openly invites the people to outrage, not, and insurrection against the judiciary authority of the state. He tells the turbulent, the guilty, the desperate, the feckless, that Judge Addison ought to have been dragged from the bench and sacrificed on the spot!!! And he seems to lament the passive tameness of the people as bordering upon servility, because they refrained from insulting a Judge sitting in the sacred seat of Justice! When passion displaces reason and assumes her station; when the artist appointed to decide the fate of criminals, comes forward, stimulates to the perpetration of the most horrid crimes; what confidence? What security? What hope have the people left! If vindictive deadly rancour can so far overpower and destroy the public character of a Judge, that he calls in a mob to avenge his silly quarrels with a brother judge; in what condition are private citizens who have incurred the displeasure of a magistrate so frantic. In what way can his private enemies be safe, or his guilty friends be brought to justice? Suppose the bloody deed done, and judge Brackenridge ascending the judgment seat to pass upon the life and death of the assassins. How will he demean himself when the criminals are arraigned before him and produce his own letter signed with his name as a justification of the murderer? If the mob should abstain from shedding blood, and content themselves with the destruction of property, dishonouring the persons, and the exile of his personal enemies, will the Judge venture to inflict sentence of execution, compensation, fine, imprisonment or dungeon upon those who have risen to assist in ridding him of sneering neighbours, feared rivals, or hated superiors? Hated because really superior in worth and estimation!!! Were he in a moment of returning virtue to hazard an attempt at punishment, he might fairly expect that his deluded ignorant followers would perceive his sudden change of shape, and hunt him down Actaeon like with his own bloodhounds!

In this wicked letter Judge Brackenridge affects great respect and zeal for the character of Governor M'Kean and artfully endeavours to excite his friends against Mr. Addison. This respect and zeal is of late but rapid growth. But a few weeks before the governor's election, Mr. Brackenridge publicly declared that M'Kean was a weakly silly old man; a slave to his passions, would be governed by those who flattered him most, & the state might as well be governed by any old woman. He particularly mentioned Tench Coxe as a sycophant, destitute of all moral principle, and an old story that joined the British, who was likely to become M'Kean's greatest favourite, and that this was enough to damp any man's election. These declarations were not confidential but in the open street in the presence of several gentlemen now lying in town who well remember all here stated and more; yet now this same Governor who has made him a Judge is praised by Mr. Brackenridge with a view of enlisting him & his friends through the state in the private grudge against Judge Addison, who in his anathematized charge has not said a word disrespectful of the Governor personally.

These arts of Judge Brackenridge will not serve his purpose. The real tendency of his letter will be discerned and abhorred by all parties. It presents to frightful a picture of the heart which dictated it, that for the honour of human nature, it is hoped that few will be hardly enough to defend or excuse it, and if the Legislature do their duty they will put it in the power of the Governor to dismiss Mr. Brackenridge from all further authority in the courts. The appointment was certainly made without due consideration, and there is now unequivocal evidence that it never ought to have been made. It is now demonstrated that not only the head is uninformed in point of law, but the heart is envenomed with a poison which nullifies the pure current of justice and mortal if it enter into the judiciary system of our State.

The ship Mount Vernon, Neil, of Salem, was lost on the 17th of October, on a reef of rocks, off the island of Little Davis, about 3 leagues N. and W. of La Guayra, a vessel of the rapidity of an unfavourable current. Captain Neil, and twelve hands, with the second mate, with the specie and bills, proceeded in the long boat to Vienna, where they unhappily arrived in a few hours. The chief mate and the rest of the crew were received on board a Bermudian privateer, commanded by Captain Robinson, and landed at St. Thomas, except the mate. Captain R. rendered every possible assistance in preserving the property, and rendering more comfortable the situation of these shipwrecked seamen. Five days after sailing for Salem, outward bound, the Mount Vernon picked up the wreck of a boat, with four men in her, where they had been five days. They belonged to a Philadelphia brig from Lisbon. The remainder of the crew and passengers, including a man, his wife and two children were probably lost. Schooner Nancy, Beckman, of Providence, from Passamaquoddy for Newburyport, was cast away the 10th ult. near Machias.

Having been accustomed to the sea, it is probable he has entered a vessel, on board some merchant ship. Ten Dollars will be given, for certain information, what vessel he has sailed on board, or of the above reward and reasonable expenses, for securing him, in any part of the United States, and giving immediate information thereof, to RICHARD CURSAN, Esquire, of Baltimore, JAMES SETON, Esq. of New-York, or the subscribers in Philadelphia.
