Infinuations the most base, are made in the Aurora against Mr. Crawford one of the Federal Electors of Pennfylvania .-Mr. C. proffered his services to carry the Pennsylvania return of votes for President and Vice-Prefident, to Washington City, gratis, but the Democrats, those economical gentry prefer ed giving away a few dollars of the people's money to one of their own herd and therefore HIRED one George Nauman; to gloss over this business the Jacobins profess to have feared that Mr. Crawford would have suppressed the Pennsylvania votes, although he would have forfeited one thousand dollars had he done it.

It is a remark, the justness of which is univerfally admitted, that men who have been guilty of crimes, themselves are extremely jealous of others. The crime which they have committed, fuggests to them, that another may be guilty of the same, and a recollection of their own infamous conduct, naturally excites distrust. Hence the conduct of the Democrats may be accounted for in the recent transaction at Lancaster respecting Mr. Crawford.

Various reports are circulated respecting the refult of the prefidential election in Rhode-Island-fome fay 2 votes have been thrown away. We have nothing on which we can rely, and shall, th decline for the prefent, placing this state on our lift of returns.

In the Aurora of this morning we find the following .-PRUSSIAN TREATY.

"It is worthy of remark, that contrary to the custom heretofore pursued, the President has proclaimmed the Prussian treaty without publishing the treaty itself. It should be remembered that the copy published in other papers have ALL been copied from " The Aurora." Cui Bono? fays the anglo federalist-The omission of publication by the Executive, is in itfelf a matter of Sufpicion—it argues something bidden and rotten, when an infirument intended to become a law is only published by name; but when a few facts are stated, the fecret will be known, and it becomes an important matter of confideration for the people of America."

[The above is a most shameful difregard of truth and a total abandonment of every thing which has the least pretention to honesty. claimed the Treaty and did publish the Treato itself. The copy published in this Gazette was not from the Aurora. The Treaty appeared officially in the Washington Federalist and from that fource we received it. This is only one, of many barefaced impositions proceeded on the readers of the Aurora, by its Alien Editor. 7 with the pencil, as any mechanic working at his trade for bread. About two days in each week during the winter, he dined abroad; once, and fometimes oftener, he had company at home by invitation; and during the remainder of the week he dined with his family, frequently with the addition of two or three friends. In the evenings, when not more, and then *** ** * engaged by the academy, or in some public or private affembly, or at the theatre, he was fond of collecting a few friends at home, and joining in a party at whift, which was his favourite game. The marked character of his table was, that though there was always an abundant fupply of those elegancies, which the feafon afforded, the variety of the courfes, the excellence of the dishes, or the flavour of the burgundy, made the least part of the conversation : though the appetite was gratified by the usual delicacies, and the glass imperceptibly and without folicitation, was cheerfully circulated, every thing of this kind appeared fecondary and fubordinate, and there feemed to be a general though tacit agreement among the guefts, that MIND SHOULD PREDOMINATE OVER BODY; that the honours of the turtle and the haunch, should give place to the feast of wit, and that, for a redundant flow of wine, the flow of foul should be substituted .-Of a table, thus constituted, with such a hoft and fuch guefts, who would not wish to participate?

Miscellaneous Literary Intelligence. In London, a periodical Miscellany, for he use of the juvenile of both sexes, is now publishing, and is faid to te edited by cerain characters, in the front ranks of the literati. Its objects are to furnish schools with cheap and elegant Interature, and by the stimulus of prize questions, to excite a liberal spirit of emulation and industry, in the minds of fludious youth. Walpole paper informs us, that Prefident of Dartmou h college has bestowed near twenty years of unceasing application, has been exhibited to the public by a Boston bookseller for the purpose of promoting a subscription. The work is entitled, "A Philosophical History of the advancement of nations," and, we doubt not, abounds with treasures of classic lore, interspersed with general remarks and just opervations on the cause of their rise and decline. The learned author, after having literally confomed the midnight oil of the better part of feeluded and fludious life, in chicidating he subject on which he has written, now ends his book into the world with no other he was free from vice. From the Washington Federalist.

" To a quotation from a writer who fays hat the mode in which " America treats her veteran soldiers, and those who had fac fixed their all in the revolution, was ftrongly contrasted by the liberality of Great-Britain to the American Loyalists;" the Aurora annexes this paragraph-" It might te added with great touth, that a fpirit has been manifested for some years back, even in America, to cover the authors of our independence with odium, and to discourage the compensation, persons, and the families of those who rendered conspicuous services liberty."

Of the truth of this paragraph the files of the Aurora exhibit the molt inconteflible evidence. If there was one mar imong us, who, more than any other, deferves to be confidered as the " Author of our Independence," the world will unite in faying that man was GENERAL WASHING-Ton. If virtue stalents, and public fervice could exempt their possessor from detraction. our venerable patriot would have descended into the grave as untouched by calumny a led at his facred fame, and the people of America have for years witnessed the unremitting efforts of the Aurora to cover with odium even HIM whole name is the pride and boaft of our country.

Few among the living rendered more active and effectual fervice, in the establishment of our independence than General oul HAMILTON, and on no none has more ium been caft.

No man came forward with more zeal and patriotifin than General PINCKNEY, and no man has been more vilely and more

Colonel PICKERING was a valuable and a faithful officer through our revolutionary war, and now, by a foreigner, a subject of that crown from which our independence was wrested, Colonel Pickering has been treated as the vilest and most despicable of

If in the political line any two men render d to America, flruggling for liberty, more istinguished fervice than others, those two men are JOHN ADAMS and JOHN pages. The first will make its appearance of Congress they negotiated that treaty Les in Congress they negotiated that treaty which fevered us for ever from Great-Britain; and, in spite of the influence of a Gallic party, obtained for us those boundaries, and those advantages which make us truly INDEPENDANT.

Thefe are the men on whom those who this publication will attach to it numerous during our contest for liberty were engaged patrons.

| against us, labor to heap up obliquy. With too much truth, therefore, does the Aurora fay," that a spirit has been manifested for fome years back, even in America, to cover the authors of our independence with odium."
