FRAUNCES'S TAVERN,
No. 59 South Water Street.

THE Subscriber respectfully begs leave to inform his friends and the public in general, that he has removed from No. 166 fourth 2d Street, to that large, commodious, House in Water-Street, between Chestnut and Walnut Streets, lately occupied by Mr. Isaac Haslehurst, and on which he has spared no pains or expence, to make it convenient and agreeable for the reception of gentlemen. The House being situated on the same spot where the noted Beef Steak and Punch house formerly stood, has the advantage of the best water in this city, known long since by the name of the Green Tree Water. As there are several elegant Rooms, sufficiently large to accommodate any Society or company of gentlemen, and from his well known abilities to please in the line of his business, he flatters himself with a continuance of that patronage which he has experienced since he first opened a Public House in this City, and for which he begs leave to make a public acknowledgment.

For the accommodation of Small Parties, the Large Coffee Room on the ground floor is conveniently fitted up with a number of Boxes, constructed in such a manner as to admit Gentlemen to be as private as they please—Where may be had, at any hour, Soups, Beef-Steaks, Relishes, &c. &c.

He has on hand, and will keep a constant supply of Spirituous and Malt Liquors, and of the best delicacies. Breakfasts provided—Also Dinners and Suppers cooked in the most approved manner, at a short notice, and Party of all sorts, made to order, in the House, or to send out at any hour.

The following Intelligence, was translated from Paris Papers, received by the ship Ariel, Captain Decatur, 48 days from Bourdeaux.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.
24 Prairial (12th June.)

The citizens of Grenoble write to the Convention: "Representatives of the People, speak, and immediately the interval which separates us from the rebels will be terminated, we swear not to quit our arms until the injustice of the people shall be avenged: Let the factious know, that the inhabitants of Paris are only a faction of the French people; that the national representation belongs to the entire Republic; that every Department, every city, every individual will defend, to his last breath, the security of the Liberty of your deliberation.—Applauded.

An address of the citizens of the commune of Moulins, denounced the Representative of the People Fouche, of Nantes; it accused him of having composed the popular commission of Lyon of individuals whom he knew to be wicked; of having produced before this commission, 22 unhappy citizens of Moulins, of being glutted as much in the departments of La Nievre, as in those of P'Allier, with individual and national riches.—Sent to the committee of legislation.

Vernier announced, that to-morrow, or the day after to-morrow, at latest, the commission of finances will make its report on the law concerning the sale of national goods.

A member. "When you have created assignats, you have not power to add to the evils which result from their number, those of their agiotage and of their monopoly. It was thought, by the Constituent Assembly, that assignats of 2,000 livres was more than enough for the necessities of commerce. Prefixed, no doubt, by important considerations, you have created assignats of 10,000 livres. These assignats lose two cents by the exchange. To repress this scandalous agiotage, I demand that those who shall have the sums to receive, cannot refuse assignats, if the sum to render exceed not the sum of 500 livres. Sent to the Committee of Finance.

Latouche, in the name of the committee of agriculture, made a report on the law which commands the drying up of ponds; he developed the motives of nature—the necessities of animals and of men, the prosperity of agriculture itself, which showed the necessity of at least moderating a law, which, in its generality, is much more destructive than useful. He added to these general considerations, those of particular localities; he made it appear that the situation of Poland, for example, which is covered with ponds, proves the necessity of their preservation, because, if they were suppressed, countries would fail, not only of water for animals, but for men; the ardour of the sun would dry up all the grass, and the vapours which would rise from the earth, during two-thirds of the year, would be more mortal than those which escape from the waters of ponds. In fine, said the reporter, before the revolution, particular interests caused a number of ponds to be dried up, the sites of which became meadows or arable ground. The suppression of the monastic orders has since increased the drying up of ponds; but it is not for a general law that we command the agricultural interest: it is not a general measure which can make dried ponds fruitful. The nature of ground and local situations, may alone determine those waters which are nuisances. One should not confound marshes with ponds; the first can never produce, and can only be nuisances, and must furnish all the means of destruction; and remark, that the law which shall order the reduction of large ponds to small ones, will make so many nuisances more dangerous than large sheets of water. Besides, this law, in ordering the drying up of ponds, has excepted, from necessity, those ponds which serve to maintain canals: but there are an infinite number of ponds which, without having a direct influence in supporting canals, have oftentimes a very considerable part of their communication with ponds reserved.—After many other reflections, supported by facts, the reporter presented the project of a decree, in nine articles, which restrained the dispositions of the law of the 14th Prairial, to those ponds alone acknowledged to be destructive of the health of man.

Severin, in the name of the committee of general surety, proposed to decree, that no committee known under the name of the revolutionary committee, can any more be designated by that name, but that it be designated under the name of "Committee of Inspection."

Lehardy, called it to be decreed, as an additional disposition, that all the emblems of Liberty shall be confined to three colours, so that we may know no more, said he, the red bonnet, which has reddened with blood all the Republic.

Bourfaulx. For a long time we have read on all our edifices, a device which recalls to relations the victims of tyranny, the misfortunes of their fathers, of their brothers, of their friends, and to all citizens, the wicked outrages of cruel Decemvirs. I demand that orders be given to all the agents of public works, to cause to disappear from the tops of all edifices, these words, Le Mort, [Death].

Severin wished that he should overturn all the Pedestals, which, said he, on the public places, announce not only bad taste, but the expectation of a new tyrant.

These several propositions were sent to the committee of public works.
