DEATH OF THE HON. THOMAS J. RUNK OF TEXAS.

The melancholy intelligence, conveyed by the telegraph, of the death of the Hon. Thomas J. Runk, Senator in Congress from that State, will occasion profound grief.

General Runk was a statesman of the practical, old-fashioned, plain, high school, and although a quiet, unpretending member of the Senate, it is not too far to say that he would not have been a name to be forgotten.

He belonged to the Union Democracy of the South, never allowing himself to run to extremes, but following steadily and sternly the straight line of constitutional duty, without regard to the popular notions of mere party leaders.

He was an ardent and able supporter of the Union, and in the place which he filled, it may be said that his distinguished colleague, General Sam Houston, performed the eulogistic duty of the American party, and leaving his General Runk maintaining good relations with him, and never indulging in those public animosities and recriminations, which too often dishonor Great States.

His death is a great loss to the Union, and it is a matter of regret that he should have passed through many trying ordeals together. Their respect for each other, and their mutual regard for Texas independence, partners on the battle-field; partners in the young republic; counsels and partners in the Senate of the United States, it is not possible to think of him as a man who was not a political difference.

THOMAS J. RUNK was born in South Carolina, and he died in the fifth year of his age. In his early manhood he removed to Texas, then a province of Mexico, and he was thirty years of age took a prominent part with the people of that region in all their struggles for liberty against the Mexican Government. He signed the declaration of Texas independence, on the 16th of March, 1836, and afterwards elected Secretary of War. He figured conspicuously at the battle of San Jacinto, and was afterwards elected Major-General, and was wounded, Texas was appointed major general and had the control of the operations of the army. His coolness, courage, and ability, by his personal conduct, and especially a statesman, and during all the troubles beginning with the declaration of Texas independence and ending with its annexation to the United States, he was a prominent figure in the State of Texas to the Congress of the United States, and on the 3d of March, 1857, he was re-elected for six years. His second term expiring on the 3d of March, 1857, he was again elected to the Senate for six years from that day; and he survived to the end of that term; he would have been one of that great body of eighteenth century statesmen, who were distinguished by their wisdom, their integrity, and their patriotism.
