But the other day, a good Christian had remarked to him in reference to this subject, that "the body was a minor matter;" and he, for one, felt it his duty to revive its importance. It had been the hope that the body would one day spring forth pure from the tomb; that sustained the martyr in the darkest hour of his persecutions The Apostles had laid great stress upon this doc-trine: It was true, when Paul preached it at Athens, the philosophers received it with mockery and while they were unable to disprove its truth, they used every means, as they supposed, to render it impossible by destroying the bodies of their deceased in divers ways. The presentation of this doctrine had always 10,000 '' checks, stripes and plaids 200 dozen woollen socks. 2,000 yards finanels, assorted ' 1,000 pounds cotton thread 300 pounds best Uhinese vermillion 500 '' 'A hardrean '' 1,000 '' '' o American '' 1,000 ''' cotton unsitre 2,100 finanel shirts 2,400 calco ''' 100 dean Canadian belt. rise from the dead, we did not think enough of What, then, was the doctrine of the Resurrection?

was the first of a series of questions he should ask and answer in this, and the discourses which were to follow upon the same subject-i. e., what was a true and formal statement of it? As a general ent, the text was sufficient; literally renstatement, the text was summer: interaily ron-dered, however, the word resurrection signified to stand up, as contradistinguished from the pros-trate position of the body in the tomb, and had hence been used to signify the renewal of life, or the rising up of something that had fallen down not the uprising of a different bady, for nothing could be said to rise again that had never fallen lown. This doctrine was, hence, that the actual body in which we now exist is again to be united with the soul that now inhabits st.

[This sentence may be said to be the gist and pith of Mr. Duffield's view of this momentous 100 Dison 100 41 patron 100 41 vests 200 blue satinet coats 200 41 pantaloons 44 vests mbjeot.]. In the second place, it would be interesting to inquire whether this was a doctrino of reason, or of revelation only. In the first place, we might observe that this had not been a doctrine of the Greeks; they had hold the belief in the immortality of the soul, but not in the resurrection of the body, and it had been this dread of eternal mortal annihilation that had induced among the ancients the custom of embalming the bodies of their dead. The truth was, reason alone was inadequate to the conception of this inspiring truth.

It was a lesson that no man could draw from any ions or phenomena in the natural world. It had been oft attempted, he knew, but there was a flaw in the simile. The illustration frequently employed of the revival of spring was very good and beautiful, so far as it went, but the analogy failed in one very important point, vis : That the shrubbery which decayed in autumn, and which again came forth in spring, was not dead, but had morely suspended its life functions. In order to make this analogy

[This was a fine touch, well put in by the speaker. and, we are free to admit. clinched his position so handsomely as to cause a slight tottering of our own doubts respecting the particular construction of that portion of revelation.]

Upon the exact antiquity of this revelation there were some differences of opinion. Jos had ovidently embraced this doctrine in its fulness when he declared, "I know that my Re-deemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth : And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." /. These expressions of Jon were indeed wonderfully significant. Many, more passages of Scripture were read to illustrate the existence of this hope in the minds of other sacred writers. Some critics had affirmed that Isaish was the first sacred writer to whom this proposals will be reserved. For the delivery of said roods at Boston, New York. Philadelphis, Baltimore, New Orleans, St. Louis, Memphile; or Uncinnati, but in considering the bids, the cash of the transportation of that Isaish was the first sacred writer to whom this places proposed to be delivered will ferm an element in doctrine could be traced. The remarks of Ezekiel respecting the "shaking of the dry bones in the valley," that were again brought together and olothed with firsh, was also regarded by the speaker as pointing to the general resurrection of the body at the last day. The same might also be said of the declaration of DANIEL, that "those that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to evening life, rection, a link of its perpetuity must necessarily be broken; or it might be designed merely to ake the immortality of man doubly perfect. In the heathen system, already referred to, the body was left entirely out of the question, but the jumortality which had been brought to light by Jesus Christ was complete, and provided for the material as well as the spiritual man. His was indeed a doctrine that shouted victory OVER THE
