Notice is hereby given that letters of administration upon the estate of JOHN WILLIAMS, deceased, have been granted to the undersigned. All: Browstor s. lee.

The only remaining acception refers to the disallowance by the auditor of the claim of Ross Carfoll for Servant's wages, amounting to $104, and his refusally hear testimony in support of said claim. The resport was referred back to the auditor not for the surpose of opening the account to let in new testimony; but simply to recitate the account, and amend the original report in conformity with the opinion of the sourt.

The oreditor was refused a hearing dipon new testimony on an objection made by the accountant and we do not think any good purpose could be accountied by allowing the parties to open the accounts and thus try anew, the very issues which had been determined; to adopt such a rule would but lead to endless litigation.

We have further, of the opinion that the affidavit submitted to us does not disclose such a state of facts as would warrant us in allowing this claim even were we disposed to permit the production of apon life estate of JURN WILLIAMS, deceased, have been granted to the undersigned.

The words !! did soll and cause to be sold," in the first count of the indictment, do not join two distinct offences. This form of expression has always been hold as charging the same offence. It is the common form of words used in such indictments in Pennsylvania from an entry period, and no objection, on the ground of duplicity, has ever been sustained. Com. ex. Baird, 4, 5, and K. 141; Whar. Proc. 475; 6 Pa. L. Jour., 232; Com. ex. Sylvester; also Com. ex. Eaton, 15 Pick. 273. So in indictiments for forgery, libel, &c., the same form of words is commonly used.

The second objection is that the first count in the indictiment does not state to whom the liquor wais sold. This degree of minuteness has not been required, in indictments for such general fences as keeping tippling houses, permitting unlawful games, or selling liquors without license. To require it would be to render a proscontion in such cases ounces per yard.

This has been a subject of epocial regulation at all times. The time, place, and manner of selling liquors have slways been restricted and regulated. He who sells must sell by a certain message, and that, measure must conform to an established standard. The citizen in every occupation is required to conform to catabilished rules, and such rules as are provided to secure fair and honest dealing have never been supposed to interfere with the constitutional right to possess and only by his proporty. No occupation can be carfully guarded. No one has ever thought it the constitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weigh by the standard weights. It has not been suggested that it it unconstitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weigh by the standard weights. It has not been suggested that it it unconstitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weigh by the standard weights. It has not been suggested that it it unconstitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weight by the standard weights. It has not been suggested that it it unconstitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weight by the standard weights, the his not bean suggested that it it unconstitutional to require the miller to pack his flour in barrels of a certain size, or the grocer to weight by the standard weights. It has not been suggested that it it unconstitutional to require a builder to erect his walls of a proper form and thigheness to insure sefety, not to require the miller to pack his flour to provide the con in writing. The exercise of absolute power over property is inconsistent with social order, and the Constitution intended no such thing when it provided for the security of the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property.

It would be a poor system, indeed, under which the Liegislature should be powerless to protect and defend the community from the aggression of vice and immorality, in whatever shape they may come, for loar of infringing upon the constitutional right of possessing property. Were such the meaning of the Constitution, every man would be free to use his property, as he pleases. The gambler might eat agr his tables, the owner of bouses might rout them for the basest purposes. All rules and regulations which are necessary for the well-being of society would be abolished, and with them all that, makes a good government desirable. The proposition that, by regulating the disposition of proporty so as to protect the community from its house, the constitutional right to possess it is affected, is not republic, and we see nothing in this act which interfers with the true meaning of the supreme law of the land.
