When Orangeism indulged in some foolish freaks, Mr. McGEE first laughed at the institu- tion, and then applied himself with hearty good will and undoubted ability to show its true na- ture and pretensions. He stated how wholly the Catholic moiety of the inhabitants were without direct parliamentary representation, and particularly set forth the claim of Mon- treal to have at least one Catholic out of the three members it is entitled to select. Just at this time, a change of ministry took place in Canada—there is a new cabinet, on an average, once every twelve months there— and a dissolution of the Parliament. The Li- berals of Montreal placed three candidates in the field, Messus, DORION, McGEE, and HOL- TON. The same number were placed by the Ascendancy, viz, Messers, Rose, (the Solicitor- General,) STARKES, and CARTIER. The elec- tion took place, and two of the Liberal candi- dates (Douron and McGEE) were elected, Mr. Solicitor-General Rose, a cabinet minister, being the only Ascendancy man voted in. Mr. McGEE, from the first, contended for equality of civil rights, and denounced politi- cal proscription on account of religious faith. When Orangeism indulged in some foolish freaks, Mr. McGEE first laughed at the institu- tion, and then applied himself with hearty good will and undoubted ability to show its true na- ture and pretensions. He stated how wholly the Catholic moiety of the inhabitants were without direct parliamentary representation, and particularly set forth the claim of Mon- treal to have at least one Catholic out of the three members it is entitled to select. Just at this time, a change of ministry took place in Canada—there is a new cabinet, on an average, once every twelve months there- and a dissolution of the Parliament. The Li- berals of Montreal placed three candidates in the field, Messus. Donton, McGEE, and HOL- TON. The same number were placed by the Ascendancy, viz, Messrs. Rose, (the Solicitor- General,) STARKES, and GARTIER. The elec- tion took place, and two of the Liberal candi- dates (Donton and McGEE) were elected, Mr. Solicitor-General Rose, a cabinet minister, being the only Ascendancy man voted in. As over nine thousand electors, the contest must be looked upon as a very close one. Thanks to the admirable organization of the Liberal party, no election ever passed off ix Mon- treal with more entire freedom from tu- mult and riot. On the other hand, several lives were lost at Quebea and other places. Puilding fitted with Gas Pipes, and all ki	by presenting hin, at a public dinner, (at which there was the usual "cscape of gas,") with $2,000 as a souvenir. Mr. McGEE, from the first, contended for equality of civil rights, and denounced politi- cal proscription on account of religious faith. When Orangeism indulged in some foolish freaks, Mr. McGEE first laughed at the institu- tion, and then applied himself with hearty good will and undoubted ability to show its true na- ture and pretensions. He stated how wholly the Catholic moiety of the inhabitants were without direct parliamentary representation, and particularly set forth the claim of Mon- treal to have at least one Catholic out of the three members it is entitled to select. Just at this time, a change of ministry took place in Canada—there is a new cabinet, on an average, once every twelve months there— and a dissolution of the Parliament. The Li- berals of Montreal placed three candidates in the field, Messrs. DORION, McGEE, and HOL- TON. The same number were placed by the Ascendancy, viz, Messrs. Rose, (the Solicitor- General,) STARNES, and CARTER. The elec- tion took place, and two of the Liberal candi- dates (DORION and McGEE) were elected, Mr. Solicitor-General Rose, a cabinet minister, being the only Ascendancy man voted in. As over nine thousand votes were recorded out of less than ten thousand electors, the contest must be looked upon as a very close one. Thanks to the admirable organization of the Liberal party, no election ever passed off ix Mon- treal with more entire freedom from tu- mult and riot. On the other hand, several lives were lost at Quebec and other places. Here, at last, the Catholics of Montreal have a nomber of their own, in the person of McGEE, undoubtedly a unan of ability, who has a fine career before him, if he will only pursue a straightforward course. It is not because a Catholic has succeeded—for we have no feeling whatever on that head, our own failt being different—that we think this matter important, but because it is likely to effect a decided change in the
