THIRD ANNUAL MESSAGE
OF
JAMES POLLOCK,
GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA.
PRESENTED TO THE LEGISLATURE, JAN. 6, 1858.

FOLLOWING IN OUR WART.
Step by step, England seems to be adopting improvements in English and social life from this country. A stand will be made, during the coming Session of Parliament, to engraft upon her representative system, the chief elements of our suffrage and electoral systems, as they exist in England, by those who exercise what is called "influence" over the electors. For example, though the Standing Orders of the House of Commons declare it to be a Peer's privilege to introduce a Bill for Amendment of the laws, yet, by the influence of the Government, it has become a Peer's duty to introduce a Bill for Amendment of the laws, by those who exercise what is called "influence" over the electors.

checked, nor our property long interrupted.
The Government, however, has not been able to carry out its policy, and the result has been a general depression of the country, and a general feeling of discontent among the people. The Government has

GENERAL NEWS.

A desperate affray took place at West Dunbarton, on New Year's night, at a place here called "The Green." The affray was a desperate one, and ended in the death of a young man named John McLeod. The

The face of the deceased was completely obliterated by a bullet which entered his forehead and passed through his brain.
