has exceeded the original estimates, but it has been built with the view of cheap maintenance, and there is part of one bridge only that is built of wood on the whole line.

In our opinion, and we have lately been over the ground, there is no exaggeration in this statement. The county of Lebanon, alboit not large in extent, is affluent in minerals, and has agricultural resources, which require only to be developed with remarkable success. This extension of Railroad communication must operate most favorably for the inhabitants of the Valley of Lebanon. Their thriving town, midway between Reading and Harrisburg, is likely to benefit most largely. The general trade of the place is good, but the peculiar feature of the Valley is its mine-ral wealth. Since the sailing of the last steamer, we have received a large instalment of the winter rains. The farmers are now busily engaged in getting in their crops of coreals, and there is a fair prospect of a much larger surface of ground being planted this year than the last.

this port in the United States war-steamer Fulton, Captain Almy. This was the party which ascended the Colorade into the San Juan river, and took possession of Fort Castillo. Captain Sands, in the capture of this force, went to a still further extreme than did Ccumodore Paulding in landing on Punta Arenas. He ascended the river San Juan into the interior of a foreign nation.

I will give you the facts as I have them from a high official source. Nicaragua and Costa Rica, in view of their common danger, it is presumed, came to an understanding on their differences, and sent four hundred men to San Carlos, at the entrance to the Lake, and one hundred to Castillo. Anderson, finding himself closely pressed, and likely to be more so, his stores being short, prepared the steamer Ogden, embarked his men on her, and then wrote to Captain Sands, asking his views in regard to his surrender. Captain Sands replied that he was ready to receive him and his men if they came and delivered up their arms. Subsequently, Anderson spiked his cannon, burned all the buildings about Castillo, destroyed the machinery of a steamer at the Rapids, understood to be the Virgin, and having killed all the cattle and plundered all the merchandise within resch, started down the river. Captain Sands came upon them under these circumstances, nine miles up the river, in the steamer Charles Morgan, full of armed mone, and captured them without any resistance, of course. The Ogden was placed in charge of Mr. Cetterell, United States consul at treytown, who has also charge of the Charles Morgan, until the rightful ownership in them is shown.

Capt. Sands thinks there is a little irregularity

In their room was found the following letter, directed to the finder:

We performed dying a natural death to dying with disease, especially galloping consumption, with which one of us at least would This course has been contemplated by one of us (Wightman) for two years, but now finding good company, thave concluded to go. I wish Dry Haigh and Gilliam to examine my brain, that the jury may come to a right verdict, as I am assured that these physicians will be satisfied that I was not laboring under temporary derangement.

"We wish both of us to be buried in the same grave. We have no enmity against any individual on earth, and hope no one has against us. The reason why we do this act is nobody's business but our own. We are determined to try another world, either better or worse; if worse, it is policy, at least, that we hasten in order to get used to it.

By the arrival at New Orleans of the brig Minatitlan, from Camposchy, in Yucatan, we have received a file of the Boletin to the 24th ult., but we find little to notice. Barrera, who several months ago initiated the revolution which has in a some measure made him Governor of Yucatan, has not yet succeeded in quelling the opposition to him in the district of Camposchy. From other parts of the State there is no intelligence. The Holetin says that for nearly three months the town of Camposchy has suffered a horrible siege (stite horroroso), and that they was no infamy nor airocity that the barbarous soldiers who attacked the place had not committed in the country roundabout; and all according to the orders of their leaders. It appears, however, that the siege was not so very terrible to the town itself; for, notwithstanding that its ordinary population had been doubled by the concentration within its walls of the adjacent inhabitants, there was no lack of provisions. In fact, says the Boletin, "while the besieged, thanks to God, have sufficient for their necessities, and a surplus wherewith to succor their miserable enemics." Wm. Parsons, sworn.—My place of business is in Walmt street, below Fourth; I know the defendant for about three years, probably; I saw him frequently during that time; I always judged his disposition to be very good; I last saw him before this occurred on Monday, in our warezoom; I not the describing peculiar about him, in his counternance; I had always regarded Emith as an intercising young men; appeared to be very polite and intelligent, so much so, that I took a pleasure in conversing with him; on this occasion be was very different; he flew in conversation from one thing to another; I never observed that before; his eyes appeared very rostless and wild; he would shange his hair and seem agnitated; this was in the aftermoon; I can't say how long he was there; I can't recollect exactly the time; I'l mot very good at recollecting dates, numbers, or names; his condition was about the same a few days before as it was then; either on that day, or the time before, he told me about being down in Virginia; he told me of the manners and customs of some of the people there, that I thought differed from anything I had ever heard before; and about his haring rede a great distance on horsekack; he said he had rods some 1,309 or 1,400 miles, till his horse dropped under him.

Q. What is your opinion of his mind, founded upon what you then and there saw?

A. I think he was of unbound mind; when I saw him I had not heard of any of his difficultier.

Cross-examined.—He told mo of persons living in Virginia as equatiters; said they had lived there in huts, and that they knew nothing beyond themselves; that they were perfectly happy and would not give up their possessions; I thought this very strange, yet I don't doubt the truth of it; it was his manner that impressed me.
