Mr. G. P. R. James, the English novolist, who is now British Consul in Virginia, announces a new novel—or rather Childs & Peterson, of Philadelphia, do so for him. Mr. James has been several years in this country, has written two or three different novels upon American subjects, has voluntarily pitched his tent in this country, and may claim to be an honorary, as he is an honorable, member of our Republic of Letters. His forthcoming work is a romance of the seventeenth century, entitled "Lord Montague's Page." The book, in one volume, will have a fine portrait of Mr. James, engraved on steel, with a vignette on the title-page, and will be put before the world in that elegant and tasteful manner for which his publishers are distinguished. With engravings, and handsomely bound in muslin, it will be sold at a dollar and quarter; in London, spread over three volumes, without the engravings, and in fragile beards, the price would be a guinea and a-half —equal to seven dollars and fifty-six conts. Mr. James is undoubtedly the most prossediction, besides numerous biographical, listorical, and poetical works. They came as passengers on the Pennsylvania; and, being in the ladies' cabin at the time of the explosion, were saved.

The "Imperial."—The Imperial also was crowded with the survivors. Her cabin floor was put to the same use as the Frisbee, and every officer on either boat spared no pains to render every assistance it was in his power to afford.

Passengers Rescued ny the Diana.—The Diana took about 100 of the survivors from the Imperial, and about 23 or 24 of the badly wounded. She left the wounded at Memphia, where they were taken to the hospital. Half of them, at least, could not possibly recover.

The passengers of the Diana contributed $200 towards defraying their expenses at the hospital. As many of the survivors as desired to do so came up on the Diana to Cairo.

The Orera House.—There was an opera troupe on board the Pennsylvania, on their way from New Orleans to St Leuis. Most of the male members were killed. Some three or four were put off at Memphis by the Diana, to be conveyed to the hospital. There was a large portly man in the company, whose name is not known, who was put off at Memphis. His arms and hands were burned to crisp, and, from his internal sufferings, it was evident he had inhaled the hot steam. He used to sing with Madame Devries, in this city; a bass singer, were a large moustache, and was of a very heavy build. He cannot possibly survive.

Mr. King, in conversation with the survivors who came up on the Diana, learned the following particulars:

Captain Sturgeon, of the Diana.—Too much credit cannot be given to Captain Sturgeon, of the Diana. Prompt to chey the call of humanity, he spared no time, no exertion in rondering all the assistance in his power, and put his boat back fifteen or twenty miles in order to rescue any of the survivors.

MR. Spencer's Statement.—Mr. II. Spencer, barkeeper on the late steamer Pennsylvania, safely arrived in this city last evening, and furnishes further details of the awful disaster described in our columns of yesterday.

He states that at the time of the explosion the boat was stemming the current at a slow rate of speed. Most of the passengers were still saleep, it being so early as six o'clock in the morning. The bursting steam from the boilers blow outward, at once wrecking all the central portion of the bant forward of the wheel-house. Only the bow and stern cabins and doeks romained after the explosion. There were some one hundred and fiftynine deck passengers, and a crew of forty or fifty deck hands, the most of whom, it is feared, must at once have perished. The captain was at the instant in or near the barber's room, and was unharmed. He instantly ordered the yawi to be sont to a wood-boat near by, which was towed alongside, and thus many were saved from the spreading fiames. The lady passengers had time to dress, and all those in the cabin are concluded to be safe. But an olderly lady and her daughter, who had proferred a state room near the forward cabin, must, it is thought, almost instantly have been killed. Very many were resousd in a direfully sealded or crippled condition. By active overtions, the five was kept under while the passengers were removing from the cabins to the flat boat wore happily at hand, and effected the rescue of many from the water and from the wreck. At longth the danger grew imminent that the flat boat would take fire, and the heat of the burning vessel become almost unendurable to the passengers were removing from the cabins

He did not think the American Government would differ from us on that point, and he, therefore, heped that both Governments would calmly consider the matter, and, continuing to entertain towards each other friendly feelings and sentiments of mutual respect, come to some good understanding on the subject. He wished to ask his noble friend whether any late communications on the subject had passed between her Majesty's Government and the United States, and whether anything had occurred to justify the apprehensions which had been entertained? [Hear, hear.]

The Eall or Malmesbury.—I am extremely glad that my noble friend opposite has prefaced his question with the judicious language which he has used on this subject. It is of great advantage in a moment of difficulty, when a difference arises between this and any other country, that an eminent member of the epposition should rise in his place, and express sentiments and views like those to which my noble friend has just given utterance. I am not in a postition to give the House any ascertained information has, in a great measure, been derived from experies statements made on the side of the American Government. Arrival of Col. Knne's Party-Late and Important from Camp'Scott-The Mormons Migrating From the St. Louis Democrat of the ISth.]

The party of Col. Kane, from Camp Scott, arrived, here yesterday morning on the steamer. Emigrant: The Colonel remained, but a few hours, leaving for Washington on the Ohio and Mississippi afternoon trains. The information brought by his party, of whom we may give the name of Major Howard Eagan as anthority, repeats, with additional interesting defails, that telegraphed to use from Bonorville on Monday night.

The party left Camp Scott on the 16th of May. Governor Cumming had returned there from Eatt Lake City! He stated that almost instantly upon his arrival at the Mormonoity he found the population moving off. The movement had indeed commenced, and shortly increased till the entire seconds of the northern settlements were in motion.

Maving received the capitalistion of Brigham and taker efficient means to prevent the still dreaded burning of the city, Geverner Cumming deemed it proper, if possible, peacefully to prevent the migration southward, and set off after the rains. The whole population of the porthern settlements were on the road—a few guards alone being left in the villages. The number of men, women, and children could scarcely be less than 35,000. Many were far advanced, so that it was useless to pursue them. The forward trains, were three hundred miles southward down the valley. The Governor counted seven hundred and fifty wagons laden with families. They were abundantly provisioned. Many hundreds had "hutted" by the way, t. s. had built adobe houses of the road mud. The cold and heavy rains had disappointed their expectations of the dry weather necessary to the permanency of such structures, and had washed away their walls. They were thus left exposed to the winds and rains. But there appeared no very serious suffering, though much and trying inconvenience. The attempt to precure a general abandonment of the march was, of course, futile.

There is uncertainty about the destination which the Mormon leaders now propose to themselves. They keep their own counsel in this respect with remarkable clossoness. The suggestion that they were bound for Cedar city is rather disoredited by the fact that they have driven large herds of their cattle much southward of that point. It is feared that they may coalesce with some of the Indian tribes of the south, which are already sufficiently vexisions, sind thus give much trouble to the Qrvenment. They thomselves complain bitorly of the treatment of roving parties of Indians, who, finding them defenceless on the road, count resist the temptation presented by so much booty. The Indians ridicule the Mormons, saying they are squaws, and can't fight.
