Scephen, and Darke." One of our distinguished Unitarian divines writes a capital story: "Our Husbands." But the charm of the number is the opening article—a poem in the "Nothing to User" and "Two Millions" style—called "The Fanishing School," a very clever satire on many of the fashionable female seminaries of the day. The slory is something like this: Miss Mary Degai, an heiress possessing an indeficite quantity of "sily vure and gold," with "plantations, niggers, and mines," is sent to the. "fanishing school" of "* * * — "One Medame Cancan was a perfect Parisan, Her morats infernal, her manners elysism."

The Paris (Ky.) Citizen, of the 6th instant, has the following: "On Saurday night, or Sauday, two negro men, one belonging to W. B. Rogers and the other to Joseph Wilson, of this county, ran away from their masters in company with another negro belonging to Mr. Rogers, who escaped to Canada last fail, and who, it seems, returned to take away the others. They were seen by a party of Arishmen near Fairriew, beyond the Blue Lioke, who attempted to arrest them. The negroes resisted. The Canadian was samed with a revolver, and fired six shots. Another of the negroes also had a pistol. In the conflict one white man had a thumb shot off, and one of the negroes belonging to Mr. Rogers, was killed. Mr. Wilson's man was taken, and has been brought back. The Canadian was also taken, but escaped from his captors, and was at large at last ac-
