It was published on October 16th, which, deducting three Sundays, gives thirteen bu siness days or a sale the rate of about two thousand a day. Waiting for leisure to do full justice to the subject, which leisure never comes to editorial heads or hands, we have too long neglected to notice the production of a new and good tragic play, upon an American subject, by an American citizen. The play called "Sybil," is founded upon the real story commonly called "The Kentucky Tragedy." A prose romance was written on this subject by W. G. Simms, the novelist. ter. Anxious to have her teeth attended to, It is the "o'er true tale" of a maiden deceived and ruined by a villain, and devoting herself to revenge, even to the death of her betrayer. . This play, produced at St. Louis, last September, with Miss Avonia Jones personating the heroine, met with most decided success for actress and author. Subsequently, when playing the part of Sybil, "down South," where the circumstances actually occurred, an attempt was made by some of the relatives of the real deceiver to prevent a performance which could not but awaken bitte memories. But the young tragedienne was firm, and the play wont on. The various critiques upor this drama which we have seen, speak very warmly of its fine poetic expression, deep feeling, and triking situations. Miss Avonia Jones will play it through all her winter and spring ongagements, so we have a chance of sceing it here—or else-where. The author is John Savage, associate editor of the States at Washington, since its commencement, and author of a fine, because authentic as well as well-written, contribution to Irish History, consisting of a volume called "'98 and the seventy-first year of her ago. SINGULAR STORY. - The Court Journal has the following interesting story: "A prime donne of the Royal Italian Opera who has lately risen & great, fame and acquired a first rate position on those boards, has just been claimed as his daugh-ter by one of the highest functionaries of the coun-try. The claimant is possessed of rank, wealth, and influence, and though it was, well known in the young 'lady's 'family that the great man in question was in reality her father, yet no notice of the connection was taken by him until her sno-cessful didit charter through her musical education, and he was therefore as much surprised as de-lighted at here snoess. He has just made her an of-feial offer of recognition and formal addition to the bestowal of his pame and wealth, in addition to the advantage of the magnificent position to which he would raise her. But take has surprised him still more by the manner of her refusal. 'My father refused to recognise me while I was in poverty and obscurity; now that I am celebrated and rich, I refuse to recognise him.' Let us he strangers to each other.''
