some manner, been connected with a nefarious transaction. After one or two refractory witnesses had been committed to jail for contempt, and a better understanding was arrived rior of the country were criminated, the invesdoubt that a cargo of slaves was imported into Georgia from a foreign country, that they have been conveyed into the interior, and that various parties have endeavored to conceal them. But one of the negroes, we believe, has been captured, and he is now in the lieve, has been capfured, and he is now in the possession of the authorities of the United States.

It is but just to the Southern journals to say that a number of them have bitterly protested against this daring revival of an odious traffic; but there are others which glory in defending it. The idea is advanced that the laws of the United States punishing those ongaged in the slave trade are entitely too severe, and that they should not be, and cannot be, enforced. It is further contended that they choiced the slave trade are entitlely too severe, and that they should not be, and cannot be, enforced. It is further contended that those laws are unconstitutional; that the National Government has no authority or right to prevent the slave trade; and it was upon this ground, we believe, that Grand Jury this ground, we believe, that the Grand Jury of South Carolina recently refused to find an indictment against the crew of the slaver Echo. It will thus be seen that the question whether the African slave trade shall be pub-licly, openly, and successfully revived upon our own shores, is becoming one of real, prac-tical importance. In fact, it has been asserted that the importation of the Wanderer was made for the express purpose of testing the power of the United States to suppress that traffic, and we had already seen, in the case of by which the crew of a slave vessel sailing under the flag of the United States could, in some sections of the country, be rescued from

They think the lives of the negroes necessarily sacrificed in it totally unworthy of considerarate the mental, moral, or physical characteristics of the negro, but the laws of our country hue as the fairest of the Caucasian race. Every State of the Union, we believe, recognises that crime which wilfully and muliciously deprives a hegro of life, to be murder. The The fact that the first partial first partial first partial field from the first partial first partial field from the partial field from deprives a negro of life, to be murder. The case of the Echo, where so much sympathy was excited by the fear that the anti-stave trade laws of the United States would inflict too severe a punishment upon the crow, if they were convicted, and where the learned Grand Jury discovered them to be unconstitutional, affords one of the most striking instances of the horrors of the slave trade known in history.
