Popular Superstitions. The superstitions of early ages have ever been of the biceent time—many of mylch have been those of the bicent time of the bicent those of the bicent those of the bicent those of the bicent through the bicent time. handed down from remete antiquity-afford no less a display of imagination and refinement. The holy and delicate feeling which breather through the beauties of Eastern allegory, founded on the popular, superstitions of that region, presents some of the purest specimens of poetry and while one listens to tales of the fairy spirits, the Perii and Genii of the East, and views the beauty of that land, peopled with imagination's lovellest forms, truly it seems that fancy belongs exclusively to the clime, liest forms, truly it seems that rancy belongs exclusively to the clime,

"where the christ are on as the roses they wins. And all save the spiritor man is divine."

The fit is not smid this juxuriance of Nature alone that poetic beauty and rich imagination are to be met with. No; these twin sisters roam through wider fields; and if they are to be found amid the relegance of the East, reposing by diamond bright fourtains, and fanned by the sweet scented breezes of the Tropics, so, also ide they divid among the cold and dreamy regions of the North, where Nature, loss, soft, is still more majestic, and where the sun, instead of sparkling on the cool waters and waving forests of its own bright land; flashes more brilliantly on never-fading snows and towering ice-bergs, disclosing veins of gens far outvying. Goldenda's brightest diamonds: The Scandinavian and laplander, buried in their low; mosy huts, crowd, esgerly around the flickering lamp, and listen with interest to the propher dispenser of the tales and super-sitions of their country, while their bosoms are warmed at the recital, and their souls are filled with as etherial a glow as is the Persian's, when, reposing amid green summer arbors, he, listens to the bright prophecies of the Paradise that awaits him, or bends an eager car to the recital of the fairy tales which his langua, has so beautifully preserved. The superstitions of a people form no in considerable portion of its history. The mind of man naturally tends to the wonderful mind of man naturally tends to the wonderful and maryellous; and few; very few; are they who, also some period of their, existence, have not been under the influence of superstitious feelings. This influence is powerfully oxerted, but in different degrees in different states of society. The savage and untatored child of Nature is the meet susceptible; and as we advance through the different degrees of civilization and refinement; we find it less exercised; till; among the most enlightened of the world, the influence of superstitions belief is entirely discounced. or civilization and remnement, we find it less exercised; till; among the most enlightened of the world, the influence of superstitions belief is entirely discovered.

But there is one class of mon who, porhaps, above all others; may be designated as influenced by feelings of this, mature, The sailor, "proud mirseling of the storm," whose nature, under ordinary circumstances, knows no fear, is, made the slaws at times of superstitions apprehensions. Throwing away at once his boldness and levily, he cowers like a course which, in general parlance, is said to bring "bad, inck."

A friend whe; some years ago, was attached to a sloop of war, gives the following illustration of the effects of such feelings upon this class of mem. We quote his own words:

"We were, on our bomeward voyago, and during the criles had indeed seen hard times. Stormy and tempestuous weather had kept us for a long time at sea, and the grim, ylasged destroyer had made fatal havo, among the cryoned under the tropics was insufferable. The sun's rays boat scorchingly upon us, as we lay, for many days floating quietly on the services we had to a proper that individual their coyes on the lookout for land, cre'night were still in death.

Many; at that time, who, in apparent health and vigor, saw the rising sun, and at. daylight; strained their eyes on the lookout for land, cre night were still in death, and their eyes closed, never, again to open till the period when the sea shall give up its dead. Nover shall I forget the downcast look, the fearful apprehension of the men, when, in the last giaggs, of sickness, they looked towards the dreary sture, and viewed, in the land of their fancy's superattions, the spirits, which peopled that dim region. Never was a better opportunity afforded fer noticing the atter submissiveness and boly dread with which they awaited the time, when, they should stand in the presence of their, and men who, but a few short hours before, passed to shake, their amperations faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed or the shake, their amperations faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed or the shake, their superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed or the state, their superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed the states, their superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed the states, their superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed the states, their superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed the states that superstitious faith; and men who, but a few short hours before, passed the strength of the states of "Livas. some time after this period in our cruise, that a circumstance occurred which at tracted my attention at the moment, and which, on account of the beautiful idea connected with the motion with the beautiful idea connected with the make it required.

He was a fine fellow, a captain of the fore-top, and universally beloved. He met his death with composure, and, being fold that his end was nigh, only wished his life to be prolonged till he could once more see his country. The boon could not be granted, and his lips were scaled in death a few minutes before land was described. We buried him, and many a watery eye could be seen among the sad group collected to pay their last tibute to the dead many, a long-sealed fountain at that time gushed forth anew.

"The wind whisted through the figging, and scarcely was his body lainched, when a stom arising again blew us to sea. Two days after wards, when the fury of the tempost had subsided, and we were again upon our course, a small bird, of the species commonly, known as "Mother Ogrey's chickens." was noticed flying near use new bearing himself high aloft, and again playing among the restless waves. From our own experience, as well as from the test mony of others, whose intelligence and integrity are stogether unquestionable, we have no doubt of its effect or in cases of Indiplent Diseases of the Lungs and Browind Passages, Dyspepsia, Liver Compilaint, Dropsy Neuralgia, &c. Indeed, its effects would be incredible; but from the high character of those who have witnessed them, and have volunteered, their testimony, we do ours, to its restorative power.

CERTIFICATE OF DR. HAYES. It is well known that the medicinal effects of Protonide of Iron is lost by even a very brief exposure to air, and that to maintain a solution of Protoxide of Iron, without further exidation, has been deemed, impossible. In the Peruvian Syrup, this desirable point is attained by combination in a way-before unknown, and this solution may replace all the proto carbonasies, ettrates, and tartrates of the Materia Medica.

THE LIVER INVIGORATOR

THE LIVER INVIGORATOR, it may be a support of the best Purgative and Liver Medicines now before the public, that acts as a Catharite, easier, milder, and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Catharite, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to elect its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, then on the stomach ing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most Catharites. It strengthens the price of most Catharites. It strengthens the price of most catharites, and when it well, the powers of the human body; and when it well, the powers of the human body; and when it well, the powers of the proformance of its functions; when the stomach at fault, and the whole system suffers in constitutions; when the stomach at fault, and the whole system suffers in constitutions; when the stomach at fault to ounter the constitutions of the proprietors have been an expectation of the proprietors have been an expectation.
