PRESEVERANCE.—One of the great syils in PRHEEVERANDS.—One of the great ovils in this country is a certain restless, roying disposition, which leads young then to change their pursuits in life at order at they need with any illistancess rimions: business, or are allured by the prospect of greater gains in another. Hence we frequently hear of those who have passed through all the learned professions oven at mile an early age—who have been physicians without patients; lawyers without clients, and preschers without ongregations. In the inchmaical arts, too, we see the oobbief, the carpener, the printer, and the In the mechanical arts, too, we uses the cob-blet, the carpenter the printer, and the painter, and many other trades, all followed in succession by the same individual, and all in turn abandoned to take up with some other. Then, as for the short greener and merchants, what is more common than to see the grocer, of to day frommeneing the dry goods business to morrow; and the broker and money changer, launching, our into heavy speculations on the seasy or in featestate, or, in some other way, wholly disconnected, with his accustomed business. This versatility of our countrymen has been remarked by foreigners, and we have been highly compliments, thereupon. They have been highly compliments, thereupon. They have been highly compliments, thereupon. They have overlooked, however, the great evil, which arises from this course—namely; that while our artists, and our professional and business men thus engage in so many different avocations, a great degree of a till is seldom attained in either; and the individuals are thus, in the end, as well as the public great angreens. For ourselves, we incline to advocate the system of apprenticeship, by which no person is permitted to pursue a trade, or practise a profession, attains artists, our studying his profession, for a given number of years. A man who has thus spent a period of his life must acquire a degree of a till which is a capital to the sike of a more flattering employment. This versatility of our countrymen has been ployment.
The control with this subject we may remark, that Michael Angelo, full of the great and sublime ideas of his art, lived much alone and never suffered a day to pass without handling his chies! of his pencil! When some porsons representations with living so melancholy indisalitary sufficients answered: (Art is a jestous thing—it requires the whole and entire man.) Ones Time Fashions.—Watson's Annals of Philadelphia inform us that the good people of our city, in former times, had a mode of appressing their opinion of certain fashions in Aress, which was altogether more effectual, than the present one of attacking it in the newspapers. Compare the ineffectual efforts of the best with of our day with the effectual opes of the more practical goodings. efforts of the best wits of our day with the officerus ones of the more practical gonituses of the olden time with the samellat) were consistently fine, practical satirists on jane coni-for-inthers (says the sainalist) were occasionally fine, practical satirists on information in dress. They lost no time in paraphrastic yerblage which might or might not officitle simi, but with most effective appeal to the populace, they quickly carried their point by making it the scoff and derision of the town. On one occasion, when the ladies were going astray after a passion for long reducially, for which their lands had no affection; they succeeded to rain their reputation by concerting with the executioners to have a female felor burst in a closk of the best ton! female felon hung in a cloak of the best ion! On another occasion in the time of the Revo-Intion, when the tower head gears of the ladies were ascending Babel like to the skies. male figure; in ledy, attire, decorated with the adious, tower gear, and preceded by a drum!. At an earlier period one of the intended dresses, called a "trollopee," became a subject of offence. The satirists who guarded and framed the supplicary code of the town; procured the wife of Daniel Pettitesu, the hangman, to be arrayed in the full dress trollopes; acc, and to parade the fown with rade music! Nothing could stand the deristent of the populaces. Delicacy and modesty shrank from the gazo and sneers of the multitude; and, the trollopes; like the others, was abundoned."

CHERTRIIT HILL RAULBOAD CHESTNUT GROVE WHISKEY.—A devisite to lessen the consumption of impure spirits, knowing their injurious effects upon the constitution, has induced the offering to the public of an article which the analysation of Professor Chilton, Analytical Chemist, of Naw York, and Mesers. Booth, Garrett, & Cames, of Philadelphia, proves, beyond all question, to be the most pure and consequently least injurious spirits ever offered the American public.

OERTIFICATE OF DR. JAS. R. CHILTON.

I have analysed a sample of Chestnut-Grove Whiskey, received from Mr. CHARLES WHARTON, Js., of Philadelphia, and having carefully ested it, I am pleased to state that it is entirely free from poisonons or deletarious substances. It is an unusually pure and then flavored quality of Whiskey.

PRILADELPHIA, Sept. 9, 1858.

DEAR SIR: We have carefully tested the sample of Chestnut-Grove Whiskey which you sent us, and first it contains near of the poisonous substance known as Funic Uli, which is the characteristic and injurious ingredient of the Whiskeys in general use.

Very respecifully,
