Correspondence of The Press. Harrisburg, March 12, 1859. In response to an invitation from the member and officers of the Legislature, and other promi nent public men, to deliver an address at Harris ourg, Judge Wilkins, venerated alike for his wisdom, and tried devotion to State and nation, has written a lotter to Gen. W. H. Miller as the repreientative of those rending the request, in which he declines coming on account of feeble health. His letter, eloquent in the mention of touching reminiscences and rich in the thoughts nd sentiments of a declining patrict, is truly a holos spirite. It reflects the image of its author n the splendor of a statesman who towers above he shades of petty partisanship and ranges in the purer, nobler elements of mental and social strength. The impossibility of his appearing among us at this time is universally regretted. Although he is hivered with age, and seems "ready for the harvest," a wish pervades society that his life, with its time defying lustre, may be continued.

A FRIGHTFUL SORNE.—A frightful scone might have been witnessed, yesterday morning, on the roof of a three-story house situated on Water street, between Menroe and Quincy. A young man was standing upon the comb of the roof repairing a chimney, when, the shingles being wet and slippery, he lost his foothold and slid slowly down, feet foremost, towards the eaves. The two or three persons who witnessed the accident turned away sick with terror. Although the man made every effort to get a hold, which the fear of certain death would naturally prompt, he moved slowly down, and was only checked from falling to the pavenent below by a water-spont; against which his feet came in centect. But for this frail obstruction he must have been dashed into a shapeless mass. Without uttering a dry for help the young man kloked off his shoes and proceeded to ascend, which he succeeded in doing, and went to work at his chimney again, apparently taking little account of an accident which had made the eve witnesses heart-slok and dumb with terror.—

Sornowful.—The Gettysburg (Pa.) Compiler gives an account of the less of a little boy, four years of age, a son of Mrs. Oyler, of Cumberland county. He strayed from home, and the whole neighborhood started out on the search, fouring the surrounding mountain through the day, and displaying lighted torohes after night. After two days and nights, the little fellow was discovered nearly nine miles from his home. The Compiler then adds: "The little dog, which had been the child's besom, with his head reolining on his cold and lifeless form. This faithful dog had tramped quite a path around the lifeliess body of the sleeping innocent, thus betraying the affection which it had for the youth, and in its fond carsess had licked back the hair upon the child's forehead. The corpse was conveyed home to its weeping mother, who, under the peculiarly sfilicting circumstancer, was almost frante with griot."

THE CINCINNATI SUICIDE.-Emanuel Ge THE CINCINNATI SUICIDE.—Emanuel Gerard after the saicide of his wife, became frantic with grief, and acted in such a manner that the coroner's jury could not proceed with the investigation, and it became necessary to lock him up. Among other things, Emanuel, wished to cut his wife up, pack her away, and send her to Europe, or to burn the body, and transmit the sches across the ocean. He was a perfect specimen of a madman. Gerard was placed in olarge of one of his friends, test he might do violence to himself or others.—Convenient Enquirer. Some Pararens in St. Louis, Mo., being
