

Advertisements for various goods and services including 'Fancy Dry Goods', 'Carpetings', 'Hats, Caps, Furs', and 'Stationery'. Includes names like 'A. W. Little & Co.', 'W. J. Piggott', and 'J. H. Durbin & Co.'.

PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1859.

The Press.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE. Letter from Italy. (Correspondence of The Press.)

My Dear Sir: The route between Nice and Genoa, known as the Corniche, is very justly celebrated for the great engineering difficulties which have overcome its construction. It was completed by the French in 1810, and carried under the auspices of Napoleon, from the fact that it was a military operation.

But a few more closing words. A friend writes me that he has been in the neighborhood of the Corniche, and that he has seen the workmen engaged in the construction of the new line, and that he has seen the workmen engaged in the construction of the new line, and that he has seen the workmen engaged in the construction of the new line.

Letter from the Secretary of the American Society for the Abolition of Slavery. (From the Liberator.)

Brother, I have had little time to consider the important subject you refer to in your issue of the 21st. I have had little time to consider the important subject you refer to in your issue of the 21st. I have had little time to consider the important subject you refer to in your issue of the 21st.

It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public. It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public.

It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public. It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public.

It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public. It is not my intention to suppose that I can do more than to state the facts of the case, and to leave the rest to the judgment of the public.

TRIAL OF DANIEL E. SICKLES.

Monday's Proceedings. Speech of Mr. Brady for the Defence. VERBATIM REPORT BY TELEGRAPH.

Washington, April 25. The court room was crowded this morning, to the utmost capacity, for a quarter of an hour before Judge Andrew took the seat, and a large number of gentlemen were present.

At Mr. Sickles' entrance and moved toward the dock he was warmly greeted by many of his personal friends. He was accompanied by his wife, and a number of other persons.

Mr. Brady proceeded to argue the instructions of the court, and to state the facts of the case. He argued that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the charge against Mr. Sickles.

Mr. Sickles' counsel then presented a number of objections to the evidence, and to the instructions of the court. They were all sustained by the court.

Mr. Sickles then addressed the jury, and stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him. He stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him.

Mr. Sickles then addressed the jury, and stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him. He stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him.

Mr. Sickles then addressed the jury, and stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him. He stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him.

Mr. Sickles then addressed the jury, and stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him. He stated that he was innocent of the crime charged against him.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondents for 'The Press' must send their communications to the office of the paper, and must give their names and addresses. They must also give the date of the communication.