Letter from "Touchstone."
spondence of The Press. 1
WASHINGTON, May 9, 1859.

Mr. George Taylor, of Brooklyn, New York, ha been disappointed. He has not been appointed Commissioner of Patents; nor will be ge abroad, I imagine, as he has caused to be reported, over his disgust at not succeeding to the Patent Office. He probably worked over much for the place, and left nothing to be done in the shape of llegiance to the President for the future. This was most unwise, and I was especially struck with the fulsomeness and uselessness of Mr. George Taylor's assiduity in adulation on more than one coossion. He carried it into places where politics had no business. He intruded it unceremoniously I remember the disgust of his hearers in my imme ate neighborhood at the Art Festival here, whe taking advantage of a polite invitation to speak he delivered a stump oration—of course, "utterly unprepared," as he had the foolbardiness to say on Mr. Buchanan and his love for art, and pro tection of its interests.

It was all no go Besides Mr. Taylor's crazy anxiety for the office, another New Yorker was recommended for the Indian Office; so, as Mr. Bucha-nan could not give both places to the Empire State, r one to both of the representatives thereof, he did not give one to either; but made his choice from almost the extremes of the republic, giving the Indian Office to Judge Greenwood, of Arkansas, and the Patent Office to Mr. Bishep, of Con-As to Mr. Taylor's going abroad, save at his own expense, I doubt it exceedingly. If rumor be true, some of the causes, with those mentioned above, which militated against his "claims" for the Commissionership of Patents will also prevent the President from giving him any other official posiion. That is, they ought.

Hatch, is in the city, and is, secording to rumor, offered some official position. What it is has not transpired. On all sides, it would seem that poor George Taylor is in danger of being thoroughly abiquattaleted.

Hon. W. B. Bishop is a young man, a lawyor, a civil engineer, and politician, qualifications, it would seem, peculiarly well suited to a proper discharge of his new duties. He had the reputation, during the Lecompton battle, of sympathising very much with Donglas and the National Democracy, but he certainly made a speech in the House of Representatives on the opposite side, and nearly the only one on the Administration desks which brought down the galleries, which it did. It attracted considerable attention here, as well as in Connecticut, and no doubt had considerable influence in beating the Democracy of the State, and landing it to the Republicans.

Mr. Bishop is undoubtedly a man of talent, and I am rather astonished that the Constitution does not accompany the official announcement of his appointment with any notice. Is it because

By the bye, the Constitution has not yet done colling the Democracy of Pennsylvania a faction. The commanders of the Brierch army have been announced Pellissier is commander in chief of the army of observation.

The very magnanimity shown by the Convention at Altona is made the subject of a sneer. The Press is regarded as the organ of a faction, and you (John W. Forney) as the arch-factionist. This is nothing new; hut the stupidity of such hoyish blundering on the part of "the organ" was brought to my mind by referring to a speech made by Mr Buchanan in 1826. made by Mr Buchanan in 1828. It was on the Panama mission, after the independence of the South American republics, and was alluded to in correction of a paragraph in the Intelligencer there anent a few days ago. The Constitution skipped over a few lines, which are peculiarly applicable to its official treatment of the Democratic opposition. Mr. Buchanan, in Congress, April 11, there said, "Do gentlemen expect to carry every the said in the House which may be proposed by the Executive, merely by attempting to brand the opposition with the name of faction? I trust that such is not their intention. I feel certain if it be, I has will be disappointed."

Insert country for the word "House," and the question is quite as applicable now as when Mr. Israell. Lord John Russell, in addressing a meeting of electors in Loudon, made special reference to the Italian question is quite as applicable now as when Mr. Buchanan put it—indeed much more so. Nor is the anticipated result less true for being said by Mr. Buchanan nearly a quarter of a century back.
