Sewing Machines.

WEED'S PATENT
SEWING MACHINES
Have passed the ordeal of all other machines, and have proved themselves the best. They sew a Double, making the Lock Stitch on both sides of the cloth alike, which cannot be unravelled or pulled out.
They are not liable to get out of order, skill, and all warranted to work well on all kinds of goods, from the Lightest Fabric to Heavy Leather. In point of Simplicity, we would say that they are "as near perfection" as any Machine can be made. They are easily learned by females, and fascinate with ease from all. It is as pleasant as to witness it almost. Impossible to get out of order, or to get wrong. The Stitching is, indeed it is so simple as to astonish those who would a piece of machinery will sew.
Below, we give a description of the different styles of Machines:
No. 1—Is very convenient for use in families, and for all ordinary sewing. It will do every kind of work done by hand very well, and for plain sewing it is unsurpassed, and may be used by the most delicate female without fatigue. It will sew from the finest Muslin to Leather, and is recommended for its simplicity, durability, and its possessing the least machinery of any machine sold. Price $50.
No. 2—This is a medium size for the different purposes for which it is designed, being very popular with the public, and we confidently assert that it is fully as good as the best of any other machine. It will do every kind of work done by hand, and is recommended as being a STRONG AND HEAVY MACHINE. It is accompanied by us as entirely responsible for it in every particular. It has a shuttle and bobbin, and carries a large supply of thread on the bobbin. It is very simple in its construction, and not liable to get out of order. It is very popular with those who require a machine for heavy work, such as making Boots, Shoes, Harness, Saddles, Carpets, &c. It will work well on all kinds of goods, from the finest to the coarsest, and is warranted to do so. Price $75.

LA PERLE AND RUBIS CHAMPAGNES.
The undersigned have been appointed sole agents for the United States and Canada, for the sale of the Champagne Wines of Messrs. JACQUES GORBG & CO., at Chalons-sur-Marne, France. We present their wines to the public under two brands, namely:
LA PERLE AND RUBIS.
The "PERLE" Wine is of exquisite flavor and fruity taste, and is guaranteed to compare favorably with any wine in the American market.
The "RUBIS" is a fine Cabinet Champagne, of a beautiful Ruby color, which is natural to the wine. This wine is undoubtedly one of the finest Cabinet Champagnes produced in France, and is made from grapes of the choicest selection.
From its long experience, extensive possessions, and large means of the well known house of JACQUES GORBG & CO., and their determination to furnish wines which shall meet with the approval of consumers, we feel persuaded that a trial will fully establish all we claim for the excellence of these wines.
CRAMER, ABEGG, & McCLOSKEY,
No. 10 BROAD STREET, NEW YORK.
The above Wines may be had at the following places in Philadelphia:

Our Jar having been tested to the satisfaction of thousands of families, we confidently present it to the public, where, elegance in style is united with economy in price.
We would call especial attention to the superiority of our articles over those using paste, paraffine, or gum in place of cement, for the gutta percha, &c., imparts a strong and injurious flavor to the fruit, besides being otherwise defective.
P. & B. also manufacture superior mineral water and porter bottles, and all kinds of green glass hollow-ware. je3-1y

A STROLL THROUGH THE ACADEMY OF ARTS

The landscapes here, as in every other exhibition in America, as a general thing, carry off the honors. We have a school of landscape, because we cannot well imitate in that department. Our climate is so different, producing such different outlines on our hills, and such various hues in the heavens and on the earth, that our landscape painters must perforce pay attention to these facts if they mean to succeed at all. It will not do to disgrace the style of a Ruysdael—painting conventional views of Dutch mills and water dams, with overhanging trees—on the canvas devoted to grand expansive breadths of light and shade, and towering forest and mountain scenery such as the artist here has constantly before him. Neither will it do to apply to such work the manner which captivates, while conveying a charming little bit of English road or river scenery. I think Humboldt, in one of his volumes of the "Cosmos," speaks of the adaptability of each country's art, to the country's characteristics. This is more especially true of the landscape branch, for it must be, to a relief of that with which every one is acquainted. We are not so bound in figure painting, save in the portrait line, for the age and character of the figure is to be depicted according to the theme of which he or she is the hero or heroine.
The figure department of the present exhibition is vile—there are over one hundred and twenty-five figure pieces, nearly about seventy-five of which are portraits; out of this number there are not twenty than three or four worth hanging, and these are Mr. E. H. May's "Portrait of a Lady," (No. 170); A. Gentleman, (104), by A. Lawrie, Jr., Mr. P. Weber's Lady, (92), and, probably, the portrait of Edward Everett. As for all the rest, they are perfectly disgraceful. They have nothing to recommend them; are as bad, in color, generally, as in drawing. These exhibitions speak, I am forced to admit, a rather low idea of the ends of art. Vanity seems to be in the ascendant, but it overreaches itself, and in the present instance is only productive of laughter and ridicule.
As for the fifty pieces of figure compositions, I have noticed the best in the brief allusion to them in my stroll yesterday, with one exception, to which I will refer. Mr. May's "Lady Jane Grey Reading the Scriptures to Lord Guilford Dudley," (No. 6) is a fair picture, but is not up to the promise this artist gave a few years back. Dudley's head is good. The lover—the impassioned and wrapt lover—is visible in every lineament. His soul is stealing itself out of him and pouring its whole, abstracted intensity into the form of the reading maiden. His head is the point of the picture.
"Mary washing the feet of Christ," (No. 147,) by Wm. Ritty, R. A., is a sketch. Mary is bent forward over the feet of the Saviour, her hair falling so as to cover her face, and presenting a view of her shoulders and back foreshortened. The flesh tint is femininely solid and natural.
Mr. Schussele's "Hubert and Prince Arthur," (No. 159,) and the "Executor," (No. 235,) of Mr. Russell, illustrating the lines:

"There in the twilight cold and gray, Lifeless and beautiful he lay."

although being commendably painted, are of no use whatever. They are too painful, especially the last named, to be hung up in a gallery. Some of the cabinet pictures are meritorious, both for drawing and finish—such as the "Garden of Love," (No. 58,) by Echout; the "Happy Family," (No. 71,) by Earle; the "Wounded Bear Hunter," (No. 75,) by Tide Man, and others. These have some fine points, and are worth careful study. G. G. Lumdain's "Lazy-bones" (No. 214) must not be forgotten; nor W. S. Blythe's "Accommodations," (No. 216,) which is a capital commentary on hoop-skirts, and the capacity of the omnibus.
Ophthah's Daughter (No. 189), by T. Buchanan Read, the poet, is a very remarkable work. It is full of ambitious and ambiguous. If the name given in the catalogue I do not think it possible to have guessed at the subject for me. From having any of the tragic influence of the dénouement story, it positively seems rather to partake of the humorous. Then the style is of that flash-vest pattern which is curiously but suggestively denominated loud. It hurts the eye, without appealing in the slightest degree to the feelings. In fact, the indignant and sorrowful sensations suggested by the name of the picture are thoroughly outraged by the melo-dramatic semi-comical manner of the design.
It is really pitiable that men of fine taste and cultivated intellect, having the experience which many years ought to give, and the resources which foreign travel and residence abroad is supposed to confer, should submit to the humiliations such a picture as this must invite. The character of the artist, the subject, and public taste demand public opinion. To allow such pictures to pass unnoticed is an injury to the artist, an injury to art, and an injustice to one's self, bearing all of which in mind I must speak plainly. Mr. Read's picture is neither Art nor Nature, but an unwarrantable outrage on both, and the received principles of anatomy. Ophthah and the man holding him are either contortionists, acrobats, or wrestlers. They seem to be near the climax of their struggle, and notwithstanding Ophthah's more muscular frame, the chances are that he will come first to the ground. His friend or rival has, to use the slang phrase, "got the crook on him." Meanwhile, the daughter, like a girl in a ballet, or those dancers in the East who vary the after-dinner amusements of Indian rulers, keeps time with twinkling feet and jingling cymbal to the feats of the Athletes. It was a duty to look at this picture, but a great pleasure to get away from it, and seek in Mr. Read's "Spirit of the Waterfall" (No. 321,) "surcease of sorrow" for the artist's ill-usage of Scripture history.
This picture is more in Mr. Read's vein; it is of the imaginative school and is an illustration to these lines from the artist's poem of "Valley Camp":

"Her form was small, her figure light,
As is some fabled fountain's sprite,
The aerial scarf about her head
Like gossamer, seemed to woo the wind;
A shape so slight, she seemed to be
That vision which poets only see,
The spirit of that Iris small
Poised on the mist of a water-fall."

The lines italicised convey an idea of the subject. It is a difficult matter to embody in color that which is disembodied in the mind's eye. It is always a work of danger to attempt the supernatural in color, for we have to rely so much on human action to convey even superhuman ideas, that, of course, the more unearthly the greater difficulty in sufficiently etherealising the characters so as to convey an idea of immateriality by the use of material flesh and blood. Such things can be better imagined than represented, and belong legitimately to poetry and not to painting. Mr. Read's success is a happy one. The design is graceful, though the want of anatomical precision—if such a thing be requisite when the human form is taken from the earth—mars the effect when we regard it critically. The ensemble is striking and effective, and the coloring judicious, partaking of that green and grey water mist character suggested by the theme.
"Souvenir of Italy," (No. 355,) by W. L. Sontag, has all the character but not the characteristics of its author, who is so justly reputed as a fine landscape painter. The picture is evidently a composition made up of "bits" from Mr. Sontag's sketch-book, or reminiscences from memory, maybap, of Italian scenery. The view is of great scope, embracing an extensive tract of country, not, however, remarkable for anything save those indefinite details which Sontag knows how well to put in with his pencil, and which, when close to, we cannot discern, but, when at the proper focus strike us so naturally. When you examine this picture piecemeal you are satisfied—yet altogether it is not satisfactory—at least to me it is not. There is a want of force and expression—a lack of interest over the whole which must arise more from the fault of the artist than the looker
