natural and tranquil, nor were any indications of violent death discornible. The coroner was called whose investigation thowed that the babe had died of congestion and dropay of the heart. How singular an incident! Here, evidently, was no infanticide. Evidently, the little one was loved, ohe rished, and toarrilly resigned to death. The daintity wrought shrough the set pillow, and to taste ful softmatigitates affection, means and loladio But this strongs birtist! The mother undoubtedly would have placed the relie of her tronsure where she could have planted flowers upon its grave. But she dated not.
